LOS ANGELES (JUNE 13) UPI - Israel has become the biggest supplier of advanced military technology to China since the United States banned military sales in the wake of the Chinese crackdown on the democracy movement, and the Bush administration is concerned, a published report said Wednesday.

Quoting unidentified administration sources, the Los Angeles Times reported that U.S. officials have told Israel they strongly oppose the military cooperation because it undercuts the intended effect of the U.S. sanctions.

''This is over our objections,'' a senior administration official told the newspaper. ''I'd rather not get into the tit-for-tat on this, but they know our views.''

U.S. officials insisted that Israel is not operating as a proxy for the United States in the military sales, as it did when it supplied arms to Iran during the Iran-Contra arms-for-hostages affair.

Israel, which does not have formal diplomatic relations with China, recently opened an office of the Israeli Academy of Sciences in Beijing.

''They have opened this institute in Beijing which is facilitating a whole range of military-to-military cooperation between Israel and China,'' a senior U.S. official said.

The newspaper said intelligence experts in the West and Asia believe Israel in recent years has provided China with some of the advanced technology needed to modernize China's jet planes and missiles - such as electronics and guidance systems.

Another administration official said Israeli cooperation with China not only provides cash for its arms industry, but enables Israel to obtain information about missile programs in China, a leading supplier of weapons to several of Israel's Middle East adversaries.

The official speculated the cooperation may be one factor that has restrained China from exporting its newly developed M-9 short-range missiles to such countries as Iraq and Syria.

The official said China sees Israel as a ''back door to U.S. technology that the United States won't sell them.''

Before the United States gives advanced military hardware or technology to Israel, the U.S. government insists on assurances that Israel will not pass the materiel or technology on to a third party.

''Obviously, the Israelis have a lot of things that come from us,'' said a Defense Department official. ''It's hard to tell which of the stuff they are giving China is (Israel's) and what comes from us.''

PORTLAND, OR (JUNE 13) UPI - The vote was 12,642 to three, but the NBA Finals are not a democracy.

They are ruled by officials who said Danny Young was a fraction of a second late releasing a 35-foot shot that swished through the basket and would have given the Blazers the 3 points they needed to send Game 4 of the finals into overtime.

The hometown crowd exploded, believing the Blazers had pulled off another last-second save. But the officials scratched their heads and after a conference, ruled the basket didn't count and the Detroit Pistons had won the game 112-109.

''The 3-point shot was good,'' Clyde Drexler said later. ''I was looking at it all the time. I say it was good.''

''One of the officials called it good. I was watching Danny and also the clock,'' Drexler said.

Coach Rick Adelman challenged the officials along with every Blazer fan in Memorial Coliseum, but the officials won and the televised replay backed them up.

Later Adelman said, ''I can't tell you if it was good or not. I think they have to make that call right away. It was disappointing the way they took so much time to make it (the call).''

Pistons Coach Chuck Daly didn't like the delay in the call either, but he liked the outcome.

''It was a tough game for the officials, and both sides got a little upset at the end,'' he said. ''From what I saw of the replay, the shot at the buzzer was no good.''

Piston center Bill Laimbeer also liked the call.

''I don't care how wierd a victory it was, but we won it and that is the bottom line,'' he said.

Young said later he thought the shot was good but knew it was close.

''I'm disappointed,'' he said. ''I just tried to get as close as I could to the basket.''

The defeat was especially bitter after the Trial Blazers lost their first home game of the series Sunday. It left them in a do-or-die situation Thursday night.

Adelman praised the hot shooting of Piston guards Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars and Vinnie Johnson and the Detroit defense. But he said he thought the Trail Blazers could have won the game if they had performed better in the second and third periods.

''We got ourselves in a tremendous hole. You can't get down against a tremendous team like the Detroit Pistions,'' he said. ''You can't come back and make mistakes.''

Adelman praised Drexler, who had a game-high 34 points. But he said he needed more out of the other starters. He complained that the offense wasn't working the ball back to Terry Porter often enough. Porter finished the game with 17, which is 3 below his playoff average.

''There was a 21-minute period when he only had three shots,'' Adelman said.

Drexler said he was disappointed the team had been able to fight back from a 16-point deficit to take the lead at the end of the game, ''and then we let it slip away.''

Even though no team has ever come back from a three-game deficit to win the NBA finals, Drexler said, ''We aren't conceding anything.''

''This team can make history,'' he said.

BEIJING (JUNE 13) UPI - China Wednesday announced the ouster and reshuffle of a dozen senior officials in what foreign diplomats described as a continuing purge of liberals and consolidation of power by the hard-line government.

Among those replaced was Vice Minister of Culture Ying Ruocheng, also one of the country's best-known actors. Ying won acclaim for his portrayal of a prison warden in Italian director Bernardo Bertolucci's Oscar-winning film ''The Last Emperor.''

The shakeup in five vice minister posts and the shifting of a total of 12 high-ranking officials was reported by the state-run press, including the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily, without comment.

The liberal Ying was long rumored to be out of favor with the leadership for being overly sympathetic to last spring's student-led democracy movement. His former boss, writer Wang Meng, was fired last year as culture minister and replaced by a conservative.

Ying and fellow Vice Minister of Culture Wang Jifu were replaced by Xu Wenbo and Chen Changben, described by Chinese sources as ''obedient'' bureaucrats with close ties to Li Ruihuan, a member of the party Politburo's ruling Standing Committee.

Another casualty was Vice Minister of Radio, Film and Television Chen Haosu. Chen, the son of a veteran revolutionary, was reportedly made to take responsibility for a brief but unprecedented period of liberalization in the state-run media last spring.

Foreign diplomats in Beijing said the sweeping changes were no surprise and should be interpreted as a continuing purge of senior officials in the context of last year's massive protests.

''It certainly represents a perceptible hardening in the cultural field,'' said a Western diplomat. ''Everyone they're putting in is more orthodox.''

The diplomat said government authorities are ''going through the Cultural Ministry at every level,'' replacing those construed as liberal with conservatives more loyal to the regime.

Since the military crackdown on democracy protesters last June, China's hard-line government has clamped down on free expression in the media and the arts, removing senior editors and reporters at key newspapers and stressing ''positive propaganda'' that praises socialism.

''They say we're free to write what we like, but we're not,'' said a government employee and professional writer.

The changes announced Wednesday contradicted recent statements by Communist Party head Jiang Zemin that participants in the nationwide demonstrations for greater freedom would be dealt with ''leniently.''

''The events of last year are catching up with people,'' said a foreign analyst.

Other changes included the replacement of Vice Minister of Aeronautics Sun Jiadong with Wang Liheng. Sun was reportedly involved in negotiations with the United States over a satellite launched by China this year.

An unexpected appointment was of Doje Cering, 51, as vice minister of the Ministry of Civil Affairs. He gave up his position as chairman of the regional government of strife-torn Tibet June 1, officially due to ''poor health.''

New senior appointments were also announced in the Hong Kong and Macao branches of the official Xinhua News Agency, China's de facto consulates in the neighboring British and Portuguese colonies. Hong Kong reverts to China in 1997 and Macao does the same two years later.

DENALI NATIONAL PARK, Alaska (JUNE 13) UPI - Two climbers died while trying to abandon their difficult route up Mount McKinley in favor of an easier approach to the summit of North America's highest peak, the National Park Service reported.

The two climbers found late Tuesday became the second and third fatalities on Mount McKinley this week. Sixty-four climbers have lost their lives seeking to stand on the continent's tallest mountain, 20,320 feet high.

Michael Koshuta, 33, of Centreville, Va., and Stuart Jones, 29, whose Washington state home town was not listed on his climbing registration form, were experienced climbers, park rangers said.

Their bodies were located at the 15,800-foot level of the mountain by rangers flying in Army rescue helicopters.

''The bodies are in a position where recovering them would be difficult and probably dangerous,'' said John Quinley, spokesman for the park service in Anchorage.

The men were going up the treacherous Cassin Ridge, attempted by only a handful of climbers because of its difficulty. But at some point, Quinley said, the men apparently decided to abandon that route in a traverse that would have taken them to the West Buttress, the usual route up McKinley for most climbers and a route that would have offered a less difficult climb.

The men fell some distance, but when and how far remains a mystery, Quinley said. He said they were found still roped together and still wearing their backpacks, and had traveled about 1 mile of the 1 1/4-mile traverse to the West Buttress route.

Rangers began searching because the men were four days overdue in coming off the mountain. They were last seen June 1 by other climbers going up the Cassin Ridge.

The men were found two days after a Japanese climber died high up on the mountain.

Hiroaki Ito, 38, of Hyogo, reached the 19,300-foot level Saturday but couldn't go on because of high altitude sickness. Six companions left him and made a dash for the summit. All seven had left their gear at 17,200 feet, believing they could reach the summit quickly by traveling light and returning to camp. That night four returned to Ito, finding him in worse shape. Unable to move him down, they camped with him and radioed for help - which couldn't reach Ito in time.

Ito died Sunday night with rescuers approaching from above and below and helicopters being launched. Three companions, bivouaced with Ito, suffered frostbite and were airlifted off the mountain and taken to an Anchorage hospital.

After posting a 33-10 record, Cincinnati has lost eight of its last nine and five in a row including a double-header to Atlanta Tuesday, 8-3 and 3-2.

''You can't stay hot like they were all season,'' Braves Manager Russ Nixon said. ''They were getting all the breaks earlier, now they're not.''

Cincinnati's troubles Tuesday started in the second inning of the opener. Starter Danny Jackson, 1-2, was hammered for five runs including a Greg Olson grand slam that put Atlanta up 5-3. The Reds never were able to recover as Tom Glavine, 3-4, took charge with his first complete game of the season.

Despite the losing streak, the Reds, who led the Western Division by 10 games nine days ago, but were five games in front of San Diego after the two losses, are not panicking.

''We played well against the Braves,'' Cincinnati Manager Lou Piniella said. ''But we just didn't get the hits when we needed them. We'll be all right when we put some runs on the board and break out of this slump.''

In the nightcap, Tommy Greene, two days out of the minors, hurled five two-run three-hit innings for a win and loser Jose Rijo, 4-2, gave up three runs on six hits in seven innings.

--- AROUND THE NL ---

In other NL action, New York slaughtered Chicago 19-8; Philadelphia pounded Montreal 7-2, Pittsburgh beat St. Louis 6-3, Houston nipped Los Angeles 5-4, and San Francisco pummeled San Diego 7-2.

Mets 19, Cubs 8

At Chicago, Dave Magadan went 4-for-4, driving in a career-high six runs with a homer, triple, single and sacrifice fly and Kevin McReynolds hit a pair of home runs to pace New York's season-high 21-hit attack. Dwight Gooden, 4-5, raised his career record against the Cubs to 20-3, scattering 11 hits over seven innings. Mike Bielecki, 3-5, took the loss, ending the Cubs' four-game winning streak.

Phillies 7, Expos 2

At Philadelphia, Dave Hollins, Sil Campusano and Tom Herr homered to help the Phillies break a five-game losing streak. Hollins hit a three-run home run and Campusano and Herr each added two-run shots. Ken Howell, 8-3, won his fifth straight decision, allowing seven hits over eight innings. Hollins' second-inning homer off Zane Smith, 3-4, gave the Phillies a 3-1 lead.

Pirates 6, Cardinals 3

At St. Louis, Bobby Bonilla smacked three hits, drove in two runs and scored twice and Neal Heaton collected his ninth victory of the season, leading Pittsburgh. Heaton, 9-1, became the second nine-game winner in the National League. Heaton worked seven innings, allowing three runs and seven hits. St. Louis starter Jose DeLeon, 5-5, took the loss.

Astros 5, Dodgers 4

At Houston, Franklin Stubbs and Glenn Wilson each cracked two-run homers to highlight a five-run first inning that lifted the Astros. Bill Gullickson, 4-4, allowed four runs and six hits over 7 1-3 innings for the Astros, who won their fifth straight game. Dodgers starter Mike Maddux, 0-1, was shelled for five runs on five hits in 1-3 of an inning.

Giants 7, Padres 2

At San Diego, Rick Parker and Gary Carter each homered to lead San Francisco to its 10th victory in its last 11 games. The Giants have gained 6 1/2 games on NL West-leading Cincinnati in the last nine days, but still trail the Reds by 7 1/2 games. Don Robinson, 2-0, scattered five hits over six innings. Padres starter Dennis Rasmussen, 6-3, broke a personal three-game winning streak.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Although his teammates were pulling for Randy Milligan, he wasn't about to pull anything.

Milligan drilled a 10th-inning home run over the fence in right center field of Baltimore's Memorial Stadium to boost the Orioles to a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers, Baltimore's fifth win in its last six games.

''I can hit the ball out in this ballpark anywhere, as long as I don't try to pull the ball,'' said Milligan, who had 12 home runs in 124 games last year.

The Orioles first baseman has reason to be confident. Milligan has seven home runs and 16 of his 33 RBI in his last 12 games.

''It looks like my right field stroke is starting to come around,'' said Milligan, whose last three homers were to right field.

''They had pitched me inside the previous two at-bats (both doubles), so I was looking for something down and on the outside part of the plate.

''We're starting to get key hits,'' he added. ''Mickey (Tettleton) came through in the ninth inning. We were down 3-0 but never gave up.''

Home runs by Rob Deer and B.J. Surhoff produced a lead the Brewer bullpen couldn't hold.

''Our relief pitching was poor,'' Brewers Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. ''(Dan) Plesac had trouble with his breaking ball. He was either out of the zone or threw pitches good to hack at. He had no tough strikes. Both home runs were fastballs down.''

Plesac, 0-3, gave up a game-tying home run to Tettleton on a full-count pitch with two outs in the ninth. But he disagreed with his manager's assessment of his performance. He believed he was a victim of bad luck.

Gregg Olson, 3-0, threw only 10 pitches to two batters but got the win.

--- AROUND THE AL ---

Elsewhere in the American League: Texas edged Oakland 6-5, Cleveland clobbered Detroit 7-3, Toronto nipped Minnesota 5-4, New York downed Boston 5-4, California blanked Kansas City 3-0, and Seattle clubbed Chicago 5-2.

Rangers 6, Athletics 5

At Oakland, Calif., Ruben Sierra doubled home two runs with two outs in the ninth inning, capping a four-run rally that lifted Texas. Trailing 5-2 entering the ninth, the Rangers scored four unearned runs off Dennis Eckersley, 2-1. Brad Arnsberg, 1-0, earned the win and Kenny Rogers gained his third save.

Indians 7, Tigers 3

At Detroit, Chris James capped a four-run third inning with a three-run home run, helping Cleveland to their third straight win. Bud Black, 5-3, fired an eight-hitter for his second complete game of the year. Brian DuBois, 3-4, took the loss. Sandy Alomar banged three hits for the Indians.

Blue Jays 5, Twins 4

At Minneapolis, Fred Manrique's three-base error allowed the tying run to score and set up Tony Fernandez's winning sacrifice fly in the seventh inning. Junior Felix had two hits and scored twice for Toronto. The win catapulted the Blue Jays into first place in the AL East. Todd Stottlemyre 6-6, pitched six innings for the win. Duane Ward gained his fifth save.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 4

At New York, Steve Balboni drove home Roberto Kelly with an eighth-inning single that snapped a tie, lifting the Yankees to only their second victory in 10 games. Reliever Rob Murphy, 0-4, took the loss. Lee Guetterman, 3-2, gained the win and Dave Righetti collected his 12th save of the season and 200th of his career.

Angels 3, Royals 0

At Anaheim, Calif., Chuck Finley and Bryan Harvey combined on a eight-hit shutout, handing Kansas City its eighth straight defeat. Finley, 9-3, went eight innings, allowing seven hits in beating Bret Saberhagen, 5-5, for the second time in a week. Harvey recorded his seventh save.

Mariners 5, White Sox 2

At Seattle, Jay Buhner scored three runs and Randy Johnson scattered three hits over 6 2-3 innings to help the Mariners end Chicago's four-game winning streak. Mike Jackson pitched 1 2-3, yielding one hit, and Mike Schooler pitched the final inning for his 15th save in the combined four-hitter. Scott Bradley had two RBI for Seattle.

SEATTLE (JUNE 13) UPI - Police arrested 16 people when a celebration of a Supreme Court decision upholding the right to burn the American flag degenerated into confrontations between supporters and opponents of the ruling.

About 200 people were involved in the demonstration Tuesday night, which was broken up about 15 minutes after it started, police said. Sixteen people were arrested, cited for failure to disperse and then released, police said.

Flags were burned near the Capitol Hill Post Office, the scene of a flag burning demonstration last year after a flag desecration law was implemented.

Craig Cleveland of Seattle threw water on one flag that was set ablaze and exchanged angry words with flag burners.

''It angers me terribly,'' Cleveland said afterward. ''If they want freedom of speech, they should go out and talk to people about their beliefs. Don't desecrate our symbol of freedom.''

But Darius Strong of Seattle, arrested in 1989 for burning a flag minutes after the Flag Protection Act became law, said he supports the Supreme Court ruling.

''They shouldn't pass judgement against us,'' he said. ''They shouldn't say, 'You don't have the right to burn the flag.' They shouldn't punish us for what we've done.''

The high court ruled 5-4 Monday the Flag Protection Act of 1989 was unconstitutional because it violated the First Amendment guarantee of free speech.

Earlier Tuesday, President Bush and federal lawmakers renewed their campaign for a constitutional amendment to ban flag desecration.

Last year, the justices struck down a Texas law against flag burning, prompting Congress to pass the Flag Protection Act of 1989. Flag burning arrests in Seattle and Washington spearheaded the federal law challenge.

The Supreme Court ruling occurred three days before Flag Day, the anniversary of the day in 1777 when Old Glory was adopted.

Coast Guard officials in Texas say they hope the hull of a Norwegian tanker ablaze in the Gulf of Mexico will be cool enough today to use chemical foam to snuff the remaining hotspots. Firefighters finally brought the fire under control last night... nearly four days after it began.

Republican Senator David Durenberger plans to address the Senate Ethics Committee this morning... one day after the panel began a public investigation of the accusations against him. The Minnesota Republican is accused of using a book publishing deal to earn more money than allowed for senators by law.

Officials in Malaysia picked up a boat of Vietnamese refugees carrying seven barrels of skeletons which the refugees claim are the remains of 30 U-S soldiers from the Vietnam War. American officials are casting doubt on the authenticity of the refugees' claim.

Vice squad officers in San Antonio visited 30 record stores yesterday to ''suggest'' that the store owners remove a controversial rap album by the group the 2 Live Crew. Officials are giving the store owners five days to remove the album from their shelves or face possible criminal charges.

Congress is wasting NO time in trying to enact a constitutional amendment against desecrating the American flag. A House Judiciary subcommittee is expected to routinely pass the amendment today and send it to the full committee... which next week is likely to whisk the issue to the House floor for action.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The Senate upheld President Bush's veto of a three-year, $2 billion authorization for Amtrak - the country's rail network - preserving Bush's unblemished record of winning veto fights.

The Senate voted 64-36 Tuesday to override the veto, three shy of the two-thirds majority required. The House voted last week to override the veto 294-123.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine immediately requested the Senate to reconsider the vote but did not schedule a time for a second attempt.

In 11 attempts since Bush took office 17 months ago, Congress has failed to override a veto. The House vote last week was the first time that even one chamber refused to sustain the president.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said: ''We're pleased that the veto was sustained and we now urge a fast reconsideration without the objectional provision.''

Bush vetoed the bill on the basis of one provision that requries the Interstate Commerce Commission to review the purchase of major freight railroads by non-rail businesses. The ICC already has the power to review buying of railroads by other railroads.

In his veto message, Bush said, ''This requirement is an unwarranted regulatory roadblock to financial restructuring of the railroad industry.''

Democrats, fighting the veto, expressed fears that it was only a cover for the White House to stop federal financing for Amtrak. Bush did not seek any money for the railroad system in his fiscal 1991 budget.

Republican leaders promised that a new bill, dropping the provision which provoked the veto, would be introduced shortly and cited letters from Bush and to White House advisers that it would be signed.

The Senate was originally expected to vote last week but was blocked by Senate GOP leader Robert Dole of Kansas, who said that there were too many Republican absentees.

Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., floor manager for the Democrats, said, ''On Thursday last, we indeed had the votes to override. I can only hope that today the same senators will vote for the public interest.''

But Exon said, ''I am fearful. A great deal has gone on since last Thursday. The White House and its operatives have been very busy.''

Exon said there has been ''some talk'' by senators working to sustain the veto that it would be ''the good and kind thing to do'' on Bush's 66th birthday.

Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., the Republican floor manager, insisted that Bush, despite his refusal to ask for any funds for Amtrak, said the veto ''was not over funding. The president agrees on that portion of the bill.''

Republicans insisted that the provision ordering the ICC to screen railroad acquisition by non-railroad organizations would be a step backward from railroad reorganization for which they credited a revival of the railroad system in the United States.

Dole said that 10 years ago the nation's railroad system was in ''sad shape'' but that today it was fast progressing in ridership and revenues and headed for success.

''In my view this one provision is a roadblock to successful deregulation '' Dole said. ''The gains achieved during the past decade could disappear in the next decade.''

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., however, said that without the provision the railroads could wind up in a ''mess worse than the savings and loans'' institutions.

Sens. John Warner, R-Va., and Chuck Robb, D-Va., strongly supported the attempt to override the veto. The bill eliminates the last roadblock to a commuter rail line in northern Virginia.

TOKYO (JUNE 13) UPI - The killing and consumption of an endangered species of porpoise in Japan must stop immediately if it is to be saved from extinction, a British-based environmental group said Wednesday.

In a letter to Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, the Environmental Investigation Agency said 67 percent of the endangered Dall's porpoise population, which inhabits the waters off Japan, has been killed by Japanese fishermen in the last three years.

Demand for dolphin and porpoise meat in Japan has climbed because it is being disguised as whale meat, which has become difficult to find because of a worldwide ban on whaling, said the group's executive director, David Currey.

''We appeal to you to suspend the hunt of Dall's porpoise for at least one year to ensure the survival of these endangered populations,'' said the letter, which was signed by the group's president, Allan Thornton, and endorsed by 35 other environmental and animal rights groups.

Thornton gave copies of the letter to reporters at a news conference Wednesday in Tokyo.

A yearlong ban would allow scientists to study the situation and governments to work on international conservation plans, he said.

The rapid decline of the porpoise has been documented by Japanese scientists, Thornton said.

He cited studies by Japanese marine biologists Tomio Kasuya and Toshiya Miyashita, who estimated the worldwide Dall's porpoise population at 104,000 in 1988.

In that year, the number of kills by Japanese fishermen tripled to 40,000, Thornton said. In 1989, after some local governments ordered restraint, the number killed dropped to 30,000.

But the herd can only grow at 4 percent to 6 percent a year, Currey said.

''Unless something is done, they'll be driven to extinction, he said.

The active, gregarious porpoises often swim ahead of ships.

The International Whaling Commission banned the commercial hunting of large whales in 1982, except for research. Thornton said the commission should take responsibility for protecting all members of the cetacean family, including dolphins, porpoises and small whales.

The commission expressed concern over the increase in the catch of Dall's porpoises in 1989 and called for it to be reduced.

''What we're trying to do in our international campaign is to achieve minimal standards of protection for small cetaceans,'' he said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 13) UPI - Socialite and businesswoman Georgette Mosbacher, whose name is a familiar fixture in columns that chronicle New York's rich and famous, made the police blotter Wednesday after she was robbed at a hotel.

The 43-year-old wife of Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher ran into a well-dressed, submachine gun-toting thief in the plush halls of the Barbizon hotel on Manhattan's Upper East Side Tuesday evening, police said.

Mosbacher told the Daily News she refused the gunman's demand that she open the door to her room and go inside with him.

Instead, she said she gave him her jewelry - worth about $30,000 - and some personal papers. Then, as the gunman's hands were full, an elevator door opened and Mosbacher said she dived in, ''screaming and yelling and leaning'' on the emergency buzzer.

In the lobby 20 floors down, she alerted the staff of the Barbizon. The gunman was long gone.

''It was hell,'' Mosbacher told the Daily News. ''I'm lucky to be talking to you. It's amazing at the moment when it was happening how calm I was. I remember when I was bitten by a snake in Texas, and I went absolutely berserk. This time I didn't.''

Mosbacher, owner of La Prairie, a women's cosmetics firm headquartered in Switzerland whose products are sold in exclusive department stores, said that during the 5:55 p.m. Tuesday confrontation, the well-dressed gunman poked a submachine gun at her and whispered, ''Open your door.''

''I said, 'The door won't open, the key won't work.' He opened the door, and I told him, 'I'm not going in there. I'm not going to shout'

''I took off my earrings and said, 'There's a bench over there and I'm going to sit.' I said to myself, 'I'm not going to live,' but I thought I'd have a better chance in the hallway,'' Mosbacher told the News.

One of the first things she did after the ordeal was ''order a stiff drink'' and call her husband in Washington, she said.

''He was more concerned if I'm all right,'' she told the News.

Mosbacher was staying at the hotel while the couple's upper Fifth Avenue cooperative apartment is being renovated, the News reported.

The Barbizon, once a fashionable women's hotel and residence, is currently owned by a corporation formed by the one-time owners of Studio 54.

The hotel refused to comment on the incident.

In New York, Georgette Mosbacher's name frequently appears in gossip columns alongside those of her high-profile society friends, who include Blaine Trump and sister-in-law Ivana Trump, Anne Bass and Nina Griscom.

And she has been widely touted as one of the most glamorous figures in the Bush administration, in pointed contrast to the more down-to-earth style of first lady Barbara Bush.

BEIJING (JUNE 13) UPI - A landslide sent a shower of mountain rocks onto homes in a village in south China's Guangxi Province, killing at least 11 people, most of them children, the state-run press reported Wednesday.

The semi-official China News Service said the landslide occurred Saturday in Jiang village, part of Rongan County in the province's north near the tourist city of Guilin.

At least 11 people were killed, seven of them under the age of 15, the report said. It said six other people were hospitalized with serious injuries.

The agency said a large section of mountain rock broke loose above the village and cascaded onto homes, collapsing 65 rooms in the village dwellings. Eight families were left homeless.

Nearby towns sent relief supplies to the village, CNS said.

SAN ANTONIO (JUNE 13) UPI - Police vice officers visited 30 record stores, ''suggesting'' owners should remove a controversial album by rap group 2

Live Crew from their shelves or face possible legal action.

The action Tuesday sparked debate among local officials, business people and legal experts about the constitutional and legal wisdom of the move.

Despite outcries from civil libertarians and less-than-enthusiastic support from the district attorney's office and businesses, Police vice Commander Lt. Jerry Pittman told the San Antonio Light the action was justified and would continue.

Pittman said the album ''As Nasty As They Wanna Be,'' already under legal fire in Florida, rests ''in the same category as any X-rated pornographic movie.''

A federal judge in Florida last week ruled the album contains obscene material, and two members of the band were arrested on obscenity charges Sunday after performing the banned material.

A Florida store owner who sold the group's records also was arrested on an obscenity charge.

The maximum penalty for conviction of selling obscene material in Texas, a Class A misdemeanor, is a year in jail and a fine up to $2,000.

Six vice detectives visited area record stores Tuesday morning and ''informed owners they had five days to remove the material from their shelves, or face possible criminal charges,'' Pittman said.

Following an afternoon news conference at police headquarters, Pittman said he had no intention of letting up pressure and promised to increase the number of detectives paying surprise visits to the stores.

''There's no prior restraint here. We're just asking for voluntary compliance with existing law,'' he said. ''The laws defining pornography and obscenity are already on the books.''

(JUNE 13) UPI - Black candidates made political gains in South Carolina and Arkansas as they captured major party nominations for governor and lieutenant governor.

State Sen. Theo Mitchell won the Democratic nomination for South Carolina governor Tuesday, becoming the first black candidate nominated by a major party for statewide office in South Carolina since Reconstruction.

Mitchell garnered 60 percent of the vote to defeat his opponent, fellow state Sen. Ernie Passailaigue, for the right to challenge Gov. Carroll Campbell in the fall.

Campbell, a Republican elected in 1986, was unopposed in the GOP primary. He is expected to be a heavy favorite in the general election.

In Arkansas, black real estate agent Kenneth ''Muskie'' Harris claimed victory over Ku Klux Klan sympathizer Ralph Forbes in the contest for the Republican lieutenant governor's nomination.

Besides South Carolina and Arkansas, voters cast primary ballots in Maine, Virginia and North Dakota, bringing to 24 the number of states that have chosen candidates for the general election. An eight-week string of primaries in August and September will decide almost all of the remaining nominations.

Harris and Forbes finished first and second in a primary two weeks ago, with Forbes receiving 46 percent and Harris 36 percent.

Forbes's connections to the American Nazi Party and the Ku Klux Klan were a focal point of the runoff contest and Harris, who received considerable mainstream GOP support, argued Forbes wanted to ''make this race emotional and racial.''

But Forbes countered by contending he was unfairly attacked by the media and argued ''the average Arkansan is going to see through all that.''

Harris is expected to be an underdog candidate in November against the Democratic nominee, former Rep. Jim Guy Tucker of Little Rock.

Mitchell presented himself as a coalition builder who could cross racial, social and economic lines to unite the state.

Passailaigue, a certified public accountant and former owner of a minor-league baseball team, had a populist image and centered his campaign on a pledge to revamp a state tax system he considers unfair to working people and too generous to the wealthy.

In the state's Senate race, there was no opposition for Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond. Democrats had no candidate.

In another South Carolina contest, former U.S. attorney Henry McMaster defeated state Sen. Sherry Martschink for the Republican lieutenant governor's nomination.

McMaster portrayed himself as very conservative, while accusing Martschink of being too liberal, particularly on the issue of abortion rights.

Other highlights of the Tuesday voting included:

-Maine: The premier races were for nominations to the House seat being vacated by Rep. Joseph Brennan, a Democrat trying to regain his job as governor.

Former Rep. David Emery, R-Maine, easily defeated state Rep. John McCormick Jr. to win the Republican nomination for Congress. On the Democratic side, state Sen. Thomas Andrews narrowly defeated Attorney General James Tierney in a five-way race.

McCormick, who opposes abortion, made that the main issue against Emery, who is a recent convert to the abortion-rights ranks.

There were no primaries in either party in the gubernatorial or Senate contests. In November, incumbent Republican Gov. John McKernan will face Brennan. In the Senate race, Republican incumbent William Cohen will face Democrat Neil Rolde.

In other election races Tuesday:

North Dakota: Voters rejected a measure to boost the state's sales tax rate from 5 percent to 6 percent. Most of the nearly $42 million in additional revenue would have gone to schools.

Virginia: Republican Sen. John Warner had no primary opposition and no Democratic opponent.

MOSCOW (JUNE 13) UPI - A Soviet newspaper began publishing the autobiography of Boris Yeltsin, ''Against the Grain,'' Wednesday in what promises to be a literary sensation and the first major test of the new law on press freedom.

The autobiography has been published in a very limited edition of 300,000 copies in Sverdlovsk and is selling like wildfire in Moscow, but the serialization in the daily newspaper Gudok will give it even broader circulation.

Already published in the West with unflattering portraits of Mikhail Gorbachev as loving his comforts, the serialiation in Gudok, the newspaper of the railway workers, will be the first test of the new press law passed

Tuesday.

That new law removes all bars on censorship, sure to give editors fits as they battle reporters tired of Communist watchdogs over them. And the Yeltsin book has plenty of sting.

It says that Gorbachev, with at least two dachas, has been unsuccessful with his economic reforms because he does not want to touch the heart of the mechanism that doles out privileges to the rulers.

A major culprit, the book says, is Gorbachev's wife, Raisa, who it says likes the fine things and does not understand that the people do not like her.

The excerpt published Wednesday deals with Yeltsin in the midst of his comeback after being fired as Moscow Party boss in late 1987 and booted out of the ruling Politburo in early 1988 for speaking up to Gorbachev before the entire Communist Partry leadership.

As the excerpt opens, Yeltsin is awaiting the results of the balloting for the Supreme Soviet in which he is seeking to represent Moscow's territorial district No. 1 as an at-large delegate.

In the end, he received 6 million votes, and in voting a year later 9 million to represent Sverdlovsk in the Russian Parliament. Last month, he was elected by that new legislature as Russia's president.

Gudok ended the excerpt with the words, ''to be continued,'' which is sure to to be noted by the Russian-reading public that dotes on the written word.

A Soviet journalist told a Western colleague Tuesday, ''You will never understand. People here may hear something 1,000 times, but when they see it in print, then it's a document.'' He then slapped his hand across a column of newsprint, stressing: ''A document.''

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 13) UPI - East German police have arrested a woman suspected of being a leading West German terrorist, the second alleged left-wing extremist captured in the former communist state in a week, a government official said Wednesday.

The arrest of Inge Viett, 46, on Tuesday night was the result of a new cooperation between East and West German officials to track down members of the ultra left-wing Red Army Faction of West Germany who are believed to have been living in the East, perhaps under the protection of communist authorities ousted last fall.

Interior Minister Peter Diestel said Viett was picked up Tuesday night, when a crack police unit raided her Magdeburg appartment, 30 miles from the West German border.

Viett allegedly participated in a string of attacks in the late 1970s, including the 1974 assassination of top West Berlin judge Guenter von Drenkmann and the 1975 kidnapping of leading West Berlin conservative politician Peter Lorenz.

The West German authorities claim that Viett was, and perhaps still is, a top member of the ultra left-wing Red Army Faction that has claimed responsibility for numerous terrorist activities in West Germany.

Last week, the East German authorities arrested another suspected RAF member, 39-year-old Susanne Albrecht, who is accused of participating in the 1977 assassination of Frankfurt banker Juergen Ponto.

Diestel hailed Viett's arrest as the ''great success'' of the recent close cooperation between East and West German police.

The East German authorities declined comment on West German press reports that they were preparing to arrest several other West German extremists.

The West German press has reported that several leading RAF members have been living for several years in East Germany under the protection of the secret service of the communist authorities ousted last fall.

Police sources said that Viett may have lived in East Germany under an assumed name for years and that her identity was certainly known to the now-disbanded secret police, known as Stasi.

Diestel said earlier that Albrecht had lived in the country for eight years until traveling abroad two years ago - reportedly to work in the Soviet Union.

Albrecht was arrested one week ago, shortly after she returned to East Germany, apparently for her annual vacation.

Albrecht and Viett are among 30 alleged RAF members sought by the West German police and whose names and photographs appear on lists of ''wanted terrorists.''

In addition to the participation in the assassination and the kidnapping of the West Berlin officials, Viett is accused of shooting and injuring a French policeman, participating in a bomb attack on a British yacht club in West Berlin, and taking part in the 1977 kidnapping of Austrian industrialist Walter Michael Palmers.

She is also accused of being involved in five bank robberies and arms smuggling. She escaped twice from prison in West Berlin and allegedly helped others to escape.

The ultra left-wing RAF has in the past claimed responsibility for a series of attacks on leading industrialists and bankers, including the assassination last December of Deutsche Bank Chairman Alfred Herrhausen, near Frankfurt.

(JUNE 13) UPI - The oil tanker fire in the Gulf of Mexico is under control... an anti-flag desecration amendment begins its journey through Congress... details of those top stories and more, from the wires of United Press International.

The fire aboard a Norwegian tanker in the Gulf of Mexico has been brought under control. Coast Guard officials hope the ship will be cool enough today so firefighters can apply chemical foam to several hotspots.

The tanker is carrying 38-Million gallons of light crude oil.

Firefighters reported steady progress yesterday and spotters who flew over the vessel did NOT spot any flames. Although the fire is under control, it continues to burn below decks in the engine room and the crews quarters.

Coast Guard Captain Thomas Greene says the flow of oil going over the ship's stern has stopped burning. Likewise the oil on the water. He says that's good and bad, because although the oil is NO longer burning, it has added to the pollution problem.

Much of the spilled crude has burned or evaporated on its own. About 50 percent of light crude oil evaporates in the sun and heat in 24 hours, unlike heavy crude, which evaporates very little.

NO oil has reached the Texas coast.

The oil tanker was rocked by an explosion Saturday that killed two crewmen and left two others missing. Because the incident occurred in international waters, Norway is in charge of the investigation. U-S officials have been invited to participate in the hearing at a Galveston hotel.

A constitutional amendment against desecrating the American flag begins its trip through Congress this morning before a House Judiciary subcommittee.

The amendment declares- quoting here- ''the Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States.'' It's being introduced two days after the Supreme Court ruled 5flag burning law.

Members of the House panel are expected to pass the amendment along to the full committee, which likely will put the issue to the House floor next week.

To become part of the Constitution, the amendment would have to receive two-thirds of the vote in both houses of Congress and approval in 38 states, or three-fourths of the state legislatures.

House Speaker Thomas Foley has cautioned against using the flag to partisan political advantage in the November elections. Senior G-O-P congressmen say voters will be reminded of the issue.

(JUNE 13) UPI - The presidents of the Baltic republics of Lithuania, Lativa and Estonia emerged optimistic yesterday from an hour-long meeting with Soviet President Gorbachev.

The leaders of the secession-minded republics say they received compromise proposals to end the deadlock on their drives for independence from Moscow. They now are taking the proposals to their constituencies.

The leaders were mum on specifics. But the plan apparently involves the republics freezing their declarations of independence... and the Kremlin beginning talks on secession and ending an economic blockade of Lithuania.

Lithuanian President Landsbergis said after the meeting that it might now be possible to open what he called ''a true political dialogue'' between Lithuania and the Soviet Union.

In Washington, President Bush called the meeting ''a heartening development.''

Malayasian officials say they discovered seven barrels containing the skeletons of 30 men, said to have been U-S soldiers. The barrels were found on a Vietnamese refugee boat that landed on a remote beach.

American officials are casting doubt on the authenticity of the refugees' claims. Relief authorities who have spent a lot of time working with refugees say similar claims have been made in the past and all were determined to be false.

A U-S Embassy spokesman in Kuala Lumpur is NOT commenting, but a source close to the embassy says the refugees' story needs to be checked out.

Officials found metallic tags on the skeletons, with the alleged names, unit numbers and addresses of the deceased. But the source from the U-S Embassy says the refugees could have been grave robbers and the tags might be stolen.

Malaysian officials say the refugees intended to turn the remains over to the U-S Embassy in Singapore. The refugees apparently hoped U-S officials would allow them to enter the United States and give them a monetary reward in exchange.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Black candidates made political gains in South Carolina and Arkansas as they captured major party nominations for governor and lieutenant governor in two of several primaries nationwide yesterday.

South Carolina State Senator Theo Mitchell won the Democratic nomination for governor. That makes him the first black candidate nominated by a major party for statewide office in South Carolina since the post-Civil War Reconstruction era.

Mitchell garnered 60 percent of the vote... giving him the right to challenge Republican Governor Carroll Campbell in the fall. Campbell ran unopposed in the G-O-P primary. He's expected to be a favorite in the general election.

In Arkansas, black real estate agent Kenneth ''Muskie'' Harris claimed victory over Ku Klux Klan sympathizer Ralph Forbes for the G-O-P lieutenant governor's nomination. Harris and Forbes finished first and second in a primary two weeks ago... with Forbes receiving 46 percent and Harris 36 percent.

Voters also cast primary ballots in Maine, Virginia and North Dakota, bringing to 24 the number of states that have chosen candidates for the general election in November. An eight-week string of primaries in August and September will decide almost all of the remaining nominations.

Seven states are suing the Mobil Chemical Company for making false claims about the bio-degradibility of its Hefty plastic trash bag line. The suits were filed in seven state courts by members of the various attorneys general task forces.

The suits ask for a preliminary injunction barring Mobil from selling, distributing or marketing plastic products that make false claims about bio-degradibility.

Mobil announced in March it would stop printing such claims on the Hefty bags. But the attorneys general say they want the company to remove all bags from store shelves. The Hefty package used to claim the bags contained an additive that would help it bio-degrade after exposure to sun wind and rain.

The attorneys general say Mobil knew the plastic sold with the ''bio-degradeable'' label would only decompose under certain laboratory conditions.

The states involved in the suit are New York, California, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin. The states say they may turn their attention next to disposable diaper manufacturers who make similiar environmental claims.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Firefighters in the Gulf of Mexico are hoping for a third straight day that a burning Norwegian oil tanker will be cool enough so they can spray it with chemical foam. The blaze aboard the ship was brought under control last night, but it continues to burn below decks in the engine room and crew quarters. The tanker, which is carrying 38-Million gallons of light crude oil, has leaked 100-thousand gallons of its cargo. Coast Guard officials say NO oil has reached the Texas shore.

Coast Guard officials in Alaska say nearly 15 months after the Exxon Valdez oil spill, oil remains on one-third of the once-pristine shores. A shoreline status report indicates the dirty beaches have a light coat of oil. Exxon has painted a generally positive picture of clean-up operations but state officials and environmental leaders continue to lash out at the oil giant, saying it's NOT doing a good job of clearing the beaches of oil.

A constitutional amendment banning flag burning is making its way through Congress. Members of a House Judiciary subcommittee are expected to pass the amendment to the full committee this morning. (JUNE 13) UPI - Diplomats say talks between the West African Liberian government and rebel leaders got off to a rocky start yesterday with each side rejecting the other's proposal for a cease-fire. The rebels say a cease-fire will NOT be possible until President Samuel Doe and his government resign. A Liberian government spokesman has made it clear Doe will NOT step down. The negotiations are being held in neighboring Sierre Leone.

Algerian officials say the fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front has taken the lead in preliminary results from yesterday's elections. They were the first multi-party elections since Algeria won independence from France in 1962. Political experts say if final results show the Moslem fundamentalists won, it will be the first time they have scored a victory in free pluralist nationwide elections in the Arab world.

The National Park Service says two American climbers died while trying to abandon the most difficult route up Alaska's Mount McKinley in favor of an easier approach to the summit. The infants' parents also underwent special training. The four-year study involved 985 babies from around the country.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 13) UPI - Oil remains on one-third of the Alaskan shores soiled in the Exxon Valdez disaster nearly 15 months after the nation's worst oil spill, according to a newly completed survey of 1,215 miles of coastline.

Most of the beaches that still have crude on them are lightly oiled, according to a shoreline status report at a Tuesday night oil spill cleanup operations meeting. "Shorelines are being cleaned and I really mean it," said Coast Guard Rear Adm. David Ciancaglini, the federal on-scene coordinator.

"There are shorelines that are very, very dirty out there," Ciancaglini said. "But shorelines are being cleaned day by day and we are moving along. We're doing everything we can to clean that environment."

Exxon painted a generally glowing picture of cleanup operations now in full swing for a second summer, mopping up the mess left by 11 million gallons of crude that washed up on Alaska beaches when the tanker Exxon Valdez hit Bligh Reef in Prince William Sound March 24, 1989, in the nation's worst oil spill.

But amidst the night's routine reports on cleanup work, scientific tests, wildlife and fishing, a Kodiak Island official lashed out at Exxon for doing a bad job.

While Exxon's Randy Buckley was reciting company cleanup efforts, Wayne Coleman, the Kodiak Island Borough government spill response administrator launched a loud attack against Exxon for resuming the Kodiak Island cleanup late and conducting "a very, very poor operation."

Kodiak Island residents fear that oil may still cling to their shores in 1995 the way the cleanup is going now, Coleman said. Kodiak is a major fishing center and site of a number of native subsistence villages.

Ciancaglini sought to quell the outburst by promising that land owners and land managers would be satisfied when the cleanup was finished at the end of this summer.

That quieted the Kodiak official until the end of meeting when he continued lambasting Exxon for ineffective work, but Buckley said crews had returned to Kodiak cleanup duties two days earlier and should be a given chance.

Kodiak has 66.7 miles of shore with oil. All but a few miles are lightly oiled. The Kenai Peninsula 69.4 miles of oiled shoreline, most of which is lightly oiled. Most of the lingering oil is on 260 miles of Prince William Sound shores.

In all, survey teams examined 1,215 miles of shore. No oil was found on 819.2 miles. Some oil was found on 396.2 miles. A breakdown classified 281.2 miles as very lightly oiled, 63.7 miles with a narrow band of oil, 36.5 miles moderately oiled, and 14.8 miles heavily oiled. Some beaches were being reexamined now that snow has melted at the high tide levels.

Crews were picking up tarmats, oily mousse patties and asphalt patches. Then, on many of these beaches, they were spraying a chemical fertilizer to stimulate growth of naturally occuring bacteria that eat oil.

Although the French-made chemical Inipol is initially toxic, federal scientists reported no wildlife coming into contact with it on sprayed beaches and reported 90 percent survival rates among intertidal creatures on sprayed beaches. State scientists said it is too early to judge the experimental treatment method.

Federal wildlife officials also announced that they reduced a half-mile buffer zone to a quarter-mile around bald eagle nests to give cleanup crews more latitude to perform their jobs.

Of the 1,488 bald eagle nests surveyed in Prince William Sound, Kodiak Island and the Kenai Peninsula, 717 were active, but Paul Gertler, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service spill coordinator, said it was uncertain how many were active before the spill. Wildlife biologists estimated last summer that the spill reduced eagle nest productivity by two-thirds.

Exxon officials reiterated their prediction that salmon fishing would be normal this summer despite small closures in oily areas.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Retail sales fell 0.7 percent in May to $146.8 billion for the third straight monthly decline, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

Building materials were especially hard hit.

The May decrease in activity follows drops of 0.9 percent in April and 0.4 percent in March and marks the first time since the 1981 recession that retail sales declined for three consecutive months, the department said.

Private economists had predicted a 0.1 percent increase for May.

Not counting motor vehicles sales, May retail sales decreased by 0.8 percent, according to the monthly report compiled by the department's Census Bureau.

Sales of durable goods - expensive items made to last three or more years - dropped 1.1 percent in May to $53.2 billion while sales of non-durable goods were off by 0.5 percent to $93.7 billion, the Commerce Department said.

Financial analysts at Fuji Securities in Chicago said total sales growth since last autumn is ''barely sufficient to keep up with inflation, implying ... little or no growth in the same interval.''

During May, retail sales of building materials plunged 4.2 percent, sales of cars, trucks and vans were down by 0.6 percent, and sales of furniture slipped 1.1 percent, the department said.

The only category to show an incraese was clothing stores where retail sales advanced 2.4 percent in May, the Commerce Department said.

In other sectors, retail sales declined 1 percent at department stores, 1 percent at food stores, 1.6 percent at gasoline service stations, 0.5 percent at bars and restaurants and 1.3 percent at drug stores.

All the sales figures were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors, such as the weather and holidays.

ANCHORAGE, AK (JUNE 13) UPI - Oil was flowing again Wednesday following a shutdown of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline for a day of intense repair work designed to avoid prolonged disruptions of oil deliveries.

Nearly 1,400 workers labored at 42 jobs in a one-day project that cost up to $2 million, said Marnie Isaacs, spokeswoman for the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

The 800-mile pipeline carries crude from Prudhoe Bay and other North Slope fields to the southern Alaska oil port of Valdez, where tankers fill with oil for delivery to refineries on the West and Gulf Coasts. This is the source of one-fourth of domestic crude, the biggest single source of oil in the United States.

During Tuesday's pipeline shutdown, oil producers stored oil at tanks at Prudhoe Bay. Once resumed, oil flow increased gradually and should reach 1.6 million barrels per day by the end of the week, Isaacs said.

Until recently, Alaska pumped two million barrels per day through the pipeline. Daily flow was 1.8 million barrels before the shutdown. However, the pipeline will continue operating at reduced levels for much of the summer while North Slope oil producers perform work on their facilities, BP spokesman Paul Laird said.

Summer oil flow will fluctuate, returning to 1.8 million barrels per day in September, Laird said. He estimated that summer production losses might amount to about 16 million barrels. There are 42 gallons in a barrrel so that amounts to 672 million gallons in lost production.

Workers Tuesday replaced corroded pipe in Pump Station No. 1 and performed repairs at nine other pump stations along the line. They also inspected portions of the system inaccessible during full operations, Isaacs reported. Tuesday's work was so intense and timing so critical, Isaacs said, that Sunday the company staged a full-scale work drill, a kind of dress rehearsal.

The work was part of a $450 million in maintenance, repairs and construction this year, the most extensive activity since oil began flowing through the pipeline in 1977. Corrosion repairs alone will take several years and cost a total of $800 million. No mainline sections of corroded pipe were replaced Tuesday but that will occur next summer during a two-day shutdown.

The reason production will continue at reduced levels this summer is because North Slope operators BP and Arco are expanding Prudhoe Bay gas handling facilities, Laird said. As the field ages, more natural gas comes up with the oil, and gathering centers that separate the produced oil, gas and water must be able to handle more gas, which is then re-injected into the ground to pressurize the field and result in greater oil production.

Five of the six stations that separate oil, gas and water will be shut down over the summer, one at a time, for the $450 million gas handling expansion project, thus reducing producer capacity for handling peak production, Laird said. Alyeska is a consortium that operates the pipeline for seven oil company owners, BP, Arco, Exxon, Mobil, Amerada Hess, Phillips, and Unocal.

Private economists had predicted a 0.1 percent increase for May.

Not counting motor vehicles sales, May retail sales decreased by 0.8 percent, according to the monthly report compiled by the department's Census Bureau.

Sales of durable goods - expensive items made to last three or more years - dropped 1.1 percent in May to $53.2 billion while sales of non-durable goods were off 0.5 percent to $93.7 billion, the Commerce Department said.

Financial analysts at Fuji Securities in Chicago said total sales growth since last autumn is ''barely sufficient to keep up with inflation, implying ... little or no growth in the same interval.''

During May, retail sales of building materials plunged 4.2 percent, sales of cars, trucks and vans were down 0.6 percent, and sales of furniture slipped 1.1 percent, the department said.

The only category to show an incraese was clothing stores where retail sales advanced 2.4 percent in May, the Commerce Department said.

In other sectors, retail sales:

-Declined 1 percent at department stores.

-Dropped 1 percent at food stores.

-Slid 1.6 percent at gasoline service stations.

-Dipped 0.5 percent at bars and restaurants.

-Fell 1.3 percent at drug stores.

All the sales figures were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors, such as weather and holidays.

SOFIA, Bulgaria (JUNE 13) UPI - Opposition supporters formed human barricades in the streets of the capital Wednesday in a growing civil disobedience campaign to protest the results of an election they claim was stolen by the communist government.

The latest protests came as new official results widened the margin of victory for the ruling Bulgarian Socialist Party in the country's first free balloting in 44 years.

The result show that, barring a spectacular upset in a run-off contest Sunday, Bulgaria will become the first Eastern Europe country to legitimize an existing communist government in a democratic election.

Although international observers found only minor irregularities during the initial round of voting last Sunday, the fairness of the polls was being hotly disputed by the opposition Union of Democratic Forces, whose supporters have taken to the streets in protest.

''The nation's soul has been outraged,'' the opposition newspaper Vek 21 said in an editorial Wednesday.

''By using the resources of the state as well as by manipulating and tampering with the human tragedy arising from lack of adequate information and eduation, the BSP did not win. It actually stole the election results '' the newspaper said.

The article called for more protests, saying the ''road to freedom is the road of civil disobedience.'' But in Sofia and other UDF strongholds a civil disobedience campaign was under way.

Several hundred demonstrators, mostly students, blocked traffic in central Sofia, in some cases sitting or even lying down in the streets. In other places they set up barricades of garbage cans, snarling traffic and bringing mass transit to a halt in parts of the downtown area.

There were no reports of violence and police made no attempt to intervene.

At Sofia University, student protesters occupied the main buildings in the second day of a sit-in strike.

''For 700 years of our history Bulgaria was under slavery or dictatorship. I don't think the people would choose slavery freely,'' said student organizer Theodora Galabolva on Tuesday.

Updated election results Wednesday the BSP won more than half the 119 seats allocated so far in individual constituency races.

The Central Election Commission announced the BSP captured 75 seats, or 64 percent, compared to 32 seats, or 27 percent, for the opposition.

Twelve seats were won by smaller parties and the results in 81 other individual races were declared inconclusive and will be decided in a run-off election Sunday, Popov said.

The commission has not released results for 200 other seats that are allocated on a proportional basis, depending on how many votes each party receives. But computer projections by INFAS indicated the communists would win 99 of those seats, or 49.5 percent, to 73 seats, or 36.5 percent, for the opposition.

The ruling party dropped the name ''communist'' in April and recast itself as a social democratic party in an effort to distance itself from 44 years of totalitarianism.

Liberal communists took the reigns of government and implemented sweeping political and economic reforms.

TOKYO (JUNE 13) UPI - Zale Corp., a jewelry retailer based in Irving, Texas, will open its first store in Japan in September and plans to build a 1,000-store network within ten years, the company's Japanese partners said Wednesday.

Zale has reached an agreement with Tsurukame Corp., a major Japanese jeweler, and C. Itoh, a trading company, to open shops under the Zale name. Zale and C. Itoh said they expect sales of $650,000 to $1 million in the first year and $1 billion over ten years.

Zale will purchase one percent of Tsurukame stock for $1 million and Tsurukame will buy one percent of Peoples Jewellers Ltd. of Canada, which took over Zale in 1986, the companies said. C. Itoh, which owns 11 percent of Tsurukame's stock, will help manage and finance the jewelry chain, the companies said.

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND (JUNE 13) UPI - Former Wimbledon champion Pat Cash Wednesday was named a wild-card entrant to the 1990 All England Championships, which start June 25.

Cash, the 1987 Wimbledon titlist, has dropped to No. 143 in the world rankings after a year out of competition because of achilles tendon surgery.

Cash has not performed well recently. The Australian lost in the first round of the French Open two weeks ago. Then he was disqualified in a grass-court tournament last week at Beckenham, England because he arrived late for his second-round match.

And Monday he lost in the first round to Paul Chamberlain of Manhattan Beach, Calif., in the $500,000 Stella Artois tournament at London's Queens Club.

Cash and compatriot Mark Woodford, who had a match point against Ivan Lendl at Wimbledon two years ago, are the only non-British players among the eight men's singles wild cards.

Kathy Jordan of King of Prussia, Penn., and seven British players received wild-card entries for the women's singles.

VATICAN CITY (JUNE 13) UPI - Pope John Paul II has named Archbishop Agostino Cacciavillan as the new ambassador to the United States, the Vatican announced Wednesday.

Cacciavillan, 63, will replace Archbishop Pio Laghi, who was recently transferred to the Roman Curia. the Vatican announced Wednesday.

The new ambassador had been apostolic pro-nuncio - the church's term for ambassador - in India and Nepal.

The Vatican appoints a pro-nuncio, rather than a nuncio, to countries in which the majority of the population is not Roman Catholic.

Cacciavillan replaces Laghi, 68, who has been apostolic pro-nuncio in Washington since the United States and the Vatican re-established full diplomatic relations Jan. 10, 1984, for the first time in 117 years.

Laghi was recently appointed pro-prefect of the Congregation for Catholic Education in the Roman Curia, the central church administration.

Like his predecssor, Cacciavillan will serve as the permanent observer of the Holy See to the Organization of American States.

Cacciavillan was born in Arzignano, near Vicenza in northern Italy in 1926 and was ordained in 1949. He became a bishop Jan. 17, 1976.

Archbishop Daniel E. Pilarczyk of Cincinnati, the president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, called Cacciavillan a man of vision.

''We look forward to Archbishop Cacciavillan's sharing that vision with us '' Pilarczyk said. ''We offer to him the warm welcome of Catholics in this nation and we pledge to him our loyalty and support as we go about our common mission, in union with the holy father, in the family of the church.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - A federal court ruled Tuesday the Securities and Exchange Commission does not have the authority to regulate matters of corporate governance other than disclosure policy.

In its ruling, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said corporate governance would remain subject to state control rather than SEC oversight.

While the court's decision today deals directly with a company's right to create classes of stock that have different voting rights - the so-called one-share, one-vote issue - the ruling may have a wider impact on the SEC's rulemaking authority.

Under the SEC's one-share, one-vote rule, specfically Rule 19c-4 enacted in 1988, stock exchanges were not allowed to carry listings of firms that had created different classes of stock with the intent of ''nullifying, restricting or disparately reducing per share voting rights'' of common stockholders.

Robert D. Rosenbaum, a senior partner with the Washington law firm Arnold and Porter, which was hired by a group of 200 major corporations called the Business Roundtable to fight the SEC rule, agreed that the court decision ''does limit the SEC's authority to use its disclosure authority to regulate substantive matters of corporate governance.''

The court of appeals, in addressing the SEC's broad claim of authority to enact the rule, said ''if Rule 19c-4 were validated on such broad grounds, the (SEC) would be able to establish a federal corporate law by using access to national capital markets as its enforcement mechanism.''

The court further said that the SEC did not have the authority to invalidate decisions on voting rights that shareholders had approved.

Paul Gonson, solicitor for the SEC, said ''we are very disappointed with the decision and are studying the opinion.'' He added that SEC officials would meet Tuesday night or Wednesday to discuss the decision.

There was some confusion as to whether internal rules enacted by the exchanges to comply with the former SEC rule would now be invalidated by the court's ruling.

But Rosenbaum said that under the ruling, exchanges would be allowed to maintain the one-share, one-vote rule if they so desired.

The debate over one-share, one-vote arose in 1984, when General Motors Corp. announced a plan to issue a second class of common stock that would have had only one-half vote each share.

That proposal ran counter to a New York Stock Exchange rule that required listed companies to provide one vote a share.

The NYSE announced that it planned to relax that rule because it was losing listings to other exchanges that had less stringent requirements, but the SEC prevented that by passing rule 19c-4.

Rule 19 of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 in general gives the SEC authority over rules enacted by self regulatory organizations such as stock exchanges.

LONDON (JUNE 13) UPI - Soviet dancer Irek Mukhamedov has resigned from the Bolshoi Ballet and joined Britain's Royal Ballet company, in what reports Wednesday called the first major artistic defection of the glasnost era.

The Home Office said it had granted Mukhamedov ''leave to remain'' in Great Britain in connection with a six-month work permit he had been issued for planned performances with the Royal Ballet for the 1990-91 dance season.

The Soviet performer, who critics have hailed as the world's most exciting dancer, arrived in Britain on June 3 to discuss his upcoming work as guest artist.

Royal Ballet spokeswoman Amanda Jones said that, after a meeting Tuesday, Mukhamedov sent a telex to the Bolshoi Ballet announcing his resignation, signed a five-year contract with the British company, and went out with his pregnant wife to look for an apartment.

''It is a major coup for us,'' she said. ''We have a number of principal dancers, of which he will be one.''

The Independent newspaper said the dancer had ''effected the first artistic defection of the glasnost era,'' the liberalization of Soviet society under President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The rather businesslike manner of Mukhamedov's taking up residence in Britain was in marked contrast to the defection of Rudolf Nureyev, who in 1961, as the last Soviet dancer to join the Royal Ballet, approached a police officer in Paris and asked for protection from two men nearby he said were KGB agents.

Jones said no response had yet come from the Bolshoi company, which The Independent said ''may now begin to have mixed feelings about the thaw in international relations.''

Government and dance officials seemed anxious to play down his defection, which they protrayed as a professional act with minimal political significance. Royal Ballet adminstrative director Anthony Russell-Roberts said Mukhamedov had no contractual obligations to the Bolshoi.

The head of the company, Anthony Dowell, said the Soviet dancer has ''a captivating talent and a magnetic stage presence.''

Mukhamedov, 30, joined the Bolshoi in 1981 and was hailed for his performances in Spartacus, Ivan the Terrible, Raymonda, The Golden Age, Don Quixote and Romeo and Juliet.

Jones said he was to appear during the 1990-91 season as the lead dancer in La Bayadere, Raymonda Act III and The Nutcracker, but his defection would mean an earlier appearance when the Royal Ballet's summer season begins on July 23.

''We have not yet worked out what he would do with us, but we want to get him on stage,'' she said.

MADRID, SPAIN (JUNE 13) UPI - Police raided the notorious Colombian Medellin cocaine cartel's 'Spanish terminal' in the rugged northwest Calicia region, arresting 16 people and destroying the facility, officials said Wednesday.

They said two other suspected drug traffickers were arrested in a simultaneous dawn raid in Madrid. Six of the arrested men were described as bosses of the Spanish drug mafia.

Residents of the Galician town of Arosa, where the drug facility had been operating for months, celebrated with street parties and fireworks.

The suspects were to be charged with selling drugs, mainly cocaine from Colombia and hashish from Africa and other Latin American sources, police said. They also faced charges they laundered drug money and traded illegal weapons.

Some of the group were also accused of smuggling several tons of American cigarets into Spain.

Police and judicial officials said they had planned the dual raids for months and had called to project Operation Pontevedra after the estuary were the illegal shipments were delivered.

DETROIT (JUNE 13) UPI - Contract talks between the United Auto Workers union and the Big Three carmakers are expected to begin in July, giving bargainers just under two months to beat a Sept. 14 deadline.

Company spokesmen said Tuesday the talks will commence July 18 at General Motors Corp., July 19 at Ford Motor Co. and July 20 at Chrysler Corp.

Union officials have indicated they want improved job security, a return to annual wage increases and cost-of-living adjustments for pension benefits, while the carmakers have been stressing their need to remain competitive with Japanese firms.

The opening of contract talks is largely ceremonial. Serious bargaining begins later with the formation of subcommittees to handle different issues. Top union and company executives start bargaining face-to-face in the weeks before the contracts expire.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The Army probably will not meet an April 1997 deadline for destroying its old chemical weapons and the destruction program will exceed current cost estimates, a congressional report released Wednesday said.

The report by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, was prepared at the request of Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a member of the Armed Services Committee and chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, and Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., who runs the House's Government Operations Committee.

The report noted that the Army has had trouble starting its first chemical weapons incinerator on Johnston Atoll in the Pacific Ocean. It termed the Army time frame estimates for getting state permits for additional incinerators ''unrealistic'' and took note of increased environmental restrictions adopted in recent years by state legislatures.

The Army now plans to have nine disposal sites, but the report said growing community opposition in three of the areas may result in a further extension of the congressionally ordered destruction deadline.

The report said cost estimates for the destruction program have doubled since 1985 from $1.7 billion to $3.4 billion, and will continue to grow because of delays in getting permits and building incinerators and the rising costs of construction, equipment and personnel.

At the Pentagon, an Army spokesman, Maj. Joe Padilla, said, ''We haven't seen the report and can't comment on the cost estimates. But I can say that we have asked Congress to allow us to extend that (1997 destruction) deadline to the end of 1998.''

The United States and the Soviet Union, at the Washington summit that concluded early this month, signed an agreement to pare back chemical weapons stockpiles over the next eight years to 5,000 tons per side and to quit making new weapons. If a worldwide ban on chemical weapons is agreed to, the remaining 5,000 tons will be destroyed.

In addition, because the Soviet Union's only destruction facility was closed after a public outcry over possible environmental and safety problems, the Army is discussing its incinerator technology with the Soviet Union and a Soviet military team in the fall will visit the Johnston Atoll site.

''In many ways, the problems we are experiencing with the disposal of our aging chemical weapons stockpile parallels our painful experience cleaning up our nuclear weapons complex,'' said Glenn.

''In both cases decommissioning and disposal pose significant environmental and technical challenges. In both cases we see cost estimates that appear to rise every time we turn our heads. And in both cases, the cost of lax management and inadequate oversight are too high to bear,'' he said.

Conyers said the weapons ''were originally sold to the American people as an inexpensive alternative to other weapons of similar destructive power'' but as the nation tries to get rid of the weapons it finds that the program is behind schedule and will cost more than expected.

The issue of whether flag-burning should be banned by a constitutional amendment is shaping up to be a major divisive factor in the November elections. The amendment is expected to pass through the House Judiciary Committee and should be on the House floor by next week. Both Republicans and Democrats expect a close vote.

STRASBOURG, FRANCE (JUNE 13) UPI - Black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, in an emotional speech to the European Parliament, insisted Wednesday that even a partial lifting of economic sanctions against a reforming South Africa would be unacceptable to his country's black majority.

The civil rights leader received a warm welcome from parliamentarians, who in December 1988 awarded him the Andrei Sakharov Human Rights Prize. He was unable to accept personally then because he was still in a South African prison.

Mandela told the deputies that Europe knows from experience that racism ''leads inevitably to genocide and to the most horrible crimes against humanity.''

As he had done in Paris, Geneva and Bonn during his current 14-nation, six-week tour of Europe, the United States and Africa, he insisted that full economic sanctions must remain in place despite efforts by South African President Frederik de Klerk to end apartheid.

''It is not yet the moment (to lift sanctions) because police repression is still part of the reality of our daily lives,'' he said. ''Our people continue to die in the province of Natal as a direct result of the fact of the system of apartheid.''

Last week, de Klerk lifted a state of emergency everywhere in South Africa except the troubled province of Natal, which is racked by violent black-on-black conflict between supporters of Mandela's African National Congress and a rival Zulu movement.

The nationwide state of emergency had for four years given police widespread powers to arrest suspects and search homes.

At a news conference following his speech, Mandela said even a partial lifting of sanctions would be contrary ''to the interests of the international community'' and unacceptable to his people.

''We could not accept even a partial symbolic lifting for sports, for example,'' Mandela said.

The 12 countries of the European Economic Community are to decide at a summit in Dublin at the end of June whether to maintain the sanctions. Most EC members, with the notable exception of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has unilaterally lifted some sanctions against Pretoria, support maintaining economic pressure on the South African government.

Asked at his news conference if it was necessary to continue the ANC's long armed struggle against apartheid, given the pace of reforms in his country he replied, ''We have been oppressed. The rules of the struggle depend on the oppressor.''

The emergency decree lifted last week was imposed on June 12, 1986, to curb an uprising in the country's black townships. Its end was one of the principal conditions posed by the ANC for agreeing to particiapte in power-sharing negotiations with the minority white rulers.

CHICAGO (JUNE 13) UPI - A 911 operator refused to dispatch an ambulance to care for a dying heart attack victim, then hung up before the victim's wife could consider any options, the woman charged Wednesday.

The victim's wife, Stella Shefts, said Wednesday she called 911 at 12:45 a.m. May 14 to request an ambulance to take her husband from their Southeast Side Chicago home to St. Margaret Hospital in Hammond, Ind.

But, she said, the 911 operator refused, saying she would only send an ambulance to take him to South Chicago Hospital and if she wanted her husband to go elsewhere she should call a private ambulance service. Before she could make a decision, Shefts said, the operator hung up on her.

"My husband was almost 80 years old and maybe he would have died anyway," Shefts told the Chicago Tribune. "But maybe that half hour or 20 minutes we had to wait would have saved his life."

Earl Larsen, a spokesman for the Fire Department, which handles all ambulance calls, said the incident is under investigation. "It is alleged our dispather said we do not go to St. Margaret's Hospital in Hammond," Larsen said. "We regularly pick up and go to St. Margaret's unless it is a trauma patient."

Larsen said the initial 911 call was handled by police communications, which then "fast forwarded the call to us." Larsen said between five and eight operators were working in the Englewood office at the time the call came in and the investigation would take a week.

Shefts said her husband, Stanley, had suffered heart attacks previously, so she recognized the signs. "He was breathing very, very heavily, in a cold sweat," Shefts said. She called 911 and said, "'I need an ambulance right away to take my husband to St. Margaret Hospital. He's having a heart attack.'

"She (the operator) said very nonchalantly, 'We can send an ambulance to take him to South Chicago Hospital.' I said, 'Why? The closest is St. Margaret in Hammond and his doctor is there. His doctor understands what to do for him."'

Shefts said the operator then told her to get her own ambulance. Shefts said the first ambulance company she called told her there would be a 45-minute wait but the second company was there in minutes.

Stanley Shefts was pronounced dead of cardiopulmonary arrest at St. Margaret's Hospital at 1:59 a.m. "He grabbed my hand and said, 'Don't leave me, Stell. I'll get over this,'" Shefts said. "I blame myself that I couldn't get him help."

KUWAIT (JUNE 13) UPI - The emir of Kuwait asked the crown prince Wednesday to form a new government to replace his old one, which resigned on Tuesday following elections for a newly created National Council, an official statement said.

Crown Prince Sheikh Saad al Abdullah al Sabah, who also doubles as prime minister, submitted the resignation of his 22-member government on Tuesday to Emir Sheikh Jaber al Ahmad al Sabah.

The government's resignation came one day after the announcement of final results of the oil-rich Arab emirate's general elections for 50 members of a 75-member interim National Council. The other 25 members will be appointed by the emir, who created the council this spring to quell months of sometimes violent pro-democracy protests.

The council, which will exist for four years, has been entrusted with drawing up guidelines for a future parliament. The emir disbanded the old house in 1986, at the height of the Iran-Iraq war, citing foreign subversion.

The crown prince was expected to name his new Cabinet next week, but political sources predicted it would be only slightly different from his old Cabinet, which was formed four years ago.

Sunday's election in Kuwait attracted a majority of eligible voters, despite an opposition call to boycott the elections because they were ''unconstitutional'' and left little power in the hands of the new legislature.

Most voters opted for pro-government candidates, according to interior ministry figures.

Women, policemen, soldiers and Kuwaiti citizens whose families have not lived in the rich Persian Gulf emirate for more than 30 years were not eligible to vote.

Oil-rich Kuwait enjoys one of the highest standards of living in the world - with fully-stocked supermarkets, free education and health care, and subsidized housing.

Kuwait is the first member of the Gulf Cooperation Council, which also includes Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Qatar, Oman and the United Arab Emirates, to hold national elections.

KAMPALA, UGANDA (JUNE 13) UPI - Up to 10 percent of Uganda's of 16 million people carry the AIDS-causing HIV virus, Prime Minister Samson Kisekka said in remarks published Wednesday.

''There is no problem in being frank on issues of national catastrophe such as the AIDS disease,'' Kisekka said at the official opening of Africa's first voluntary information center on AIDS in the Ugandan capital of Kampala Tuesday.

Kisekka said 6 percent to 10 percent of the population are HIV-positive.

The center, funded by various international donor agencies including U.S. AID and the World Health Organization, has received since February 3,000 people, about 30 percent of whom tested HIV positive.

At least 12,000 AIDS cases have been confirmed in the central African nation since the first case was diagnosed in 1982, according to the Ugandan national AIDS Control Program.

The World Health Organization said Tuesday the AIDS epidemic appears to be leveling off in the United States but surging at such an alarming pace in the Third World that the deadly virus may strike 20 million people by the year 2000.

Third World nations account for about 66 percent of HIV-infected people today, but will make up nearly 80 percent by 2000 and a staggering 90 percent by 2010, according to new WHO estimates.

In some cities in central and eastern Africa, up to 20 percent of young adults are infected.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Barbara Bush, who never publicly deviates from her husband's views on controversial issues, sided Wednesday with President Bush when asked whether she favored a constitutional amendment banning flag burning.

''I'm with the president,'' Mrs. Bush responded to several questions regarding flag burning while standing beside former Chief Justice Warren Burger on the South Lawn to congratulate student winners of a historical map contest.

Burger, asked to comment on the Supreme Court's decision to strike down a law against flag burning, said, ''I don't wrap myself in the flag. I'm afraid I'll get burned.''

Pressed further, Burger said, ''Last year's coach shouldn't be telling this year's coach how to be running the team.''

Burger heads the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, which sponsored the map contest.

The winners of the competition, including 35 fifth-graders from The King's Academy, West Palm Beach, Fla.; 20 seventh- and eighth-graders from St. Andrews School of Tipton, Mo., and Be Do, a 17-year-old Vietnamese girl and a senior at Long Beach High School, Long Beach, Miss.

When the students were asked their position on the flag amendment, they all raised their hands in support.

The amendment is expected to pass through the House Judiciary Committee and should be on the House floor by next week. Both Republicans and Democrats expect a close vote.

HARARE, ZIMBABWE (JUNE 13) UPI - A multi-million-dollar insider trading scandal has rocked the Zimbabwe Stock Exchange, the world's smallest, cutting its six members by a third, newspapers reported Wednesday.

Exchange authorities suspended two members, apparently after the free-spending ways of one attracted attention, and are recommending that legal action be taken against two bankers.

The scandal apparently revolves around the Kadoma Consolidated Industries, which recently issued $16 million worth of stock at 64 cents a share through Standard Chartered merchant bankers. The shares closed Tuesday at 72 cents.

''There have been irregularities in respect of certain share dealings by members of the stock exchange,'' exhange chairman Tom Williams said without elaborating.

Williams did not name the pair, who resigned from their firm, Sagit Stockbrokers, but the local media have identified them as Jeremy Cochran and Amos Nota.

The stock exchange had more than 40 members before Zimbabwe's 1980 independence from British colonial rule.

President Robert Mugabe and his socialist government confiscated all foreign shares traded on the market in 1984 in a bid for foreign exchange, which pared membership drastically.

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (JUNE 13) UPI - Tamil guerrillas attacked four military camps in eastern Sri Lanka hours before a scheduled cease-fire was to begin Wednesday, killing at least five soldiers and wounding 12 others, police said.

The attacks marked the fourth day in less than a week that the rebel Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam clashed with Sri Lankan security forces, the first such violence since the departure in March of Indian soldiers.

Police also said that 750 police officers from the eastern Batticaloa District had been captured from police stations by the rebels since Monday and that at least 117 of them, including Ivan Boteju, an assistant superintendent of police, had been killed.

They said the police officers were killed in jungle areas near Tirukkovil, about 30 miles south of Batticaloa, but did not provide further details.

A senior police official said the other police officers had not been accounted for, adding that he was concerned that as many as 500 officers may have been killed.

Military officials said heavy fighting erupted Wednesday morning after Tiger guerrillas attacked four military camps in Batticaloa, killing at least five soldiers and wounding 12 others.

There seemed to be ''no sign'' of a cease-fire which was supposed to begin at noon, the official said.

The government announced the cease-fire Tuesday in the wake of rebel attacks on four army camps that left at least 66 dead and more than 100 wounded.

Wednesday, the Tigers also captured two police stations - one in the northwestern port city of Mannar, 160 miles north of Colombo, and another in the northern town of Vavuniya, about 45 miles southeast of Mannar, the senior police official said.

He said that more troops had been ordered to the areas from the country's southern province.

Tamil militants since 1983 have fought a bloody war for independence in their strongholds of northern and eastern Sri Lanka, claiming that they have been persecuted by the majority Buddhist Sinhalese who dominate the government.

The Tigers are the most powerful separatist group and control vast areas of the northern and eastern provinces. The group has demanded that elections be held, but Colombo has refused until the Tigers disarm.

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA (JUNE 13) UPI - President Carlos Menem shrugged off his most recent marital crisis, which resulted in the eviction of his wife from the presidential mansion, as ''an old story'' in an interview Wednesday.

Menem broke a two-day public silence on his latest spat with his spouse, Zulema, by telling Radio Mitre that he had similar fights with her ''two or three times'' while he was governor of La Rioja province in the 1980s.

''This is an old story that I don't want to talk about any more,'' tried to enter the 14-square-block walled presidential compound in the suburb of Olivos where their official residence is located.

Tuesday night, Carlos Facundo castigated his father on a television program for having ordered the armed presidential guard to ban their entrance, saying, ''This is worse than a dictatorship. We were left in the street. We don't have clothes or anything.''

Zulema sent a telegram to her husband Tuesday saying she would take unspecified legal action within 24 hours to ''recover my furniture and personal effects.''

Menem abandoned the residence in Olivos on May 8 after a highly publicized fight with his wife, who allegedly embarrassed her husband by participating in a plot to plaster downtown Buenos Aires with wall posters accusing the president's brother, Sen. Eduardo Menem, and two ministers and a congressman of corrupution.

She has denied any connection with the posters.

But in recent interviews with reporters, including United Press International, she attacked corruption in a general way, and on Tuesday, when she was turned away from the presidential palace, she yelled to reporters, ''The country has been taken over by total corruption.''

There was widespread expectation that Menem would take steps to oust his wife from the presidential mansion when he returned Sunday from a two-week trip abroad, and on Tuesday the legal secretary of the president, Raul Granillo Ocampo, said the president was enforcing his authority to determine who will live in the Olivos compound.

He said Menem and his wife ''can't live together any longer.''

Zulema's press secretary, Marilu Giovanelli, told reporters the first lady's personal offices in Olivos were searched and ''surrounded by army troops,'' who customarily guard the president.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The World Bank Wednesday said it has approved $680 million in loans to Venezuela for the revamping of the country's financial system, the privatization of its public enterprises and the reduction of its foreign debt.

An initial $300 million loan would support Venezuela's financial sector adjustment, a second $350 million loan would help the country reform its public enterprises, and a third $30 million loan would be used in a technical assistance project for preinvestment and institutional development, the World Bank indicated.

According to the multilateral organization, the government of President Carlos Andres Perez has the option of applying 25 percent - or $162.5 million - of the two larger loans to support debt-reduction schemes under a plan to be approved by the bank.

In June 1989, the World Bank approved a $402 million loan to Venezuela for economic structural adjustment, and a $353 million loan to support the country's foreign trade policy reforms. At the same time, the bank authorized Venezuela to use $187.5 million for debt-reduction purposes. The International Monetary Fund also approved that Venezuela use part of the IMF's lending to reduce debt to private banks.

The country has reached an agreement in principle with its creditor banks on a debt-reduction program. Venezuela's external debt is $29 billion, with about two-thirds owed to private banks.

The reforms to be supported by the $300 million financial sector loan will liberalize financial policies, reduce the government's role in financial intermediation and strengthen the competitiveness of financial institutions.

The World Bank noted that Venezuela plans to liberalize foreign ownership of financial institutions, privatize three commercial banks owned by the Central Bank, and liquidate the Agricultural Development Bank. The Industrial Bank, the largest public commercial bank, will be restructured.

The $250 million public enterprise reform loan will support the government's effort to reduce the dominance of the public sector in the economy, improve the environment for the private sector, and increase the efficiency of public enterprises.

The bank said that over the next two years, the reform program will focus on restructuring about 11 key public enterprises, privatization of about 100 public enterprises, and establishing a "clear institutional relationship between the government and public enterprises."

The $30 million technical assistance loan will support studies and institutional restructuring required to prepare investment projects which could be eligible for World Bank financing.

MONROVIA, LIBERIA (JUNE 13) UPI - The flood of foreigners fleeing Liberia in fear of a bloody fight for control of the capital fell to a trickle Wednesday, the fifth day of relative calm in the country's six-month civil war.

Fewer than 20 people availed themselves of a convoy organized by the British Embassy in Monrovia, which left Wednesday morning for a 10- to 12-hour drive over rough roads to Freetown in neighboring Sierra Leone.

''I think those that wanted to leave have already left,'' said British Ambassador Michael Gore as he waved goodbye to the five-car convoy.

The West German Embassy planned a small airlift of German citizens Thursday.

An exodus of Westerners, mainly U.S. citizens, from the war-torn west African country began last week. On Sunday, some 360 Americans and dependents were flown out of Liberia on three Air Guinea charter flights.

Last week, the United States advised some 3,300 Americans living in Liberia to leave the country as rebel forces outside Monrovia awaited orders to advance on the capital. It is not known how many Americans and other foreigners have left Liberia.

Troops loyal to rebel leader Charles Taylor, who has sworn to depose President Samuel Doe at whatever the cost, remained less than 35 miles from the capital Wednesday, apparently awaiting the outcome of peace talks in Freetown.

In Monrovia, a wave of bizarre killings and mutilations, seemingly tribally motivated, has driven the populace off the streets by night.

Taylor's agreement Friday to send representatives to the talks in Freetown lifted the immediate threat of a firefight for the capital. By Wednesday, government and rebels were fighting a desultory skirmishing war through the trees of the Bridgestone-Firestone rubber plantation bordering Monrovia's Robertsfield International Airport.

International concern over murders in the capital and the suspicion that renegade army units were behind them led the Ministry of Defense to mount special night-time patrols and set up a special court-martial to try suspected offenders.

Three soldiers accused of murdering a local mayor were to stand trial Wednesday afternoon.

''The problem is that most of these guys wandering around with guns are not normally even garrisoned here,'' said one Western diplomat, who asked not to be identified. ''The chief of staff himself has been out trying to round some of these guys up and take their weapons away.''

Of those foreigners who left with the British convoy, about half appeared to have planned trips to Europe in any case.

''I was planning to go to England anyway to accept two fire trucks on behalf of the airport,'' said Norman Freemantle, 59, director of fire services at the Bridgestone-Firestone plantation.

Freemantle has lived in Liberia for 15 years and has no intention of leaving.

''It says on my helmet: 'I shall return. N. Freemantle,''' he said. ''This is my home.''

DES MOINES, IA (JUNE 13) UPI - A St. Paul, Minn., man suspected of taking 31,000 rare books and manuscripts stolen from 140 colleges and universities across North America pleaded innocent Wednesday and will be released from custody.

U.S. Magistrate Celeste Bremer said Stephen Blumberg, 41, will be released to the custody of his father, Henry Blumberg, a retired St. Paul physician.

Stephen Blumberg was ordered to submit to a handwriting exam and will be restricted to travel only in the St. Paul area. In addition, Blumberg will submit to electronic monitoring.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Linda Reade said the government had dropped its objections to releasing Blumberg. She said the conditions of release were adequate to protect the public.

Blumberg's trial was set for Aug. 6 in Des Moines.

Authorities raided an Ottumwa house owned by Blumberg last March and found 21,000 rare books and 10,000 valuable letters and manuscripts stacked on rows of shelves. The collection included an eighth-century book of music and a 1480 Bible.

In U.S. District Court in Des Moines, Blumberg has been charged with receiving and possessing stolen goods worth more than $5,000 and knowingly taking them across state lines.

If convicted, Blumberg could face 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Blumberg underwent a psychiatric examination at a federal prison in Springfield, Mo.

Family members said Blumberg has been in and out of psychiatric treatment since age 15 and police records show he has a long arrest record for burglary and trespassing at various university libraries and abandoned homes dating back to 1974.

PAHUTE MESA, NE (JUNE 13) UPI - Scientists set off an underground nuclear explosion at the Nevada Test Site Wednesday, triggering tremors felt 85 miles away in Las Vegas.

The weapons-related device, code named ''Bullion'' with a yield of between 20 to 150 kilotons, was detonated on schedule at 9 a.m. The bomb that was dropped on Nagasaki, Japan, in 1945 had a 23-kiloton force and 150 kilotons is equal to 150 tons of TNT.

The test was viewed by Stephen Ledogar, U.S. ambassador to the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva, and some members of his staff. A spokesman for the Department of Energy said Ledogar was there for a briefing on the operations at the test site and it had nothing to do with negotiations with the Russians.

Department spokesman Berek Scammell said there were no leaks of radioactive gases but several people in Las Vegas called to report they felt the earth shake at the time of the explosion.

The department had warned managers of high-rise building in Las Vegas not to have workers in precarious locations at the time of the detonation.

Scammell said 10 people demonstrated at the gates to the test site but they were peaceful.

It was the second announced test this year and brings the total number at the Nevada Test since to 701 since testing began in 1951.

The total number of tests announced by the United States since the signing of the Limited Test Ban Treaty in 1964 is 496. The only other test conducted this year was code-named ''Metropolis'' and was fired on March 10.

LONDON (JUNE 13) UPI - Stock prices closed broadly higher in brisk trading Wednesday on the London International stock exchange, lifting the key Financial Times Stock Index above the psychological 2,400 barrier.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which climbed 21.9 points Tuesday, catapulted 34.7 points to 2,405.4.

It was only the second time since the Black Monday crash of 1987 that the key index, which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, closed above the 2,400-level. The narrower top 30 industrial average climbed 32.2 points to 1,933.1.

Volume amounted to around 612 million shares compared with 434 million shares changing hands Tuesday.

Analysts said the market was encouraged by hopes of early British entry into the European Exchange Rate Mechanism, and by the possibility of eventual cuts in local interest rates.

Analysts said prices moved higher despite news from the Bank of England which reportedly signaled its desire for key interest rates to remain at 15 percent, the level of bank base lending rates since last October.

Britain's central bank said it would not invite bill offers despite having forecast a money market liquidity shortage of around $660 million, revised from an earlier estimated of around $740 million. Instead, the bank invited discount houses to borrow at 15 percent, the current level for base rates.

Analysts noted the bank used the same phrasing it usually employs to signal a change in rates, which market watchers said they viewed as a signal that the bank disapproves of a downward trend in interest rates.

Elsewhere on the economic front, the Central Statistical Office reported Britain's current account was in deficit by about a revised $7.81 billion in the first quarter of 1990, from the $8.40 billion previously reported.

The government said the revision in the first quarter was due to enhanced reporting on invisible trade data, which the agency attributed to more detailed reporting by British banks.

On the trading floor, among the most widely traded stocks, British Aerospace surged 35 cents to $9.05 after a local brokerage house upgraded the company's earnings forecast.

International telecommunications giant, Cable and Wireless gained 14 cents to $9.10 after reporting its latest pretax profits climbed 25 percent.

In a strong retail sector, Kingfisher climbed 22 cents to $5.92 and Mark and Spencer gained 17 cents to $3.90 amid speculation the retail store would benefit from Britain's full entry into the exchange-rate mechanism of the European Monetary System.

Among some of the day's other highlights, Racal Telecom gained eight cents to $5.87, Racal Electronics gained eight cents to $3.45, Argos gained ten cents to $3.74, and Cater Allen gained nine cents to $6.72.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The National Science Foundation announced Wednesday it was increasing the speed of its nationwide computer network by 28 times to create the fastest coast-to-coast computing pathway of its kind.

The National Science Foundation Network, or NSFNET, will increase the amount of data it can carry by the end of the year from 1.5 million bits to 45 megabits, officials said.

Last week, the NSF announced a three-year project to fund research aimed at creating a very high-speed computer network - one that could transmit at least 1 billion bits of information per second.

The $7.9 million upgrade announced Wednesday will mean the network, which can currently transmit almost 200,000 characters per second or the equivalent of 50 single-spaced typed pages per second, will be able to carry more than 5 million characters per second or the equivalent of 1,400 single-spaced typed pages per second.

''It's the difference between riding a horse and traveling by jet aircraft '' said Stephen Wolff, director of the communications research division at the NSF.

The increased speed will allow researchers nationwide to pool the power of their computers, especially supercomputers, to conduct more complex research and develop new computer applications, officials said.

''The implementation of the first coast-to-coast (high-speed) network represents an unprecedented advance in the technological capacity of national computer networking,'' said Wolff.

For example, the faster network should enable greater use of graphics and the development of more powerful models, such as those needed to better predict the weather, officials said.

''Faster speeds mean faster solutions to the world's problems,'' said Frank Moore of IBM, which is providing equipment for upgrade. ''Our nation will benefit from the new applications possible with the faster network.''

NSFNET is a cooperative effort among the NSF, IBM, MCI Communications, the State of Michigan and the Merit Computer Network, which operates the network from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. The network links more than 1,500 university, industry and government research networks.

The first portion of the upgraded system will involve installing high-speed equipment at six regional networks based at the Cornell Supercomputing Center in Ithaca, N.Y., the Pittsburgh Supercomputing Center in Pittsburgh, Pa., the Merit Computer Network in Ann Arbor, Mich., the National Center for Supercomputer Applications in Champaign-Urbana, Ill., the San Diego Supercomputer Center in San Diego, Calif., and the Bay Area Research Network in Palo Alto, Calif.

In addition, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology/New England Academic and Research Network in Cambridge, the Argonne National Laboratory in Argonne, Ill., will join the network at high speed capacity while the Georgia Institute of Technology will be added initially at low speed.

FREETOWN, SIERRA LEONE (JUNE 13) UPI - Talks between Liberian rebels and the government appeared stalled Wednesday despite a pledge by rebel negotiators to hold elections by the end of the year if they come to power diplomatic sources said.

The two sides agreed on an agenda for the talks and the atmosphere was described as ''courteous and understanding'' but no progress was announced at the end of the Wednesday morning session at the U.S. Embassy in Freetown.

Political observers have predicted there will be little progress in the negotiations to end the six-month civil war because both sides have refused to yield on the major sticking point - the rebels insistence that President Samuel Doe resign.

However, the sources said both sides were willing to continue the negotiations in Sierra Leone, which began Tuesday under the auspicies of Liberian church leaders.

''Most of the people in that room are old friends who have worked together in the past and been involved in politics together for many years,'' one negotiator said. ''It is only now that we are sitting at opposite ends of the table.''

Rebel leader Charles Taylor has promised in the past to hold elections if he comes to power but the statement at the peace talks marked the first time the rebels had set a timetable for the voting.

The next regular elections in Liberia are not scheduled until the end of 1991 and Doe, who seized power in a bloody 1980 coup, has promised he will not run again for office.

It was not known how the government negotiatiors reacted to the rebel promise.

''The discussions have been very courteous and very understanding,'' J.K. Leve Molton, a spokesman for the church group told reporters. But he and others refused to reveal the agreed-upon agenda or give further details about the talks.

Since the discussions began Tuesday the rebels have restated that they will not agree to a cease-fire until Doe and his government resign.

''Samuel Doe is the object of this struggle,'' chief rebel negotiator Tom Woiwoiyu told reporters. ''If he goes, Liberians can then get together.''

Fighting in the West African country has come to a near standstill since both sides agreed to the talks last weekend, with government troops in firm control of Robertsfield International Airport outside the Liberian capital of Monrovia and the rebels still holding the Bridgestone-Firestone rubber plantation that adjoins the airport.

Tambakai Jangamba, who is heading the government delegation to the talks, said Liberia had developed a democratric tradition that the rebels were attempting to bypass.

''Liberia in the past 10 years under Dr. Samuel Doe has experienced a revolution, a revolution inspired by the longing of our people for freedom justice and humanity,'' Jangamba said.

Liberia experts say, however, that after a 1985 coup attempt to overthrow Doe the president's minority Krahn tribe began a campaign of murder and torture against members of rival tribes.

Experts and human rights groups estimate that under Doe's 10-year-old rule more than 17,000 people have been forced to leave their homes and that thousands have been killed in the tribal fighting.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Three Soviet warships carrying some 800 sailors will visit San Diego from July 31 to Aug. 4 as part of an exchange agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union, the Pentagon announced Wednesday.

The three ships will moor at San Diego Naval Station on July 31 for the five-day port visit.

A Navy official said the Soviet ships will include two destroyers, the Admiral Vinogradov and the Boyevoy, and an oiler, the Argun.

Adm. Charles Larson, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, will host his counterpart, Soviet Adm. Gennadij Alexandrovich Khvatov, commander of the Soviet Pacific Ocean Fleet, the Pentagon said.

As part of the exchange, three U.S. Navy ships will vist Vladivostock in the Soviet Far East from Sept. 10-14, the Pentagon said.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 13) UPI - President Corazon Aquino signed a bill Wednesday outlawing the Philippine mail-order bride business, a practice she denounced as a form of ''exploitation in utter disregard of human dignity.''

The measure declares as unlawful the advertisement, publication, printing or distribution of any brochure, flier or material promoting the solitication of Philippine women for marriage to foreigners.

It also prohibits the solicitation or inducement of any Philippine woman to join any club or association whose objective is to match women for marriage to foreign nationals on a mail order basis or through personal introductions for a fee.

Penalty for violation of the law ranges from six to eight years and a fine of not less than $350.

''The mail-order bride is a relatively new phenomenon in our society, but its perpetrators are many,'' Aquino said in signing the bill passed by the Philippine Congress.

Aquino said many of the victims are young women from remote villages lured by ''sweet talk and grandiose promises.''

''We make real a measure to protect Filipino women from exploitation in utter disregard of human dignity,'' Aquino said upon signing the bill into law Wednesday.

Figures were not immediately available for the number of women who have been married to foreigners through the mail-order services. The most popular destinations are Australia and West Germany.

Covered by the law are marriage brokers, pen pal clubs, introduction bureaus, escort services and sister-city arrangements.

Although Aquino is trying to prevent the exploitation of Philippine women by promulgating the law, the latest measure does not place restrictions on women going abroad to work in such countries as Japan as entertainers.

NEW YORK (JUNE 13) UPI - The lower 48 states' rate of decline in crude oil output is easing but May imports accounted for more than half of all U.S. oil for the third time in the past year, the oil industry reported Wednesday.

In its monthly report, the industry's American Petroleum Institute also said the nation's electric power industry shifted last year toward nuclear power and away from fossil fuels.

''Nearly half of newly added generation capacity in 1989 was nuclear,'' the API said.

May domestic crude oil production including Alaska fell 475,000 barrels a day, or 6.1 percent, to 7.3 million barrels daily.

But daily output from the lower 48 states only declined 290,000 barrels, or 5 percent, ''continuing to show lesser year-to-year declines than evident in 1989,'' the API report said.

''This may be evidence that recent increases in well servicing and oil drilling activity have had some impact on production levels,'' it said.

The report did not mention horizontal drilling, an expanding technique that oil companies say is allowing the retrieval of crude not recoverable by traditional vertical-drilling methods.

Still, imports jumped to 8.5 million barrels a day in May, an 11.7 percent increase over a year ago, the report said.

''Partly because of seasonally lower demand at this time of year, the month's unusually strong imports amounted to more than 52 percent of domestic deliveries,'' the report said.

''This is the third time that the 50 percent mark has been exceeded on a momthly basis in the past year. The only other period during which total imports' share passed the half-way point was for a few months in 1977,'' the API said.

Partly as a result of the higher imports, May crude oil inventories rose 12 million barrels over April to nearly 384 million barrels, ''roughly 40 million barrels above the average for the previous five Mays,'' the API said.

In addition to the rise in nuclear power, API said electric companies' substitution of less expensive natural gas also played a role in the overall sluggishness in demand for residual, or industrial, fuel oil.

Deliveries of residual fuel oil fell 3.3 percent in May from a year ago to an average of 1.1 million barrels daily while average inventories rose 7.7 percent to 45.9 million barrels.

The report, however, said, ''During the winter months, electricity generation from all three fossil fuel groups (coal, petroleum and natural gas) fell while nuclear and hydro-powered generation each grew by more than 20 percent.''

Although no new nuclear plants have been ordered since the 1979 Three Mile Island catastrophe, 47 previously ordered plants have been licensed since then - four of them in 1989, a spokesman for the nuclear industry said.

Another six are expected to be licensed for operation in the next five or six years, the nuclear spokesman said. He said there are currently 112 nuclear power plants operating in the United States, making nuclear the nation's second largest source of electric power next to coal.

Delayed annual maintenance turnarounds from heating oil to gasoline production and other maintenance problems resulted in lower refinery activity in May from a year ago, the API report said.

''For the month as a whole, input to distillation units averaged a decline of a little less than 1 percent and gasoline production dropped about 3 percent versus last May,'' the report said.

It said gasoline deliveries, which had been even with year-ago levels for the first four months of 1990, fell 1.3 percent in May from a year ago to an average of 7.3 million barrels daily.

Average daily gasoline inventories fell 3.5 million barrels from April to 216.5 million barrels, 3.2 percent less than the 223.6 million barrels of a year ago, the report said.

''Though close to the lower end of the 215 to 235 million-barrel range of recent prior Mays, this was still about 12 million barrels above the estimated minimum operating level,'' the report said.

Following the 13th month of continued growth in airline travel since the dip after the March 1989 strike of Eastern Airlines, May kerosene jet fuel deliveries jumped 14.4 percent over a year ago to a daily average of 1.2 million barrels, API said.

Although deliveries of jet fuel and growth in airline travel do not always track in the short term, ''they tend to grow at similar rates over time,'' the report said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., moved Wednesday to squelch speculation that he would enter this year's Connecticut gubernatorial race, but did not rule out a future bid for governor.

Despite behind-the-scenes activity by political allies to lay the groundwork for the second-term senator to be drafted for the gubernatorial nomination, Dood said, ''Unequivocally I am not pursuing a candidacy nor am I willing to be drafted.''

During a news conference in his Washington office, Dodd, 46, also said he has not yet decided whether to run for re-election when his Senate term expires in 1992 and held out the possibility he would run for governor down the road.

''At some future date, the idea of coming home ... and being the governor of the state has an appeal to me,'' Dodd said. ''I won't deny that.''

He said he decided against seeking the governorship now because ''the idea of giving up something that you do enjoy and, I believe, I do a fairly good job at ... is just something I wasn't prepared to do.''

At the same time, Dodd refused to throw his support to either of the two Democrats vying for the party's nomination, Rep. Bruce Morrison or state Rep. William Cibes Jr., and said he may not endorse either candidate. He did say he thought both men could win in the general election.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - A Senate subcommittee deferred action Wednesday on restricting National Endowment for the Arts grants to allow time to work out a compromise on the issue of federal funding for controversial art.

The education, arts and humanities subcommittee of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee voted 11-0 in favor a bill authorizing $175 million in NEA spending in the 1991 fiscal year, but left consideration of any amendments to place restriction on grants up to the full committee.

The action came a day after the White House, yielding to pressure from conservatives in Congress, indicated a need for closer screening of NEA grant applications to prevent federal support for ''obscene material.''

The controversy stems largely from NEA backing last year of a Robert Mapplethorpe photography exhibit featuring homoerotic subjects and an exhibit that included a Andres Serrano photograph of a crucifix in a bottle of urine.

The Senate panel deferred action to give more time for negotiations within the full committee on a possible compromise, congressional sources said. Similiar talks were under way in the House Education and Labor Committee.

While pressure for restricting funds or axing the NEA has come from conservatives, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, warned against playing politics with the issue during the Senate subcommittee meeting.

''It is easy for conservatives to blast this bill and blast the NEA,'' Hatch said. ''A lot of the criticism is justified, but a lot of it is political.''

The administration still would prefer that Congress pass a five-year reauthorization of the NEA with no restrictions. But in view of the questions that have been raised, it has urged at least reauthorization for 1991 while an independent commission reviews the grant process.

The administration also has agreed to what deputy White House press secretary Alixe Glen described as ''discussions'' - rather than negotiations - of ''reasonable and limited measures to ensure the grant-making process is sound.''

''We don't think Congress by statute should say what is art and what is obscenity,'' she said. ''But if we can agree to reasonable measures to ensure that federal funds are not going to inappropriate artistic shows, we could support that.''

In general, she said, White House participation in those talks has been limited to ''a listening mode.'' The White House does not appear to share the concern expressed by conservatives about the NEA, noting the agency has awarded some 85,000 grants over 25 years, ''maybe 20 of which have been controversial.''

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 13) UPI - Jan Urban, the chairman of the pro-Democracy Civic Forum that brought an end to 42 years of communist rule in Czechoslvakia, has quit politics, the independent newspaper Lidove Noviny reported Wednesday.

The announcement did not surprise many people in Prague.

''In fact, I am only fulfilling what I promised,'' the tall, smiling Urban told Lidove Noviny, in a front-page interview.

''I said I wanted to leave back in December,'' Mr. Urban observed. ''I only stayed to help overcome the obstacles caused by the quick departure of many people, especially Petr Pithart, briefly Forum leader and now premier of the Czech national government.''

Urban said he left in part because he ''did not want to slip into tactical politics'' as negotiations over forming a new government began.

Last weekend, Czechoslovakia held its first free parliamentary elections in 44 years. Twenty-two parties competed, and Civic Forum and sister party Public Against Violence won 164 seats in the 300-seat Parliament, a majority.

On Tuesday, President Vaclav Havel opened discussions on forming a new coalition government, which is likely to include Civic Forum, its Slovak sister-organization Public Against Violence and the Slovak Christian Democratic Movement.

''I feel a big part of my life is ending. It is only today that I feel I can finally stop being a dissident,'' said Urban, responding to questions on the election results.

Urban added that from Nov. 17 until the election, he had only half a day of rest.

A participant in the Nov. 17 demonstration, the brutal repression of which sparked the Velvet Revolution, Urban was a founding father of Civic Forum.

A troubleshooter and a mediator deep in the engine room of the revolution, Urban was particularly important as a moral figure aside who could make decisions.

Urban's retirement may also be seen as part of a broader Civic Forum strategy.

As the movement loses its revolutionary momentum, it must transform itself into a functioning political organization.

Rather than becoming a party with a particular economic and political platform to push, Forum wants to become an ombudsman for democracy, with a full-time staff in every town.

But at least until the next elections, two years from now, Forum will face a number of political challenges as it struggles to pass a new constitution and fundamental reforms through Parliament.

Senior Civic Forum sources admit that Urban's departure is not a disservice, if he can be called back later to help the organization.

From the beginning of the revolution, Urban spurned political office, even when Havel and his closest circle moved into the President's Castle and ministries.

Urban finally agreed to head the Forum when its second group of leaders, including Pithart, left for government posts, and Civic Forum's popularity plunged.

A dissident since his youth, Urban was barred from university studies, and taught high school in southern Bohemia until he got the boot for human-rights activism. He worked as a horse trainer and bricklayer, and as a journalist with Radio Free Europe and the underground ''East European Information Agency.''

NAIROBI, Kenya (JUNE 13) UPI - Ethiopian rebels claimed Wednesday they had killed more than 1,200 troops in four days of heavy fighting, beating off a government offensive, a rebel radio report monitored in Nairobi said.

The Tigray People's Liberation Front said they had killed 1,200 troops, captured 159 and wounded 1,360 in battles around the towns of Jihur and Inewari, 85 miles north of the capital, Addis Ababa.

Rebel radio said the TPLF also had repulsed a June 5-8 government offensive, safeguarding rebel positions around the town of Alem Katema, 100 miles north of Addis Ababa.

No mention was made of rebel losses. There was no immediate independent confirmation of the TPLF claims.

Late last December government forces had pushed the TPLF further north, but in March the rebels said they had started to advance south into the capital province of Shewa.

The radio also said the other main Ethiopian insurgent movement, the Eritrean Peoples Liberation Front, had destroyed a radar tower in Asmara, the government-held capital of Eritrea province, 400 miles north of Addis Ababa.

The TPLF is an army of at least 25,000 regulars, plus up to 30,000 hangers-on, that has grown significantly since it began its armed struggle with the government in 1975 for autonomy for the Tigray province.

Eritreans have been fighting the Ethiopian government for autonomy in Eritrea for well over two decades.

If Ethiopia were to give up the two provinces, it would become a landlocked country and lose its valuable ports on the Red Sea.

GALVESTON, TEXAS (JUNE 13) UPI - An oil spill from the disabled tanker Mega Borg poses little or no threat to the Flower Garden reefs, the Gulf of Mexico's northernmost living coral reef, scientists said.

The Flower Gardens are twin reefs located about 110 miles south-southeast of Galveston in shallow, clear water. The Mega Borg has been pouring light crude oil into the Gulf 57 miles southeast of Galveston since it was rocked by an explosion early Saturday.

The Flower Gardens are popular with sport divers and later this year are expected to become a federally designated marine sanctuary.

Ralph Lopez, Gulf and Caribbean regional manager for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said Tuesday seasonal winds and currents are carrying the oil away from the reefs.

The 60 feet of water over the reefs should protect them from any surface contamination, he said, and their distance from the stricken tanker will greatly dilute any oil that moves toward the reefs.

The reefs have 18 species of coral, about 200 species of Atlantic reef fish and more than 400 species of reef invertebrates, such as sponges, said Thomas Bright, professor of oceanography at Texas A&M and director of the university's Sea Grant program.

MANNHEIM, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 13) UPI - A West German industrialist accused of helping Libya build a poison gas plant conceded Wednesday he had been involved in the construction of what Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi claims is a pharmaceutical factory.

Juergen Hippenstiel-Immhausen, in a surprise statement on the third day of his trial, said he had signed the deal for the construction of the plant in 1984, after he had been approached by Iraqi businessman Ishan Barbouti.

Barbouti is claimed to have organized several business deals for Gadhafi in the past.

Hippenstiel-Immhausen admitted to the West German court that he had organized the sale of blueprints, technology and equipment to Libya without authorization from the West German authorities, and in violation of export laws.

The former head of the Immhausen-Chemie firm said the charges against him were mostly correct, but only referred to a ''chemical installation''. He made no comment on the claim the plant in Rabta, 40 miles south of Tripoli was built for the production of lethal chemical weapons.

The U.S. and West German authorities have claimed the Rabta installation recently started test production of poison gas, but authorities in Tripoli have denied the claim and said the plant was a normal pharmaceutical products factory.

Hippenstiel-Immhausen told the court that, in 1984, he signed a $150 million deal with Barbouti for planning and participation in the construction of the installation.

He said the West German state-owned firm Salzgitter Industriebau GmbH, or SIG, had also been involved in the planning of the plant and that the manager of SIG had been aware that the project was ''officially'' for Hong Kong but ''unofficially'' for Libya.

Hippenstiel-Immhausen also admitted he had failed to declare the profits from the operation to the West German tax authorities.

He said he had earned the equivament in marks of almost $12 million from the deal and had used the money to buy shares in a Hong Kong firm, which built a pharmaceutical plant to serve as a front for the deal with Libya.

He said Barbouti also owned shares in the Hong Kong company.

The 49-year-old West German industrialist said he had pulled out of the deal with Libya in 1988, when he saw media reports claiming West German firms were helping Libya build a chemical weapons plant.

He said it was obvious he would not be able to complete his side of the deal and that, as a result, Libya would not meet all payments.

NEW YORK (JUNE 13) UPI - Despite more than a year of denial by authorities that the gang rape of a woman jogger in Central Park was racially motivated, potential jurors at the start of the trial of three youths charged in the attack were asked Wednesday about their views on race.

Six out of 54 inquiries on questionnaires handed out to about 60 potential jurors focus on attitudes toward race, including whether potential jurors attended integrated schools, live in racially mixed neighborhoods and have friends of another race.

''Do you believe that persons are racially discriminated against in this country?'' one question asks.

In the year since a white woman jogger was allegedly gang-raped by black and Hispanic youths, both police and Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau have denied the attack was racially motivated.

Published reports after the attack indicated someone in the gang shouted ''Let's get some whities!''

Lawyers for both sides submitted suggestions for the questionnaires and the racial questions were written by the defense, said an attorney for one of the youths. A Morgenthau spokesman, Gerald McKelvey, declined to comment.

Defense attorneys for the six youths accused of rape and attempted murder have claimed that racial discrimination did play a part in the case. They said police anxious to make a quick arrest in the sensational case rounded up their clients simply because of their race.

Three youths went on trial Wednesday. Three others will be tried later.

The three on trial in State Supreme Court are Antron McCray, 16, Yusef Salaam, 16, and Raymond Santana, 15. They are charged in the April 19, 1989, attack on the 29-year-old investment banker who was beaten, raped and left for dead.

Prosecutors said they were members of the gang of youths who entered the park to go ''wilding'' - randomly harassing and mugging passersby.

The rampage lasted about two hours also included attacks on two men joggers and a homeless man.

The woman jogger, a St. Clair, Pa., native, made a startling, near 100 percent recovery that captured nationwide attention.

Although the jogger's identity has been withheld by the media because of the nature of the crime, her name appeared on the questionnaire. It was among 76 names in a section labeled ''list of possible witnesses or names that may be mentioned during the trial.''

The woman can't remember the attack, but has told prosecutors she is willing to testify if she is called as a witness, sources said.

The 60 questionnaires were handed out after Justice Thomas Galligan dismissed 140 potential jurors who said they would have trouble with a trial that would not begin until at least June 25, and last six to eight weeks.

Outside the courthouse Wednesday, two dozen Guardian Angels wearing red berets marched silently in a circle, displaying double-sided placards reading ''It's not black vs. white'' and ''It is about right vs. wrong.''

Judge Galligan ruled Tuesday that cameras would not be allowed in the courtroom during the trial, citing the young age of the defendants and the ''lewd and scandalous'' nature of the case. He also noted that lawyers for both sides opposed cameras in the courtroom.

Representatives for television and radio networks planned to appeal the ruling.

Each youth is charged with second-degree attempted murder, first-degree rape, first-degree sodomy and first-degree sexual abuse in the attack on the woman. Each also is charged with first-degree assault, first-degree robbery, second-degree robbery, second-degree assault and first-degree riot for attacks on two men joggers.

Because McCray, Salaam and Santana were under 16 when the crime occurred, they face a maximum of 4 to 10 years behind bars if convicted of the most serious charge - attempted murder.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Dakotans north and south demanded Wednesday that R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. stop selling its Dakota cigarette, complaining the name is a "blemish" on the states' image and its advertising pitch to young women "unethical."

The brand, which Reynolds has been test-marketing in Houston and Nashville Tenn., since March, became a focus of controvery when a Washington advocacy group - Women vs. Smoking Network - released documents outlining a proposed advertising strategy for Dakota that emphasized efforts to sell the brand to "virile females."

At a news conference, Dakotans Against Dakota Cigarettes presented Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., and Rep. Tim Johnson, D-S.D., petitions carrying 25,000 signatures demanding an end to Dakota sales. One objection is that "Dakota" is the Sioux word for friend or ally.

The Dakotans, anti-smoking advocates and U.S. Surgeon General Antonia Novello also object to the target market, contending the young women are among the most vulnerable in society.

"This is a blemish on the image of South Dakota and its sister state to the north," Pressler said. "It is an unethical marketing strategy," said Shirley Butts of Fort Totten, N.D., a member of the Great Sioux Nation.

Reynolds spokeswoman Maura Payne said the company "rejected the (virile female) marketing proposal as inappropriate" and instead is trying to win over Marlboro smokers, who comprise about 25 percent of the market.

The women's group, however, contends Dakota ads are still aimed at white women ages 18-20 who are unemployed or working at entry-level jobs. For example, one ad shows a young woman in a flannel shirt and cowboy hat with a "look of defiance of authority," said Michele Bloch of the women's group. Another ad shows a young woman and man sitting on a motorcycle with their legs locked - "a sexually aggressive position," she said.

As for the use of the word Dakota, Payne said it "is simply a name and Dakotans should be proud of the fact that consumers (in focus groups) liked (it). They thought it had a positive connotation."

Novello - while never mentioning the cigarette by name - said she is especially concerned about women smokers. "One-quarter of all low-birthweight babies are attributable to women who smoke during pregnancy," said Novello, a pediatrician.

Richard Kotomori of the Indian Health Services, said Reynolds, by using the name Dakota, is clearly trying to get Indians, already heavy smokers, to light up the brand.

Earlier this year, Health Secretary Louis Sullivan successfully pressured Reynolds to stop test-marketing Uptown, a brand aimed at blacks. Payne said Reynolds has no plans to discontinue the Dakota test-marketing.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (JUNE 13) UPI - About 10,000 protesters blocked traffic in a massive rally in the center of the city Tuesday, demanding multi-party elections and an end to 45 years of communist rule in Serbia, Yugoslavia's largest republic.

Leaders of the five illegal Serbian nationalist parties that sponsored the gathering announced to the enthusiastic crowd in Republic Square that they would press their demands with similar demonstrations across the republic.

Vuk Draskovic, head of the ultra-extreme Serbian Renewal Movement, later said that - because communist officials declined to meet with opposition leaders after the rally - they were breaking off talks with the ruling party on political reforms. The talks began last week.

''Serbia is a democratic state and we will not permit it to be a Stalinist state,'' Velimir Cvetic, a leader of the Social Democratic Party of Yugoslavia, declared in a fiery speech to the rally.

''The rulers are lying to us that they are already creating democracy. We are going to hold 100 rallies if needed,'' he said.

Radical Party leader Veljko Guberina said: ''We want freedom of the press, freedom for journalists and freedom for radio and television. Gentleman communists, you must step down for the welfare of the country.''

The gathering was planned to take advantage of the afternoon rush hour and office workers joined students and other opposition supporters waving Serbian flags and banners that said: ''Free elections in Serbia'' and ''You (communists) have wasted confidence and money.''

The rally, the largest ever held to press demands for the resignation of the republic's Communist leadership and for multi-party elections, eventually drew some 10,000 people, hundreds of whom spilled into roadways blocking cars, buses and trolley cars.

Others hung from the windows or watched from the roofs of office buildings and from the steps of the ornate National Museum and the National Theater.

''This is the first time the Serbian people have freely expressed themselves,'' one protester said.

After an hour of speeches, 10 opposition leaders and about 5,000 protesters marched to the Serbian assembly building and delivered a petition outlining their demands.

Most of the protesters then dispersed. But a hardcore group of more than 500 sat down in Marshal Tito Street, a major thoroughfare named after the founder of communist Yugoslavia, blocking traffic as they chanted slogans and sang hymns. About 100 police officers stood by.

The sit-in continued into the evening, snarling traffic across downtown Belgrade and prompting state radio to urge motorists to avoid the city center.

While no violence was reported, state radio said some protesters burned pictures of Serbian Communist Party chief Slobodan Milosevic, who took power in 1987 by exploiting latent Serbian nationlism, and shouted slogans against him.

Protesters also pulled down Marshal Tito Street signs, the radio said.

Under pressure from within the country, the changes in Eastern Europe and requirements for economic cooperation with the West, the Communist Party of Serbia has declared its willingness to end its 45-year monopoly on power and hold free elections. But no date has been set.

The opposition groups, which are banned under the constitution, object to the party's plan to enact constitutional reforms before holding elections. They are insisting that a new constitution be drafted after a new government takes power.

The Communists, alarmed by their growing unpopularity, have decided to merge with an allied Socialist organization to change their name and image in a move aimed at attracting votes in the planned elections.

But their fear of their growing unpopularity, fueled by rising Serbian nationalism and the fall of Communist parties in the Yugoslavian republics of Croatia and Slovenia in April elections, was evident in pre-rally declarations by state-run media, which denounced the opposition of seeking to destroy Serbia.

ALGIERS, ALGERIA (JUNE 13) UPI - The fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front claimed victory Wednesday as it headed for a surprise win in Algeria's first multi-party elections since independence, official returns showed.

Islamic Front leader Abassi Madani demanded that President Chadli Bendjedid dissolve the National Popular Assembly, or Parliament, and call early legislative elections, which are not scheduled until 1992.

Interior Ministry officials said returns from 571 of the 1,541 municipalities contested in the nationwide local elections Tuesday showed the Islamic Salvation Front heading for victory.

Official sources said the Islamic Front - a coalition of Sunni Moslem fundamentalist groupings legalized last September - trounced the governing National Liberation Front and obtained an absolute majority of over 50 percent.

Interior Minister Mohammed Salah Mohammdi said the overall turnout was some 60 percent of the electorate of 13 million.

If confirmed in final results as seemed almost certain, the outcome of the contest in the North African nation was certain to cause anxiety among authorities in neighboring Morocco and Tunisia, where fundamentalists also have become increasingly active in recent months.

At a news conference, Madani recalled that under Algeria's constitution elections must be held within three months of the dissolution of Parliament.

He said that if the government was unwilling to take such a step it should hold a referendum on the issue.

''The president has a constitutional duty in this matter,'' Madani said. ''We think that the regime that allowed people to express themselves will not hesitate to dissolve Parliament to permit other elections.''

The elections Tuesday were the first multi-party contest in Algeria since it obtained independence from France in 1962.

Bendjedid called the election as part of reforms introduced after riots erupted against government austerity measures in October 1988. Troops fired on the rioters, killing up to 500 people.

Political experts said that a boycott of polls by the influential Front of Socialist Forces led by veteran politician Hocine Ait Ahmed may have contributed to the National Liberation Front's defeat.

The fundamentalists have received strong support from the impoverished youths of slums like the teeming Bab el Oued neighborhood of Algiers where thousands live in corrugated iron shacks or dilapidated tenement buildings.

Unemployment in Algeria is over 50 percent and some 65 percent of the population is under 25 years old.

Last September, the World Bank announced it was making a $300 million loan to help Algeria's transformation from a centrally planned to a market-oriented economy.

Fundamentalist ''Islamic police'' have taken the law into their own hands in recent months, beating up women not wearing veils and forcing bars to close if they served alcohol.

But Medani sought to portray himself as a moderate in his moment of triumph Wednesday, even going so far as to distance himself from the late Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Komeini's death sentence against British writer Salman Rushdie.

Madani also dismissed suggestions he is anti-feminist.

''This success realized by the Islamic Salvation Front is in great part due to the woman, with the veil or without it,'' he said.

Madani poured scorn on speculation the Soviet-trained officer corps of the Algerian army might not tolerate a fundamentalist surge.

''The country has voted for us,'' the bearded Islamic zealot said, beaming from beneath a white lace skullcap. ''How could the army confront us?''

Madani hailed ''an overwhelming victory'' in the municipal and provincial contest and offered congratulations to the Algerian people ''voting for the first time in total freedom.''

Vying for 1,541 municipal councils and 48 departmental provincial councils were 136,000 candidates.

NEW YORK (JUNE 13) UPI - The defense Wednesday attacked the credibility of a Canadian investment counselor who had testified that he urged former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos to conceal her ownership of four Manhattan skyscrapers.

Under cross-examination, defense lawyers hammered away at the testimony of Timothy Khan, who had said he advised Marcos to keep her property in Manhattan but transfer ownership to offshore corporations.

Marcos is charged in U.S. District Court with conspiring to hide millions of dollars plundered from the Philippines during the rule of her late husband, Ferdinand. The trial before Judge John Keenan is expected to last until July.

Her co-defendant, Adnan Khashoggi, once described as the richest man in the world, is charged with obstruction of justice and fraud for allegedly assisting the Marcoses in their transactions.

Marcos is charged with racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice for allegedly plotting with her husband to divert money stolen from the Philippines treasury into real estate investments around the world, including several properties in Manhattan.

Responding to questions from James Linn, Khashoggi's attorney, Khan said that while he testified Tuesday he met with the arms merchant "twice a month," six months might in fact elapse between meetings.

Khan, 34, of Toronto, said that though he had testified he saw Khashoggi "20 or 30 times," he might see him every day for a week at his home in Spain but not have any substantive discussions with him during the period.

Khan had said that in 1986 he advised Mrs. Marcos, whom he met through Khashoggi, "to retain the property" in Manhattan and transfer ownership offshore.

When Gerry Spence, Marcos's attorney, asked Khan about Marcos's reaction to his knowledge of her real estate holdings, Khan said, "It was just a gesture of surprise," adding that she asked to see the spread sheets, or "notes" he had prepared. "She did not make any comment," Khan added under redirect examination by Debra Livingston, an assistant U.S. attorney prosecuting the case.

Under persistent questioning from Linn, Khan was forced to admit there were discrepancies between joint FBI-Royal Canadian Mounted Police interviews and his trial testimony.

When Linn asked whether Khan had said he was bankrupt from long distance telephone calls to set up meetings with Khashoggi, the witness replied, "I wasn't exactly broke, I just didn't have the cash flow."

Khan also told how he channeled funds to Republican congressional candidates to muster support for President Reagan's Strategic Defense inititiave, known as "Star Wars."

COLUMBUS, OHIO (JUNE 13) UPI - Now that Penn State is officially in the Big Ten, Joe Paterno is like a kid with a new toy.

The recent vote by conference presidents to admit Penn State as an 11th team has given added enthusiasm to an already enthusiastic Paterno. At 62 and starting his 25th year as Nittany Lion head football coach, Paterno has his sights set on a Rose Bowl appearance.

''I want to coach in the Big Ten,'' Paterno, who also doubles as Penn State athletic director, said Wednesday. ''I'm going to coach until I'm 70 if the Good Lord keeps me healthy.

''I'm very excited about having the opportunity to coach against some of the schools in the Big Ten and I'd very much like some day to coach in the Rose Bowl. I don't know whether that's possible or not. Obviously it's a long shot. But I'd love very much to have that opportunity.''

Penn State likely will not play a full Big Ten football schedule until the mid-1990s, but could start competing for league titles in other sports sooner.

Paterno said Rene Portland, Penn State's head women's basketball coach, had the best comment he had heard about joining the Big Ten.

''When they asked her how she felt about joining the Big Ten, she said, 'It's like getting a new job without having to move.' That's the way I feel.''

Paterno was in Columbus to help open the new facility of SportsMedicine Grant, run by Dr. Ray Tesner, a linebacker at Penn State under Paterno in the early 1970s.

Paterno, the nation's winningest active coach with 220 victories entering the 1990 season, said he understood the doubts expressed by some Big Ten coaches and athletic directors over Penn State's admittance by a vote of conference presidents.

''I wasn't really surprised,'' said Paterno. ''I always try to put myself into the other guy's shoes. I was even kind of second-guessing myself. My reaction (to the doubters) was, it's only natural. I think it's to the Big Ten's credit that the president's hung tough.

''I had no problem with people speaking out, making sure we didn't do something without careful consideration,'' he Paterno.

Paterno said one of his regrets over joining a conference is the affect it will have on some long-time Nittany Lion rivalries, including those with Pitt and West Virginia.

''That's one of the concerns a lot of our fans had, too,'' said Paterno. ''But again, the world's changing. A Penn State-Ohio State game in 10 years could be a lot bigger than a Pitt-Penn State game. A Penn State-Michigan game could be much bigger than a Penn State-West Virginia game.''

Paterno said he realizes the Penn State move might cause problems for other eastern independents.

''I think some people are disappointed that we left,'' said Paterno. ''I think it's going to create some hardships until they can readjust to certain alignments they have to make. We don't particularly want to hurt them, but it was a time for us to move on.''

Syracuse, another long-time Penn State football rival, will leave the Nittany Lion schedule after this season.

Paterno tried to establish an Eastern all-sports conference, but was unable to muster support from other schools, including Syracuse.

''Syracuse was one of the culprits as far as I'm concerned,'' he said. ''They were hard-nosed about the Big East basketball and enticed Pitt to go into the Big East basketball.

''Our guy (Bruce) Parkhill has done a magnificent job,'' said Paterno. ''We're a better basketball team than a lot people in the Big Ten think.''

WATERLOO, BELGIUM (JUNE 13) UPI - The Duke of Wellington, whose forefather sent Napoleon packing 175 years ago, said Wednesday it is time for France to join in the famous battle's commemoration.

''I would love the French to participate,'' said the Duke, who will rededicate the Wellington Museum as part of this weekend's 175th anniversary of the legendary June 18, 1815, battle.

''I've urged them to join in, but the French shun from any sort of function dealing with Waterloo,'' he said. ''I guess it's a matter of 'la gloire' and all that.''

The current Duke, 74, is the great-great grandson of Britain's Iron Duke, who dashed Napoleon's renewed hopes of glory after the Frenchman returned from exile in Elba.

The name ''Waterloo'' has since been forever linked with disaster.

''The French feel Waterloo was a terrible defeat and a very melancholy event,'' the Duke said in a telephone interview from England. ''But we must be thinking now about the future unity of Europe rather than commemorating a French defeat.

''We were brought up to think of it as a great victory, but I see it instead as something that ended nearly 25 years of war and ushered in 50 years of peace,'' the Duke said. ''Fifty years of peace in Europe is something we don't see very often.''

The Duke of Wellington will be joined at the 175th anniversary by descendants of Prussian Gen. Gebhard Leberecht von Blucher, whose troops joined with Wellington's to turn an initial stalemate into a shattering defeat for Napoleon.

On Sunday, the Duke will be made a Knight of the ultra-exclusive Most Noble of the Garter by Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace.

His troops will carry on without him. About 2,000 uniformed men, representing 10 countries will reenact the famed clash that claimed 62,000 lives.

LONDON (JUNE 13) UPI - A powerful bomb tore through an 18th century country mansion recently occupied by the former treasurer and deputy chairman of the ruling Conservative Party, causing serious damage to the empty house, officials said Wednesday.

Police said they believed the Irish Republican Army staged the attack late Tuesday night near Basingstoke, 35 miles southwest of London, as part of its drive to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

''Because of the size of the explosion, there is only one organization I know of that has such explosives, and that is the IRA,'' Hampshire Police Chief Superintendent Alan Wheeler said.

Police reported that investigators had yet to determine the size and type of the device planted behind a hedge beside the stately building constructed in 1714. The blast left a large crater, broke most of the building's windows, shattered brickwork and scattered debris across a 100-foot radius.

The home until May 31 had been the residence of Lord McAlpine, the former deputy chairman and treasurer of the Conservative Party who is a close ally and key fundraiser for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

McAlpine was present at a party conference at a Brighton hotel which the IRA bombed on Oct. 12, 1984, killing five people and wounding 32 others in an attempt to wipe out the British government. Thatcher was uninjured.

His name was also on a hit list of prominent people found during a raid on an IRA bomb factory in the central London district of Clapham 18 months ago.

''It is the work of those who have little regard for life,'' Thatcher said of the latest blast. ''They show no regard for civilized values or for the lives of human beings.''

The three-story red-brick building called West Green House was a protected building under the National Trust conservation society. McAlpine called the action ''an act of complete stupidity.''

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 13) UPI - An estimated 3 million gallons of oil has spilled into the Gulf of Mexico from the burning tanker Mega Borg, but the vast majority of it has already dissipated, the Coast Guard said Wednesday.

The fire aboard the Norweigan-owned ship was under control, and firefighters were considering whether to use chemical foam to extinguish remaining hot spots.

Crews sprayed water to cool the 853-foot vessel and chased after oil slicks created by leaks from the tanker, which carried a cargo of 38 million gallons of light crude oil.

Coast Guard Capt. Tom Greene told a midday news briefing that as much as 3 million gallons of oil had spilled, but most of it had either burned off or evaporated. He estimated the actual amount of oil in the water ranged from between 12,000 and 40,000 gallons.

''There's no 3 million gallons on the water,'' Greene said. ''My only conclusion is that it was incinerated in the fire and is evaporated. It's just not there.''

Meanwhile, Eric Leikvang, Norway's consul general in Houston, questioned the captain and surviving crew from the Norweigan tanker Wednesday at the opening of an inquiry into the accident.

Capt. C.M. Mahidhara told a Norwegian investigative panel that the explosions came about 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 8, not early Saturday as reported earlier.

''Suddenly I felt a bump, a vibration. I was in the radio room calling my office in Hong Kong,'' he told the panel. ''The door fell open and ceiling plaster feel down.''

Mahidhara described trying to reach the bridge, looking for his wife and children in the smoke-filled passages and calling for help to remove his crew from the exploding oil tanker.

The oil that has been spilled formed a slick about 12 miles long and up to 6 miles wide. Coast Guard officials Wednesday morning dropped more dispersant.

Greene said it appears that only one of the tanker's 16 cargo tanks sustained damage. He said there was ''a hole somewhere high in the cargo tank'' and added a significant amount of oil remained in the damaged tank, he said.

Greene said some tarballs will eventually reach the Texas coast although the area where they hit depends on the winds and currents. The 15-knot winds Wednesday were out of the south-southeast, and Greene said scientists estimate the earliest the tarballs will reach the coast is Friday or Saturday.

Tarballs are a daily occurance along the Texas coast because of the number of tankers and offshore platforms in the Gulf of Mexico. There will be no way to determine which ones came from the tanker spill, Greene said.

''On the leading edge of this sheen, there is some mousse. If you picture chocolate mousse, that's about what it looks like,'' Greene said. ''It doesn't look like tarball yet. Certainly, some tar balls will eventually reach the coast line.''

About 50 percent of light crude oil evaporates away in the sun and heat in 24 hours, unlike heavy crude, which evaporates very little.

Jim O'Brien, president of Oops Inc. out of La., said his company has eight skimmers working on the slick. Some 700 to 750 barrels of watery emulsion already has been cleaned up.

Two skimmers from the United Kingdom are expected to arrive in Galveston Wednesday and one from Mexico also was expected.

''We'll number in excess of 50 to 60 vessels out there,'' O'Brien said, adding the number of skimmers probably will reach 12 to 13. ''We've probably got upward of 150 to 200 people working in just the skimming operation,'' he said.

Firefighters considered for a third day whether to apply foam to snuff out the blaze aboard the ship, which has been riding at anchor 57 miles southeast of Galveston since an engine room explosion early Saturday.

Although the fire had been controlled, it still burned in the below-decks engine room and in the superstructure that rises above the stern deck, Coast Guard officials said.

Crews continued spraying cooling water on the tanker, but the water also was pushing spilled oil from the engine and pump rooms into the water.

Salvage workers had 100 tons of foam stockpiled on fireboats near the tanker, officials said.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Gene Maestas said the tanker's hull was intact, though a few plates on the deck had warped from the heat and the ship was listing slightly to port with its bow up and its stern awash.

Greene said the possibility of the tanker breaking open ''is not very high.''

Once the fire has been put out, Greene said, workers from Smit American Salvage Inc. - the private firefighting and salvage firm the ship's Norwegian owners hired - can enter the tanker, find oil leaks and plug them. Then, they will redistribute the crude oil and water ballast among the tanker's 16 cargo compartments to bring the tanker back on an even keel.

The cargo then will be pumped into smaller tankers for transport up the Galveston Ship Channel.

Two crewmen were killed and two were missing and presumed dead in the explosion that started the fire. Seventeen of the 41 crewmen aboard were injured.

Because the fire occurred in international waters, Norway is in charge of the investigation, although U.S. officials accepted an invitation to participate in the hearing at a Galveston hotel.

NTSB spokesman Alan Pollock in Washington said the safety board will follow the investigation closely.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - President Bush Wednesday hailed Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's meeting with the leaders of the three breakaway Baltic republics, calling it ''a significant change'' and ''good news.'' In remarks opening a news conference with Washington-based regional reporters, Bush said that Gorbachev's meeting in Moscow Tuesday with the leaders of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia was in line with his call for a ''peaceful dialogue'' rather than confrontation.

''I hope yesterday is a first step that will lead to a dialogue,'' he said. ''This is good news. I'm happy to see this occur from what I think was a successful summit meeting.''

The president opened his session with the reporters by commenting on ''a significant change that has occurred in the Soviet Union.''

''We applaud the meeting with the Baltic'' leaders, he said.

Gorbachev moved away from confrontation at the meeting with the leaders of the Baltic republics, by not demanding that they rescind their declarations of independence and by indicating that he would lift the economic embargo against Lithuania.

Gorbachev reportedly told the leaders that the republics also could be given a special legal status during a ''transition period.''

Shortly after Bush made his comments, the Soviet news agency Tass quoted Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene as saying the Kremlin agreed to partially lift its economic blockade of Lithuania by supplying more natural gas and other raw materials to the republic.

Prunskiene met with Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov on Wednesday to discuss the blockade - imposed to force the republic to back off its declaration of independence.

''We welcome this announcement,'' presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said after word of the move reached the White House. ''Together with the beginning of the dialogue yesterday these are positive steps.''

Bush also said that there can be no normalization of relations with Iran until all the hostages are out of Lebanon.

''There will not be a normalization until all the hostages are out,'' he said and repeated his inaugural statement directed toward Iran that ''good will begets good will.''

There are six remaining American hostages in Lebanon who are believed to be held by the radical Islamic Jihad. Bush said ''we cannot make more progress'' in relations with Iran until we get all the hostages out. No deals. I'm not going to do that.''

On another matter, Bush said, ''This is not a time to change our policy with Cuba,'' and added that the Soviet Union ''ought to stop spending $5 billion a year in Cuba.''

''My suggestion would be if that brutal totalitarian society were not propped up by the Soviet Union, the Cuban people could achieve freedom,'' he said.

Bush also said:

-He delayed making a decision on whether to expand oil drilling off the coasts of Florida and California ''to be sure I have all the information I need.'' He promised a decision ''soon.''

-The United States is ''a long way from a (free trade) agreement'' with Mexico ''but I think the pluses so far outweigh the negatives. It's worth pursuing.'' U.S. and Mexican trade negotiators have begun exploring the possibility of a free trade accord and hope to produce a preliminary document by the time Bush travels to Mexico City to meet with Mexican President Carlos Salinas Gortari.

HOUSTON (JUNE 13) UPI - It may not be the sale of the century, but shoppers at the four area Sakowitz stores Wednesday apparently thought it was. Thousands of bargain hunters thronged to the stores before dawn and stood in line for up to three hours before the start of the Houston-based chain's liquidation sale.

"The fire marshal took one look and said, 'We have a problem,'" said Ed Bodde, a senior vice president stationed at the Galleria store. As a result, store officials began admitting ten customers at a time for each ten exiting the already full store.

Others waited outside in temperatures over 90 degrees to gain entry to the posh retail store to seize items on sale for 20 percent to 50 percent off. Bodde termed the atmosphere "just crazy," saying that the sale was going better than expected at all locations.

A federal bankruptcy judge ordered the liquidation June 6 after Sakowitz's owners failed to find investors willing to back their efforts to save the 88-year-old chain, which primarily sold women's apparel and accessories.

The Sakowitz chain was founded in Houston and later expanded to other cities buoyed by the burgeoning oil industry. But the retailer's fortunes fell with those of the industry and the company never recovered.

Sakowitz filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in 1985 and was purchased in 1987 by Australian retailer LJ Hooker Corp. When Hooker fell on hard financial times, it decided to rid itself of the still-struggling Sakowitz.

The chain's Dallas store began its liquidation sale last Saturday, but a Cincinnati store will remain open in a mall owned by Hooker. About 420 employees will lose their jobs once the sale is finished, probably in mid-August.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 13) UPI - Israeli leaders portrayed their new hard-line ruling coalition Wednesday as a government willing to pursue the peace process but firm in its resolve against negotiations with the PLO and the creation of an independent Palestinian state.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir also indicated in an interview published Wednesday that a negotiated settlement with Palestinians in the occupied territories could not be reached without progress toward peace between Israel and its neighboring Arab nations. He told The Jerusalem Post his government had no plans to build new settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, but expected to develop and expand existing settlements.

Shamir's new hard-line coalition goverment, supported by his Likud Party and five religious and right-wing factions, won approval from Israel's Parliament Monday in a narrow vote of confidence that ended a three-month government crisis.

Among the stated priorities of the new government, which replaces a Likud-Labor coalition that broke up in March over Shamir's stance on the peace process, are the successful absorption of thousands of Soviet Jewish immigrants and the pursuit of peace.

But the coalition's guidelines require that the basis for the peace process continue to be the Camp David accords and Israel's 1989 peace initiative, which foresee limited autonomy rather than the independent state sought by Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories.

Foreign Minister David Levy told reporters Wednesday he will explain to Israel's No. 1 ally, the United States, that ''this is not an extremist government.'' But he added, ''No nation can be asked to gamble with its own survival.''

''Israel must establish a fundamental clarification with the U.S. about its aspirations for peace. On this there is no argument,'' Levy said. ''(Israel) desires this more than anyone else. But she also stands for defense of essential things, for (Israel's) existence and its future.''

Levy's comments came as Secretary of State James Baker in Washington described the danger of a Middle East war as at its highest since the 1967 conflict. For the first time, he publicly blamed the Shamir-led government that fell in March for the breakdown in the peace process.

''It will take a good faith affirmative effort on the part of our Israeli friends (to get the peace process restarted),'' Baker said. ''The number is 202-456-1414 (the White House switchboard). When you're serious about peace, call.''

Levy is considered a temperate politician who, during the Lebanon War, objected to the policies of then-Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, including allowing Lebanese Phalange forces to enter the Sabra and Shatilla Palestinian refugee camps. Hundreds of Palestinians were killed by the Phalange. Levy also broke with the Likud camp and supported the Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

Levy outlined the government's foreign policy as one based on the Camp David accords and proposals for negotiations with Palestinian residents of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. He stood firm against negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization or the creation of an independent Palestinian state. He did not mention participation of East Jerusalem Palestinians, who live in an area - unlike the occupied territories - formally annexed by Israel.

In an interview with The Jerusalem Post, Shamir provided another indication of his government's direction on the peace process.

''It is impossible to conceive that we could reach any sort of serious understandings between us and the Palestinian sector without further understanding and progress in the relations between Israel and the Arab states,'' he said.

Shamir said talks between Israel and Palestinians from the occupied territories could not succeed without agreement between the parties that the goal of the negotiations was autonomy.

''There is nothing to discuss with those among the Palestinian-Arab circles who are opposed to autonomy,'' Shamir said.

Also Wednesday, Defense Minister Moshe Arens visited the West Bank settlements of Ma'ale Adumim and Ariel, where he pledged to make security for Israeli settlers one of his priorities. He declined to specify his plans for dealing with the 30-month-old Palestinian uprising.

In the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip, an Israeli army officer was slightly wounded and hospitalized after an explosive device blew up in the city of Khan Younis, military sources said. The explosion occurred while a military patrol was searching roofs in the El Amal neighborhood, the sources said.

CHICAGO (JUNE 13) UPI - Active selling near the close pressured grain and soybean futures Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Closing prices were mostly lower and were at or near session lows after a day of choppy trading.

Sharply lower basis levels for corn at the Gulf were attributed to the lack of export sales, especially to the Soviet Union. Liquidation and profit-taking also weighed on corn prices following the recent rally.

December corn rallied to a contract high of $2.87 1/4 per bushel shortly after the opening, then gave up the gains and closed at $2.81 3/4, down 4 1/4 cents on the day. Commercials dominated the selling in corn.

Soybeans turned lower with corn. Favorable weather also allowed farmers to make good progress with soybean planting, contributing to the weakness in the bean market.

Soybean oil was sharply lower, despite indications that Pakistan bought 68,000 tons of oil.

Wheat was lower, mostly in response to a slightly bearish production figure in the June crop report.

Country movement was light.

At the close, corn was off 2 to 4 1/2, soybeans unchanged to down 2, wheat unchanged to off 2 and oats down 1 1/2 to 2 1/4.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The Senate unanimously approved a bill Wednesday to curtail logging and eliminate a costly federal subsidy for the timber industry in America's biggest national forest - the rainy Tongass in Alaska.

The bill overhauls special management prescribed for the 16.7 million-acre forest a decade ago - a policy seen by critics as overindulgent of timber interests at the expense of taxpayers and the environment.

Conservation groups prefer a much stronger version of the bill passed last July by the House, which voted to put 1.8 million additional acres of the Tongass off limits to logging and other commercial activity by preserving it as wilderness.

About a third of the Tongass - or 5.4 million acres - already has been set aside as wilderness.

The Senate bill, by comparison, would prohibit timber harvesting on just 673,000 acres of the forest now open to logging, while permitting mining, hydropower developments and motorized recreation in those areas.

The House version also provides stricter limits on logging around river and streams to protect the rich salmon runs and other fisheries in the Tongass.

The differences between the bills underscore a compromise forged in the Senate to win the grudging support of Alaska Sens. Ted Stevens and Frank Murkowski, both Republicans, who have resisted attempts to reform Tongass management for four years.

Stevens warned Tuesday he would return to the Senate floor to fight the legislation ''with every bit of my strength'' if the House prevails over the Senate position in negotiations to reconcile the two versions of the bill.

The Tongass, covering most of Alaska's southeastern panhandle, is the largest of the nation's 155 national forests and the only temperate rain forest left nearly intact in the Northern Hemisphere.

A centerpiece of both the House and Senate bills is the repeal of a statutory requirement that the U.S. Forest Service make at least 450 million board feet of Tongass timber available for sale each year.

The measure also eliminates a $40 million automatic appropriation to finance the construction of logging roads and other activities aimed at meeting the timber sale quota.

Both the automatic appropriation and the quota were established in 1980 with the intent of bolstering the economy of southeastern Alaska.

But critics have charged they amount to a forced-feeding of federal subsidies to log far more timber than reasonably could be sold, resulting in losses to the government of $50 million a year.

The bill also directs the Forest Service to make specific unilateral changes to two 50-year logging contracts the government has awarded to companies that operate giant pulp mills in the forest. Those changes are aimed at protecting old-growth tree stands and keeping timber harvests at sustainable levels.

The House bill would terminate both 50-year contracts outright.

The Senate agreed to an amendment Tuesday to place logging-free buffer zones of 100 feet on either side of fish-spawning streams and their major tributaries in the Tongass. The House bill calls for buffer zones around virtually any stream in the forest.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 13) UPI - A Scottish drifter convicted of stabbing actress Theresa Saldana in 1982 was ordered Wednesday to stand trial on charges he threatened to kill her once he is freed from prison.

Arthur R. Jackson, 54, who is purportedly obsessed with Saldana and has a history of mental illness, was ordered by Municipal Court Judge Elva Soper to stand trial on five counts of making threats against a witness.

Soper, citing insufficient evidence, dismissed three other counts accusing Jackson of threatening to kill Jeff Fenn, a former deliveryman who came to Saldana's rescue during the 1982 attack.

Fenn, who is now a sheriff's deputy, pulled the knife-wielding Jackson off of Saldana and saved her life.

Soper issued her ruling Wednesday at the conclusion of Jackson's preliminary hearing, which started Tuesday. Jackson was ordered held in custody without bail and to appear in Superior Court for arraignment June 19.

Jackson was convicted of attempted murder in October 1982 for stabbing Saldana 10 times with a kitchen knife in an attack outside her West Hollywood apartment in March of that year.

He was sentenced to 12 years in state prison, but because of good behavior he was paroled earlier this year.

However, he was immediately turned over to the custody of Los Angeles County officials for prosecution on the threat charges. Those charges were filed by the District Attorney's Office in June 1989 in an effort to keep Jackson, who has vowed to kill Saldana upon his release, behind bars.

If convicted of the five threat charges, Jackson could be sent back to state prison for up to six years. He also faces deportation to England on murder charges for allegedly shooting a passer-by during a 1967 London bank robbery.

Saldana, 34, who has appeared in such films as ''Raging Bull'' and an autobiographical television movie about the 1982 attack, testified Tuesday that she took the death threats allegedly made by Jackson seriously.

The threats were contained in rambling letters that were sent to a New York producer of Geraldo Rivera's talk show, on which Saldana had appeared. Prosecutors allege Jackson sent the letters from a state mental hospital in 1988.

''I considered the threats extremely credible, especially in light of the fact that he tried to murder me,'' Saldana testified.

The judge dismissed the charges involving Fenn after Jackson's attorney, Deputy Public Defender Norman Kava, argued that Fenn had testified he did not take the threats seriously.

In the threats, Jackson makes repeated references to his ''divine mission'' to kill ''assassination target Theresa Saldana,'' prosecutors said. Jackson says that Saldana and others will be ''focused on and their lives forfeited by terrorist hit squads,'' prosecutors said.

Saldana testified that, after learning of the threats, she developed insomnia, began having ''terrible nightmares about being murdered'' and started taking heightened security measures such as traveling under different names.

In the first moments after taking the witness stand to testify against Jackson Tuesday, Saldana broke down and started sobbing, telling Deputy District Attorney Sterling Norris, ''I'm afraid to talk in front of him.''

She was able to resume testifying only after leaving the courtroom to compose herself.

(JUNE 13) UPI - There's action on Capitol Hill today on a proposed constitutional amendment against flag desecretation. A subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee recommended, by a 5-3 vote, that the full panel reject the flag amendment. The full Judiciary Committee is expected to send the amendment to the House floor for a vote that could come late next week. The proposed amendment comes two days after the Supreme Court struck down an anti-flag burning law.

The Soviet news agency Tass quotes Lithuania's prime minister as saying the deal was struck today. Soviet and Baltic officials said yesterday the blockade could be lifted if Lithuania would temporarily freeze its declaration of independence during negotiations on Lithuania's secession.

Mikhail Gorbachev won praise from President Bush for meeting with the leaders of independence-minded Baltic republics. Bush says the meeting yesterday is a ''significant change.'' Gorbachev held talks in Moscow yesterday with the leaders of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Bush told reporters today that he hopes the meeting will lead to a dialogue between Soviet officials and the three Baltic states.

(JUNE 13) UPI - A New York judge told potential jurors in the Central Park jogger rape case today that the fate of the three suspects will be decided in the courtroom and NOT in the news media. Justice Thomas Galligan dismissed 140 potential jurors who said they would have trouble serving on a jury for the trial expected to last six to eight weeks. The suspects on trial are among six youths charged in the April 1989 rape of a female investment banker, who was attacked in the park.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - President Bush said Wednesday that when he asked Americans in the 1988 campaign to read his lips about ''no new taxes '' he never expected the nation's governors to take the same pledge.

Fielding questions from reporters for out-of-town news organizations, Bush said he never meant his commitment to apply to state or local taxes, which in many cases are being forced up by the budget squeeze at the federal level.

In the face of complaints from state and local officials and the recent approval of a gasoline tax increase by California voters, Bush said he would not try to force his predisposition against higher taxes on others.

''I am not about to criticize and have not criticized governors - Democratic or Republican - who have gone that route or ballot propositions that take an opposite view from that,'' he said. ''What I'm talking about is the federal level.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker publicly blamed the Israeli government of Yitzhak Shamir for the first time Wednesday for the breakdown in Middle East peace negotiations.

At a hearing of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Baker also agreed with a member of Congress that the absence of a peace process means the danger of war in the Middle East is as high as it was in 1967 before the Arab-Israeli war.

Baker's mood ranged from somber, when talking of the dangers of suspended negotiations, to anger, when he described a minor point that led the Israelis to break off the process of mediation that Baker had been directing. Baker said he suggested, as a way to make direct talks more palatable to the Isrelis, that the Palestinians submit a list of possible negotiators to Israel. The Israeli government would then be free to pick from that list who they would be willing to talk to about the prospect of elections in the occupied territories. They could also veto any names.

Baker, visibly angered, said, ''It's hard for us to understand why we didn't get a yes. It's hard for most people to understand.''

Internal strife over Baker's prodding on negotiations led to the breakup of the coalition government led by Prime Minister Shamir.

Baker's anger at the lack of response by Israel was apparently triggered by a question from Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., a staunch supporter of Israel. Levine suggested that President Bush was to blame for the dangerous stalemate in Middle East diplomacy by injecting the issue of the future of Jerusalem into the Middle East talks.

Baker then described - for the first time in public - the history of his mediation attempt and its failure to help the Israelis bridge what he called ''the very narrow difference.''

When Levine suggested it was Bush who bore the responsibility for the breakdown and said the president should call Shamir to mend fences, Baker concluded, ''It will take a good faith affirmative effort on the part of our Israeli friends.''

He then recited the number of the White House switchboard and, directing his comment to Israel, said: ''When you're serious about peace, call.''

Earlier, Baker had been asked by Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., if he agreed with Broomfield's assessment that the current situation in the Middle East is more dangerous than at any time since 1967, the year of the Arab-Israeli war.

Broomfield cited the absence of negotiations, the formation of a right-wing Israeli government led by Shamir, and the rising sense of frustration on the part of the Palestinians and the potential for terrorism.

''We share your concern. I think it is well-founded,'' Baker said.

''We were very, very close to the first dialogue between the Israelis and the Palestinians in February,'' Baker explained. ''Had it begun, we wouldn't be facing the situation we are today.''

He said the administration is still considering breaking off the talks it has held with the Palestine Liberation Organization since 1988. He insisted that the PLO ''has to make clear its policy of renouncing terrorism and so far it has not done so.''

But he conceded that one of the truisms of Middle East diplomacy is that the United States sometimes has little political influence and control over events.

Later, making it clear he was referring to Israel, Baker said, ''If the political will doesn't exist, we can't do it.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The Environmental Protection Agency imposed new emission controls Wednesday on chemical plants and toxic waste facilities in a move that promises to sharply reduce smog in heavily industrialized states.

In announcing the long-delayed rules - parts of which have pending since 1983 - officials noted chemical manufacturing and toxic waste disposal and storage facilities were the two largest industrial sources of volatile organic compounds, a key component of smog.

Together, they account for 16 percent of 20.6 million tons of VOC emissions emitted annually nationwide by industry, power plants, motor vehicles, and other sources.

The new regulations, which include incentives for industry to recycle some chemical emissions rather than install pollution controls, are expected to reduce VOC discharges by a total of 87,600 tons per year.

That represents less than one percent of national VOC emissions, but EPA officials said the new controls could have a much bigger environmental impact in certain states where affected facilities are clustered.

For example, of the 3,300 chemical plants covered by the new emission limits, 70 percent are in three states: Louisiana, New Jersey, and Texas, all of which have severe air pollution problems.

The regulations also apply to an estimated 1,400 toxic waste handling facilities that also are predominantly located in heavily smoggy states. Texas, California, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New York, and New Jersey top the list with more than 100 facilities each.

In addition to easing smog, EPA officials said the controls would reduce emissions of numerous toxic and cancer-causing chemicals such as butadiene ethylene oxide and methylene chloride.

The chemical plant rules, expected to cost the industry an estimated $21.6 million a year, affect factories that produce such items as pesticides, tires, plastic, cleaning solvents, and pharmaceuticals.

They apply only to facilities that have been built or modified since late 1983 because that is when the EPA first announced its intent to issue the new controls.

EPA officials said the complex chemical plant rules were delayed by the White House Office of Management and Budget, which first began reviewing the regulations in 1986.

William Rosenberg, assistant EPA administrator for air and radiation, said OMB officials in the Reagan administration raised objections to the cost-effectiveness of the chemical plant controls, but that those concerns had been resolved since President Bush took office in 1989.

Rosenberg said OMB officials now agreed the chemical plant controls were similar in cost-effectiveness to emission limits proposed in the clean air bill now pending in Congress, which is generally supported by Bush.

Rosenberg said the decision to allow EPA issuance "does reflect a cooperative arrangement with OMB that we (the EPA) did not have in the past. "There is now the recognition that to get the job done, regulations like this are necessary," he said.

The chemical plant rules also include innovative provisions that allow manufacturers to avoid installation of pollution controls by pursuing recycling of waste gases instead, as long as they achieve equivalent emission reductions.

EPA officials acknowledged Wednesday's rules would have only a limited impact on toxic waste facilities, covering only process vents and equipment leakage, which contibute only a small amount of VOC emissions from that industry.

The officials said the EPA soon would issue a second, more significant rulemaking for toxic waste facilities affecting emissions from waste lagoons, tanks and containers.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (JUNE 13) UPI - About 1,000 riot police stormed anti-communist demonstrators camped in the city's center at dawn Wednesday arresting and beating protesters despite the interim government's pledge not to use violence to suppress dissent.

Street battles followed and by late afternoon demonstrators fought their way back into University Square, setting fire to buses set up as police barricades and forcing the security forces to retreat. It was the worst outbreak of civil violence in Romania since the December revolution that ousted communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

London's Channel 4 television reported that television broadcasts had ceased and the building was believed to be under seige. Government television headquarters was among the first targets of insurgents in the December uprising.

Film shot from a helicopter hovering above Bucharest showed many cars had been blackened by fire, as well as buses that police had moved in to control crowds.

People milled around University Square as dusk fell.

Interim President Ion Iliescu broadcast an appeal over television and radio in early evening for supporters to gather in the streets and defend the government. Several hours later, hundreds of protesters marched toward government headquarters, where Iliescu backers were gathering.

Police, some with blood on their shirts, beat and kicked protesters in the dawn raid, tearing down tents and shelters and smashing the glass front doors of the Intercontinental Hotel where some of the protesters had fled for protection.

About 300 were arrested in the raid on University Square, a busy thoroughfare in the center of the city and adjacent to the University of Bucharest, officials said.

It was not immediately known how many were injured or how many protesters were in the square when it was raided. The crowd had swelled to as high as 15,000 in recent weeks.

Afterward, the remnants of tents and banners were piled into garbage trucks and the streets hosed down but there were still blood stains visible near the former tent encampment.

The demonstrators had been living in the square for seven weeks, setting up shrines to victims of the December revolution and conducting hunger strikes to protest the presence of former high-ranking communists in the interim government of the National Salvation Front.

In elections May 20, the NSF, which took power after Ceaucescu was deposed and executed in December, won 325 of 494 parliamentary seats. Iliescu, the front leader and a member of Ceausescu's Communist Party Central Committee until he was expelled in the early 1980s, easily won election as president. A new government is to be named next week to replace the interim NSF government.

An attempt to hold negotiations between the government and the protesters occupying the square broke down two days ago when government ministers refused a request to have reporters present.

Before Tuesday, the security forces had left the protesters alone since April 24, when they charged through barricades and tried unsuccessfully to disperse the crowd. In recent weeks, interim Prime Minister Petre Roman and the chief of police had pledged that violence would not be used against the demonstrators. Iliescu had said, ''They can stay there and stew in their own juice.''

After the morning raid, clashes were reported around Bucharest, the site of bloody fighting only six months ago when troops loyal to Ceausescu fired on protesters during the revolution that ousted the regime.

In mid-afternoon, demonstrators shouting anti-government slogans broke through a squad of the hundreds of riot police in the area, setting fire to buses parked nose to tail in an attempt to block access to University Square.

A cloud of thick black smoke hung over the square as the police withdrew.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 13) UPI - A federal judge Wednesday banned prayer from a suburban Philadelphia high school graduation ceremony, five days after civil rights lawyers say a similar ban was disobeyed by another high school official.

U.S. District Judge Lowell Reed Jr. issued the temporary restraining order banning prayer from being said by officials at Owen J. Roberts High School near Pottstown during Wednesday night's graduation.

Jay and Judith Jacobs, parents of school valedictorian Amy Jacobs, filed the suit after attending Sunday's baccalaureate ceremony which they said ''conveyed a message that Christianity was the only approved religion'' at the school.

The Jacobs, who are Jewish, were aided by the American Civil Liberties Union in filing the suit.

School principal William Faulkner said the school will comply with the order and has removed the invocation and benediction from the graduation ceremony.

Last Friday, a school board president said a prayer at the Downingtown Area High School despite a court-ordered ban against prayers.

Board President Robert Eldridge said his prayer during the ceremony did not violate the order which only banned a planned invocation and benediction.

''It certainly sets a terrible example for students to have a principal looking for loopholes to do what he wants in defiance of the law,'' said Scott Burris, a staff lawyer in the ACLU's Philadelphia office.

''The clear importance of this case is that prayer is unconstitutional whether in the beginning, middle or end (of the ceremony), it cannot occur '' Burris said.

Two Downingtown seniors, concerned about whether the school's endorsement of religion was constitutional, had requested the ban.

The ACLU is seeking a hearing to have Eldridge held in contempt of court and to have endorsement of religion removed from Downingtown graduations.

Burris said the Owen J. Roberts order, which forbids prayer during the entire graduation ceremony, is clearer than the Downingtown one.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Organizers of anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela's trip to the United States said Wednesday that White House comments on the role of the CIA in Mandela's arrest 27 years ago were unacceptable.

''I find the answers of press secretary (Marlin) Fitzwater to be unacceptable,'' said Roger Wilkins, national coordinator of the Nelson Mandela Welcome Committee. ''It (reports of CIA involvement) is a matter of some seriousness. The report clearly does not appear to be out of character for the CIA we knew in the 1960s because we do now know of attempts at least on the life of Patrice Lummumba and attempts on the life of Fidel Castro.''

Wilkins, currently with the liberal Institute for Policy Studies, worked for the John Kennedy administration at roughly the same time as the alleged CIA incident occurred.

According to reports by Cox Newspapers published over the weekend, a CIA tip to South African security forces led to the arrest of Mandela, then underground and organizing the military wing of the banned African National Congress, on Aug. 5, 1962, and his subsequent 27 years in prison. He was released in February.

On Tuesday, Fitzwater played down the reports, saying, ''We find no value in reviewing the 30-year-old history in this case.''

''If you want to know what happened, ask Pierre Salinger, Ted Sorenson or Ted Kennedy,'' he said, referring to high ranking Kennedy administration aides and the president's brother.

But Wilkins described such remarks as ''cavalier'' and ''rude to my guest. ... I want better answers than that.''

Lindiwe Mabuza, chief representative of the African National Congress in the United States, said she hoped ''the American people will put pressure'' on the government to reveal the truth.

Mandela is to visit the United States June 20-July on a grueling eight-city trip in which he hopes to shore up support for continued economic sanctions against the white minority government of South Africa as well as raise funds for the ANC's charitable activities inside South Africa now that it is no longer a banned organization.

''This trip is not some kind of victory lap,'' Wilkins said in an effort to downplay the celebrity and circus atmosphere already evident. ''Mr. Mandela is a working man. ... A disciplined member of the African National Congress ... and this trip is a part of that struggle'' against apartheid.

''We are trying to arrange a trip that respects that serious purpose and which also attempts to respect the fact he is a man of 71 who will also be in the last stages of a long and grueling trip,'' Wilkins said.

Mandela is scheduled to visit New York, Boston, Washington, D.C., Atlanta,

Miami, Detroit, Los Angeles and Oakland, Calif., addressing mass rallies and holding scores of smaller sessions and private meetings with church, labor and other people and groups who have been key to the long anti-apartheid struggle in the United States.

He is also to meet with President Bush and address a joint meeting of Congress.

Wilkins said a ''broad'' estimate of the trip's cost at the moment is about $300,000-$400,000, all of which will be assumed by his U.S. hosts.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan of Thailand arrived Wednesday for talks that U.S. officials hope will flesh out signs of ''new momentum'' in diplomatic efforts to bring peace to war-torn Cambodia.

On the heels of a political shakeup at home, Chatichai was accompanied by a large entourage of advisers and Thai business executives for meetings on the political situation in Indochina and his country's fast-growing economy.

Expanded trade and cooperation in the war on drugs were among the issues he was expected to cover in meetings Thursday with President Bush, Vice President Dan Quayle and the leaders of the House and Senate.

With more than $7 billion in two-way trade last year - growing at more than 30 percent annually - a senior administration official said the talks would explore increased economic integration between the United States and Thailand.

However, the official said the visit comes at a particularly ''opportune time'' to assess the outlook for Cambodia, with Thailand an active participant in recent mediation efforts.

The United States and Thailand support the rebel coalition that has been at war with the Vietnemese-installed government of Prime Minister Hun Sen. The Chatichai visit follows the signing of a joint communique last week between Hun Sen and the two non-communist factions of the three-party rebel force.

The communique, which came during two days of talks in Tokyo, called for the formation of an interim Supreme National Council, drawn equally from the two opposing sides, to represent Cambodia until elections establish a new government.

Missing from the agreement was the third rebel group, the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge, which is notorious for having killed more than a million Cambodians before being driven from power by a 1978 Vietnamese invasion and which the United States would like to see excluded from any power-sharing arrangement.

The senior U.S. official said recent indications of ''an increasingly active dialogue'' between China, which continues to arm the Khmer Rouge, and Vietnam, which is withdrawing its troops from Cambodia, have injected ''new opportunity and, we hope, new momentum'' into regional diplomacy.

''What we will be doing with the Thai prime minister is exploring the progress and this very recent activity that seems to be imparting new momentum to the diplomatic track,'' the official said.

The official also indicated the administration saw no need to raise a suggestion of Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine that some U.S. aid bound for the non-communist Cambodian resistance has fallen into the hands of the Khmer Rouge, contrary to U.S. law.

''We have made very clear to the recipients of our non-lethal assistance - the non-communist resistance forces - that we are unalterably opposed to any collaboration with the Khmer Rouge,'' the official said, ''and we believe that effective measures to monitor that situation remain in place.''

The official sidestepped a question on whether U.S. officials would press Chatichai on the continued flow into Thailand of Chinese arms bound for the Khmer Rouge. On the economic front, however, the official said ''problem areas'' would be addressed, including U.S. complaints that Thailand has failed to pass strong enough laws to protect American patents copyrights and trademarks.

SAN DIEGO (JUNE 13) UPI - The Justice Department agreed not to oppose the merger of Southern California Edison and San Diego Gas & Electric Co. on antitrust grounds after concessions were made on the issue of competition, Edison said Wednesday.

The $2.5 billion stock-swap acquisition would create the nation's largest publicly traded utility and is being opposed by California's attorney general, who has argued it would hurt competition in the sale and purchase of electricity among Western utilities.

A spokeswoman for the attorney general's office said Wednesday it was too early to determine if any changes would be made in the agency's stance.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the state Public Utilities Commission must still approve the merger.

Edison said it satisfied Justice Department concerns by agreeing to make 250 megawatts of transmission capacity between Los Angeles and the Southwest available to other utilities for 15 years, rather than the ten years previously pledged.

The SCEcorp operating subsidiary also will extend its offer of 150 megawatts of capacity to the Pacific Northwest from 1997 to the year 2001. The company agreed to create a bidding system for utilities seeking access to the transmission lines and to ask for state approval for power purchases from affiliate companies.

Opponents of the merger, including Attorney General John Van de Kamp, fear an enlarged Edison would have too much control over transmission lines linking Southern California with power producers and purchasers outside the area.

SPRINGFIELD, MA (JUNE 13) UPI - The reigning ''Mr. Universe'' and ''Mr. America'' bodybuilding champion was indicted for illegally importing steroids shipped from Belgium in a box marked ''X-mas gifts,'' authorities said Wednesday.

Matthew C. Dufresne, 24, of Hampden, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy to import steroid drugs, receiving merchandise contrary to law, possession with intent to illegally distribute anabolic steroids, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Bertha Josephson.

The indictment, handed up late Tuesday, alleges Dufresne traveled to Belgium last October to pay $500 for ''about 5,000 doses'' of anabolic steroids and to arrange for the muscle-enlarging drugs to be shipped illegally to the United States.

''The package arrived on or about Jan. 5, 1990,'' Josephson said. ''The package was marked 'X-mas gifts. Toys!,' and arrived at the U.S. Post Office in Hampden. Mr. Dufresne then transported the package from the post office to his home at 41 Walnut Street in Hampden.''

Dufresne won the Mr. Universe title awarded by the North Atlantic Bodybuilding Association last October during a competition in London, records indicate. The indictment alleges he traveled that same month to Belgium allegedly to make the deal to purchase and ship the steroids.

Dufresne allegedly attempted to import at least 19 different types of anabolic steroids - six to be taken by injection and 13 for oral consumption, the indictment states.

Dufresne is only the second man to win the Mr. Universe and Mr. America titles in the same year, records indicated. He was not immediately available to comment on the charges.

''This is one of the first prosecutions in New England under a law enacted in 1988 that prohibits the distribution of anabolic steroid prescriptions by someone other than a physician or pharmacist,'' Josephson said.

If convicted, Dufresne faces up to 13 years in prison and fines of up to $260,000, Josephson said. No arraignment date had yet been set, she said.

The case was investigated by the U.S. Customs Service and the Hampden Police Department.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - If Earth's temperature rises as much as some scientists project, sea levels may increase by 1 foot or more in some areas in the next 50 years, scientists said Wednesday.

Using a computer model, German researchers examined the oceans' response to a global temperature increase of about 5.5 degrees Fahrenheit over 50 years if current rates of carbon dioxide emissions continue.

Carbon dioxide is a so-called greenhouse gas because it can act like the glass windows of a greenhouse to trap heat in Earth's atmosphere, increasing the planet's temperature.

The German simulation looked only at how a warmer climate would affect the flow and volume of existing sea water, which expands as the temperature increases. The study did not include the greater melting of glaciers and polar ice sheets, which could be expected to push sea levels even higher.

In their study published in the journal Nature, scientists from Max Planck Meteorology Institute in Hamburg, West Germany, calculated the overall sea level rise because of thermal expansion would be 7.5 inches in 50 years.

''Regional values, however, can vary. A rise of 16 inches is projected in the North Atlantic ... whereas the level of the Ross Sea (off Antarctica) actually falls through changes in ocean circulation,'' wrote Uwe Mikolajewicz and his colleagues.

Scientists are concerned about the possibility of sea levels rising because such increases could cause flooding of low-lying coastal areas around the world.

Past studies, which neglected to take into account shifts in the ocean circulation pattern, predicted an almost uniform increase in sea levels.

Viven Gornitz, a researcher with NASA's Goddard Institute for Space Studies in New York, said the new work offers a realistic model of how higher temperatures would directly affect the world's oceans.

''A key finding is the large regional variation in sea-level rise,'' Gornitz said. However, she noted the rise of 1 foot or more predicted along the coast of northwest Europe may be offset by the Scandinavian land mass rising as glaciers melt and reduce weight on the land.

In addition to the changes caused by thermal expansion, Gornitz emphasized: ''It should be remembered the total sea level rise will be much higher due to contributions from the melting of polar and mountain ice.''

At a meeting last fall of the American Geophysical Union, a panel of scientists estimated the global sea level rise over the next 60 years will total 13 inches if carbon dioxide emissions continue to rise at their current rate. However, the estimate - which includes the melting of ice masses - could be off as much as 16 inches in either direction, the panel said.

Other experts have predicted as much as a 39-inch rise in sea levels by the year 2050.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 13) UPI - A group of 16 banks has filed suit in U.S. Bankruptcy Court against Japonica Partners to stop attempts to "seize control" of Allegheny International Inc., the makers of Sunbeam consumer products and Oster small appliances. The petition was filed late Tuesday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court. Allegheny International filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in February 1988.

The plaintiffs in the case are Mellon Bank N.A., Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, The Bank of New York, Commerzbank Aktiengesellschaft, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., The Chase Manhattan Bank N.A., The Citizens and Southern National Bank, Barclays Bank PLC, Pittsburgh National Bank, Standard Chartered Bank, Bayerische Vereinsbank AG, The Bank of Tokyo Trust Co., Bank One Texas N.A., National Westminster Bank PLC, and M & I Marshall & Isley Bank.

The petition was filed against Japonica Partners L.P., Allegheny Banc Claims L.P., a limited partnership, and Allegheny Bank Claims L.P., a Rhode Island limited partnership.

The suit stems from the "wrongful attempts" by the defendants to "seize control" of Allegheny International Inc. and its subsidiaries and affiliates, to interfere with AI's property and management and to remove its amended joint stock plan of reorganization, the petition said.

Japonica has acted in "total disregard" of the best interest of creditors, other than itself, and the estate and of the bankruptcy process and jurisdiction of the court, and has violated the automatic stay in Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, the petition said. The banks are secured creditors of Allegheny International.

The petition also said despite Japonica's objections, the Bankruptcy Court has expressed a tentative view that AI's reorganization plan, subject to limited modifications, appears to to be in a postion to be confirmed. The court did not set a date for a hearing on the suit.

In a related development, Allegheny International said it has evicted Japonica representatives from its downtown Pittsburgh headquarters building.

MOSCOW (JUNE 13) UPI - The Soviet central government agreed Wednesday to relax, but not lift, its economic blockade of Lithuania, perhaps paving the way for a compromise leading to negotiations on Baltic independence.

Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskine said Soviet officials agreed to supply more natural gas and other raw materials to the republic and consider increasing fuel supplies for agriculture.

A resumption of oil supplies and lifting of all other economic sanctions imposed in April, however, apparently depends on the Lithuanian Parliament's willingness to suspend its March 11 declaration of independence at least for the period of negotiations on secession.

Prunskiene told reporters in Moscow the Lithuanian government ''should very thoroughly discuss'' such a suspension.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said: ''We welcome this announcement" that the embargo was being relaxed. "Together with the beginning of the dialogue yesterday, these are positive steps,'' Fitzwater said.

Prunskiene met with Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov Wednesday, a day after a new atmosphere of cordiality and compromise emerged as the presidents of the three Baltic republics met President Mikhail Gorbachev to discuss the stalemate over independence.

The meeting was one of the first signs of a possible break in the stalemate that began when all three Baltic republics declared themselves independent from the Soviet Union earlier this year.

Soviet and Baltic officials said after Tuesday's meeting that the blockade could be lifted and negotiations on secession could begin if Lithuania agreed to freeze temporarily its independence proclamation.

The presidents of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia said they were encouraged by their meeting with Gorbachev.

''A clear desire is present to resolve the problem, not by forcing us to submit but by finding a mutally acceptable solution,'' Landsbergis told the Lithuanian Parliament in Vilnius Wednesday.

He added that Lithuania should consider how to ''make certain maneuvers'' that would allow Gorbachev to begin negotiations on secession.

''The sincere and constructive spirit of the discussion gives hope,'' Landsbergis said, adding that he felt the Soviet Union wanted to end its blockade ''as quickly as possible.''

On Tuesday, Gorbachev softened his demand that the Baltic republics rescind or suspend their declarations of independence, suggesting instead they might freeze the proclamations just during negotiations.

''We think that our side has made a very serious step toward meeting them halfway,'' Ryzhkov said Wednesday. ''If they take this path, then large possibilities will be opened for the conducting of further negotiations.''

Prunskiene told reporters agreement was reached in her meeting with Ryzhkov Wednesday on a partial increase in gas deliveries and the supply of raw materials to the republic's enterprises.

''We do not doubt the lifting of the economic blockade,'' Prunskiene said.

''This was said absolutely concretely.''

Up to now, Lithuania has refused to consider suspending its declaration of independence, offering instead to suspend laws implementing independence but not the proclamation itself.

Gorbachev cut off all oil, most natural gas and other raw materials to Lithuania in April in an attempt to force the republic to back down from independence. The partial blockade has seriously harmed the Lithuanian economy.

''It might be possible to find a way out of today's situation so that a true political dialogue could begin between Lithuania and the Soviet Union with simultaneous ending of the blockade,'' Landsbergis said Tuesday night.

Lithuanian government spokeswoman Rita Dapkus said Landsbergis did not make a concrete proposal on a suspension of the independence declaration to the Parliament, adding that any concrete moves will be discussed privately in the next several days.

Landsbergis, Latvian president Anatoljs Gorbunovs and Estonian president Arnold Ruutel met with Gorbachev for more than an hour Tuesday after a session of the Federation Council that groups leaders of all 15 Soviet republics.

The Baltic presidents had refused to attend previous Federation Council meetings on the grounds that since their independence proclamations they were not part of the Soviet Union.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - A constitutional amendment to ban flag desecration made its first halting moves Wednesday toward a make-or-break vote on the House floor with a divided subcommittee recommending that it be defeated.

On a 5-3 party-line vote, the Judiciary Committee's civil and constitutional rights subcommittee recommended that the full committee reject the 20-word amendment. The committee next week will forward the amendment to the full House for a vote late next week or early next week.

Acting a day before Flag Day, the panel also voted 6-2 for a resolution condemning flag burning and reaffirming the values protected by the Bill of Rights, a resolution painted as political cover for amendment opponents.

An amendment must win the approval of two-thirds of each chamber of Congress and then be approved by three-quarters of the states, or 38 states. The vote in the House is expected to be extremely close. Last year the Senate rejected the amendment, 51-48, some 15 votes shy of the two-thirds needed, but at least two GOP opponents of the issue have now switched sides.

The flag amendment, if ratified, would be the first to restrict the Bill of Rights in nearly 200 years. It would be the 27th amendment to the document and the first since 18-year-olds got the vote in 1971.

The amendment issue - sidetracked by House leaders last year with passage of a statute to ban flag desecration - returned to Congress Monday with a Supreme Court ruling that the 1989 law was a restriction of free speech.

The amendment reads: ''The Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States.''

Subcommittee Chairman Don Edwards, D-Calif., protested that ''proponents

... are talking about 30-second sound bites against those who vote against this proposition. ... I think that's the low road.''

''They are using it for political purposes. We refuse to do that. We just say this is a constitutional issue,'' said Edwards.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich, said the amendment issue ''is about politics, the politics of re-election, the politics of hypocrisy, of manipulating the system for political advantage.''

Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., the senior Republican on Edwards' panel, said the subsequent resolution condemning flag burning was purely to provide ''political cover'' for those who want to oppose the constitutional amendment.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., sharply disagreed, saying the resolution was intended to prevent backers of the amendment from ''saying we're for flag burning. ... That's really a cheap shot.''

And Schroeder said the amendment would make the United States ''the home of the free, as long as you agree.''

Sensenbrenner declared that an amendment was the only way to remedy the dilemma caused by flag burning and added, ''I don't believe it is the outrageous restriction on free speech that others believe it to be. The First Amendment has never been absolute. ... There has to be a balancing act. The constitutional amendment does that.''

Edwards, a veteran of World War II, said members were ''being asked to substitute our judgment for that of Jefferson and Madison.'' He said he did not want to weaken the Bill of Rights ''because a few flag-burners want to get on television.''

Schroeder added that flag reflects the nation's values of liberty and freedom, including the freedom to dissent, and noted that among Adolf Hitler's first laws was to make flag burning a crime.

Rep. George Crockett, D-Mich., added, ''I never thought the day would arrive that I, reportedly a liberal, would find myself on the same side of an issue as (conservative columnists) James J. Kilpatrick and George Will.''

Edwards picked up that theme outside the hearing, saying, ''We have all the editors of the country. We have the conservative columnists. I dont know of any newspaper (supporting the amendment). It's a great threat to conservatives too.''

SPRINGFIELD, MA (JUNE 13) UPI - Massachusetts Democrats filed a lawsuit Wednesday alleging a White House aide and a Republican campaign official conspired with Springfield police union pickets to disrupt the party's state convention.

The class action suit, filed in Hampden Superior Court, names as defendants White House aide Ron Kaufman and Stephen DeAngelis, who took an unpaid leave of absence Tuesday as a top aide to Republican state treasurer candidate Joseph Malone as a result of the Democrats' allegations.

The suit accuses Kaufman and DeAngelis of assisting the Springfield Police patrolmans' union and its president, Robert Jacobson, in an attempt to sabotage the June 1-2 Democratic state convention in Springfield.

Kaufman, DeAngelis and the police union have denied politics had anything to do with a June 2 police picket line, which delayed the start of the Democrats' convention for nearly four hours. The police union claims the picket line was a job action that stemmed from a 13-month contract dispute with Springfield Mayor Mary Hurley.

The Springfield police union and Jacobson are also named as defendants in the suit, which asks the court to declare the picketing was a violation of delegates' civil rights and asks for unspecified monetary damages.

''I can only state the union's position for the 100th time - there was no political motivation. I represent about 380 patrolmen who chose to use pickets to put pressure on the mayor,'' Jacobson said.

''I've never met DeAngelis. Until today, I'd never even heard of the person,'' Jacobson added.

Named as plaintiffs are the Democratic State Committee and five individual delegates, who were allegedly harassed and in some cases physically abused by the police pickets.

The five individuals named are Ellen Vallon of Worcester, Mary O'Brien of Pittsfield, Mary Anne Grafton-Rodgers of Osterville, Damian Ivanoff of Billerica and Bernice Deegan of Malden.

''We know that Mr. Kaufman and Mr. DeAngelis have been in contact with the police union. We believe that they were planning that disruption,'' said James Roosevelt, legal counsel to the Democratic State Committee.

Meanwhile, Kaufman, an aide to President Bush, received a vote of confidence from the White House on Tuesday in his defense against the Democrats' accusations. White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said White House officials saw no need to look further into allegations that Kaufman arranged the picketing.

Kaufman, a Quincy native who is a longtime Massachusetts GOP operative and thorn in the side of Gov. Michael Dukakis, denied having anything to do with the picketing, but has said the disruption it caused ''was fun.''

Kaufman, who helps dole out administration political jobs as deputy director of the Office of Presidential Personnel, served as Northeast coordinator of the Bush campaign in 1988 and played a role in having two Massachusetts police unions - Boston and Springfield - endorse Bush over Dukakis in the 1988 presidential campaign.

In requesting his unpaid leave of absence, DeAngelis told Malone in a letter that although the charges were false, he felt he must step aside because he did not want to damage the candidate's bid for Massachusetts state treasurer.

''Although those statements are totally and completely false, nevertheless they have the potential to detract from the issues of your campaign,''

DeAngelis wrote. ''That's why I'm making this request. I want time to clear my name.''

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 13) UPI - Ship's Master C.M. Mahidhara, on his maiden cruise aboard the Super Tanker Mega Borg, told Norwegian investigators Wednesday the first sign of trouble the night of June 8 was ''a bump, a vibration.''

The captain was the first witness called by Norwegian Consul General Erik Leikvang, who heads a panel investigating the fire which has been burning nearly five days on the tanker loaded with 38 million gallons of oil.

Mahidhara, a ship's master for five years, had only been aboard the Norwegian-owned tanker a month since picking up his light crude cargo May 19 in Angola. The fire broke out as it was transferring some of its cargo to the Italian tanker Framura for transport to refineries in Texas City.

The transfer began about 7:30 p.m. Friday and the first indication of trouble was at 11:30 p.m.

''Suddenly I felt a bump, a vibration. I was in the radio room calling my office in Hong Kong,'' Mahidhara said. ''The door fell open and ceiling plaster fell down.''

Mahidhara said he threw the radio phone down and tried to reach his wife and two young children who were aboard the ship. The passageways were filled with smoke and dark because the blast had knocked out the lights.

''I tried to get to my cabin. My wife and children were huddled in the bedroom. I shouted for them to get out, and we tried to get out through the companionway, but thick clouds forced us back to the bridge.''

Mahidhara could see ''bright flames'' coming from the pump room, where the Coast Guard believes the fire began. ''Flames were licking up right over the bridge from the pump room ventilators. I could not get into the bridge '' he said.

Mahidhara said on a third attempt they were able to get down a passageway. At the same time, he said, the Framura broke away from the flaming Mega Borg. He said because of wind and smoke they were unable to use the emergency water pump.

The captain said he used a walkie talkie to contact the work boat Patricia M to remove his crew and all but six were evacuated down ropes. The Patricia M also sprayed some water on the fire in a futile attempt to snuff it out.

Thiry-one crewmen were immediately rescued, he said, and it was determined four were still missing somewhere aboard the 800-foot super tanker. He began searching for the missing men.

''I found one of the crewman dead, hit by a skylight,'' Mahidhara said. ''I turned him over and the back of his head was gone. I also found the remains of the chief officer, near a catwalk. His body was in pieces.''

Two other missing men were believed dead in the pump room and the ship's master said he had to make a decision whether to mount a rescue effort or release a carbon dioxide flame retardant into the room.

''We didn't want to lose two additional men in a rescue,'' he said, ''so I authorized the release of the gas.''

In the end, Mahidhara said only he and the chief engineer were left aboard the flaming tanker. They stayed another 15 minutes before being evacuated to the Patricia M as a Coast Guard cutter arrived on the scene.

Norwegian authorities told told 26 people packed in the small, 20-by-20 foot hearing room, they would not attempt to assign fault in the hearing that may run for two days. The ship's master and crew members testified under oath without counsel. A full report will be presented at the end of the session.

The Norwegian authorities are investigating because the accident happened in international waters. The ship is owned by K.S. Mega Borg II, a company based in Farsund, Norway.

Present at the hearings were representatives the ship's owners, the cargo owners, insurance underwriters, the Coast Guard and maritime investigators hired by the government of Norway.

Mahidhara has been a seaman for 17 years and a ship's master for about five years.

ROME (JUNE 13) UPI - For teams trying to reach Rome - site of the World Cup final July 8 - the journey is more difficult in this year's tournament because even the smallest of soccer-playing countries are better organized defensively.

After the first 12 games in which all 24 nations competed, defense has been abundant in most matches, keeping them closer.

Even soccer's superpowers have discovered the path to the final clogged from the start, putting more pressure on their next matches.

In their opening games, defending champion Argentina lost 1-0 to Cameroon and European champion Holland was held to a 1-1 draw by Egypt.

And Scotland, attempting to get beyond the first round in its seventh attempt, lost 1-0 to Costa Rica.

Argentina, one of the long-time powers of world soccer, looked jaded and past its peak in its game against Cameroon, undefeated in four World Cup ties.

''I don't think that Cameroon had a brilliant game, but it was very effective in that it managed to keep an excellent defense,'' Argentine Coach Carlos Bilardo said.

Dutch Coach Leo Beenhakker said: ''We dropped a point because we played a lousy game, not up to our usual standard. ... But Egypt played very well.''

''The days are long gone when the likes of Egypt came and lost by five or six goals,'' England winger John Barnes said. ''You won't get results like that any more. The North African and third world countries are much better organized.''

The only team to suffer a big loss in its opening game was the United States, which lost its Group A clash to Czechoslovakia 5-1 in Florence. Czechoslovakia looked rejuvenated after some sluggish performances leading up to the World Cup.

On the basis of first-match performances, the U.S. could be vying with the United Arab Emirates - which lost 2-0 in its opening game against Colombia - for the dubious honor of being the weakest side in the tournament.

Apart from Czechoslovakia, the Romanians also have started well.

A 2-0 victory over the Soviet Union, the 1988 European Championship runner-up, has cleared the path into the second round for Romania.

But the first 12 games were not all about upsets.

Tournament favorite Italy began with an impressive 1-0 victory over Austria. And the only other three-time world champion, Brazil, opened its account with a 2-1 victory against Sweden.

The Brazilians have abandoned much of the individual flair that made them the world's most-popular team, replacing it with a more disciplined approach.

''They will never win the World Cup with this team,'' Swedish captain Glenn Hysen said. ''Instead of playing their traditional quick passes, they sent long balls for their strikers to run at.''

West Germany flexed its muscles with a 4-1 victory over Yugoslavia in a game where all five goals were scored by players based with Italian League teams.

It was an impressive beginning for West Germany, runner-up in the last two World Cups and a two-time tournament champion.

The least attractive game of the first 12 was the Group F ''British Isles derby'' between England and Ireland, which ended in a 1-1 draw, possessing all the frenetic pace and lack of refinement of an English League game.

Belgium, semifinalist in the 1986 World Cup, downed South Korea 2-0, but Asia's only representative in the tournament did not disgrace itself in an attractive display.

Uruguay and Spain, the last two countries to play their openers, produced thetournament's first scoreless draw Wednesday.

SAN DIEGO (JUNE 13) UPI - The president and chief executive officer of HomeFed Bank FSB said Wednesday the company was reviewing its outstanding loans in the wake of the second consecutive month of significant increases in non-performing assets.

Speaking at a business symposium in New York, Robert F. Adelizzi said he was disappointed with HomeFed's $81 million increase in foreclosed or delinquent loans last month, which increased the company's total of non-performing assets to $579 million.

The price of HomeFed Corp. stock plummeted by $8.25 to $25 a share in New York Stock Exchange trading Wednesday.

''The performance of two major credits along with the oversupply in the commercial real estate market were primary contributors to our recent increase in non-performing assets,'' Adelizzi said.

''Prior to this increase, we had already launched a special review of our non-single-family portfolios and strictly limited major lending activities pending completion of the reviews.''

Of the $81 million increase in May, $54 million belonged to a Northern California commercial real estate developer, Adelizzi said, explaining these loans ''were restructured in the mid-1980s and were included in the company's troubled debt restructured category since that time.''

Despite the bad news, HomeFed said it continued to be soundly capitalized.

''At March 31, 1990, the bank exceeded all current regulatory capital requirements with core, tangible and risk-based capital ratios of 5.83, 5.03 and 7.55 percent, respectively,'' the company said in a release.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The House voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to authorize a five-year, $4.5 billion package of grants to state and local health services to combat the AIDS epidemic.

The bill, passed on a 408-14 vote, would provide emergency funds to metropolitan areas hardest hit by the disease.

The Senate passed a similar bill last month and the two chambers are expected to work out differences between the two versions and send it to the president.

Although the bill authorizes just over $4.5 billion for AIDS prevention and treatment, Congress would have to pass separate appropriations bills before any of the money becomes available.

Supporters of the bill said state and local health services are being overwhelmed by the AIDS epidemic.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health, noted estimates that 1 million Americans are infected with the HIV virus that causes AIDS and 20 percentt ''are very close to becoming sick'' with AIDS.

Community services ''are overwhelmed and are straining to the breaking point,'' Waxman said. Hospitals are struggling with a ''tidal wave of cases'' resulting in ''overcrowding and diminished levels of care.''

The bill authorizes grants to states and health care facilities providing preventative services such as testing and counseling, authorizes emergency funds for an estimated 15 metropolitan areas hardest hit by the epidemic, creates a system for notifying emergency workers of possible exposure to AIDS, and authorizes various studies and demonstration projects aimed at improving treatment and preventive programs.

The House rejected an amendment by Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., that would have required the states to test all residents annually to determine if they have the HIV virus. Opponents said the costs would be prohibitive and the tests would produce a large number of false results, causing some people to wrongly believe they have the AIDS virus.

Also rejected was an amendment by Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., that would have required that the identity of people who test positive for AIDS be reported to public health offices. Currently, most testing is done on a confidential basis, but Dannemeyer argued that health agencies need the names of infected persons so they can warn sex partners or other people who might be exposed to AIDS carriers.

Opponents said people would be reluctant to take AIDS tests for fear that their names would revealed and they would be subject to discrimination and harassment. The opponents also argued that individual states should decide how to handle AIDS testing programs.

SANTIAGO, CHILE (JUNE 13) UPI - Relatives of slain diplomat Orlando Letelier Wednesday objected to a U.S.-Chilean agreement on indemnities for the families of Letelier and his American aide.

The Letelier family is displeased with the new civilian-led Chilean government's decision to pay the reparations without admitting the previous military government's alleged responsibility for the killings.

Letelier, who had served as foreign minister for the leftist Chilean government of President Salvador Allende, was assasinated by a car bomb in Washington, D.C., in 1976. Aide Ronnie Moffit, 25, formerly of Passaic, N.J., was also killed.

U.S. prosecutors blamed the Chilean secret police, allegedly acting under the authority of the military regime that overthrew Allende, for plotting the slayings.

U.S. Ambassador Charles Gillespie and Chilean Foreign Minister Silva signed an agreement Monday handing the question of indemnities for the Letelier and Moffit families over to the Bryan Commission, a reparations group provided for in a 1914 treaty between the United States and Chile.

Chile's new civilian government - which replaced the military government of Gen. Augusto Pinochet, a still powerful figure in his role as head of the military - intends to pay the reparations without an admission of the responsibility of the Pinochet government for the bombing.

The Letelier family, made up of the siblings and children of the former minister, is insisting that the Chilean government take responsiblity for the killings.

Fabiola Letelier, a lawyer and sister of the slain diplomat, said she met with Foreign Minister Enrique Silva late Tuesday and argued that justice should come before an indemnity.

She said the foreign minister assured her the government ''will not fail to take measures to straighten out the crime of Orlando Letelier and justice will be done.''

Under the new agreement, Chile's Congress will have to ratify the indemnities before they are paid.

Pinochet ended his 16 years of military rule in March and handed over the presidency to elected President Patricio Aylwin.

Under Pinochet's government, the Letelier murder case created a long-standing diplomatic snarl between the two countries. Chile refused to extradite three secret police officers who witnesses said had plotted the killings.

The Chilean courts have reopened the case since Aylwin took office. The Aylwin government April 24 created a bipartisan National Commission on Truth and Reconciliation, a group that will investigate and document human rights abuses committed during the military regime.

The commission will not have any judicial powers, and the Chilean government has announced the human rights abuses exposed by the group will not be prosecuted.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 13) UPI - A top White House adviser on European and Soviet affairs will leave his post to return this fall as a lecturer at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, the school said Wednesday.

Robert Blackwill, the special assistant to the president for European and Soviet Affairs at the National Security Council, will lecture on national security and international affairs, said Robert Putnam, dean of the graduate school.

A career diplomat since 1967, Blackwill was an associate dean and lecturer at the Kennedy School from 1983 to 1985 and rejoined the faculty in 1987 until going to the NSC at the start of the Bush administration.

''For the last 18 months, Bob has been managing U.S. diplomacy during the most turbulent and most promising time in the last half century,'' said Putnam. ''There is no more distinguished professional in his field, and he will add considerably to our practical understanding of international affairs.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The Senate Ethics Committee abruptly concluded hearings Wednesday into alleged financial violations by Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., when the lawmaker decided to forgo a detailed public defense.

Durenberger and his lawyer, James Hamilton, told the panel they would not call any witnesses and would be satisfied to let the case be judged on written evidence submitted by both sides and presentations made during the two-day proceedings.

Durenberger, in a one-hour address to the panel Wednesday, apologized for mishandling his financial dealings and asked his colleagues for compassion in deciding his fate.

The committee began public hearings Tuesday to investigate the allegations among them that Durenberger used a book publishing deal to evade limits on outside income and pile up about $100,000 more than the rules allowed.

Robert Bennett, the special counsel to the committee who led the investigation of Durenberger, had recommended the senator be denounced - one step short of the most severe penalty, expulsion. Any punishment proposed by the committee must be approved by the full Senate.

In granting a motion made by Hamilton to end the proceedings, Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., chairman of the committee, asked Durenberger if he was willing to waive the right to cross-examine witnesses and ''any other due process right.''

''Yes, Mr. Chairman,'' Durenberger replied.

Hamilton and Bennett also waived the right to closing arguments.

The committee will now review evidence submitted by both sides - 450 exhibits from Bennett and 112 exhibits from Hamilton - as well as a final report by Bennett.

Specifically, the book publishing allegation charges that Durenberger used two of his books and a Minneapolis publisher, Piranha Press, to exceed limits on outside income by about $100,000. The senator is accused of sidestepping the limits by calling his speeches ''book promotions'' and having the money paid to the publisher, which then turned it over to him.

Durenberger also is accused of improperly claiming reimbursements for use of a Minneapolis condominium, failing to report reimbursement for travel expenses, and improperly accepting limousine service for personal use during trips to Massachusetts in 1985 and 1986.

In his presentation to the committee, Durenberger said he had acted in good faith and sought ''competent legal and official advice'' regarding his finances, but he realized some of the deals at issue left the impression he was trying to sidestep rules for financial gain.

''I have learned that a clear conscience or a legal opinion, does not make you ethically bulletproof,'' Durenberger told the six-member committee. ''I recognize that real damage has been done by what has been perceived as my desire to push the limits and take advantage of the Senate, and for that I am sorry.''

''To the extent of my actions, inactions or failure to perceive the consequences of my actions have in any way reflected poorly on the Senate ... or been uncomfortable or distressful to you as persons, I am sincerely sorry,'' Durenberger added.

On Tuesday, Bennett told the committee that Durenberger, 55, had engaged in ''reprehensible conduct,'' and recommended he be formally denounced.

But Durenberger asked his colleagues on the committee - three Democrats and three Republicans - to consider his entire record when deciding his fate.

''As you weigh this matter, I hope that you will consider the whole person of Dave Durenberger, what I did wrong and what I've done right for this institution,'' he said. ''I hope you will compare that with you own experience of life in this body.''

Durenberger, a 12-year Senate veteran who is paid $98,500 a uear, has said he expects to be cleared by his colleagues and has no intention of resigning.

The abrupt end of the proceeding only compounded the unusual nature of the inquiry - the first time in eight years the committee held a public hearing.

In the last public case, Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., resigned his seat in 1982 while facing probable Senate expulsion for his conviction in the Abscam bribery scandal.

The last senator to be denounced was Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., in 1979 for his mishandling of government funds.

(JUNE 13) UPI - An apparent breakthrough for Lithuania... violence erupts in Romania... and U-S retail sales drop for a third month. Those and other top stories, next, from U-P-I.

The standoff between the Kremlin and the rebellious Baltic republics is lessening somewhat, with President Bush applauding the moves from Washington.

The Soviet news agency Tass quotes Lithuania's prime minister as saying the Kremlin agreed today to partially lift its economic blockade of the republic.

Kazimiera Prunskiene met with Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov today to discuss the embargo... and later said an agreement was reached.

Prunskiene says she'll recommend that Lithuania consider suspending its independence declaration to allow time for talks with the Kremlin.

Today's agreement comes one day after Mikhail Gorbachev met with the leaders of three independence-minded Baltic republics in Moscow.

The presidents of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia all left that meeting saying they were taking home compromise proposals that might end the deadlock.

In Washington today, President Bush hailed yesterday's meeting... calling it a ''significant change'' that may lead to dialogue instead of confrontation.

NEW YORK (JUNE 13) UPI - The fast-growing high-technology service industry is expected to expand into a $200-billion worldwide market by the year 1995, an industry survey said Wednesday.

"The worldwide high-technology services industry should generate annual revenues of between $180 billion and $200 billion by 1995," said the survey jointly compiled by the Association for Services Management International, an industry group, and Andersen Consulting, a high-technology consulting company.

The 52-page report was based on a survey of 175 experts in the high-technology service sector which covers repairs, maintenance, training and system configuration and is based on projections that the high-technology sector will grow to a $800 billion business by 1995.

The report forecast an average growth rate of up to 20 percent a year in North America, Western Europe, and the Pacific Basin. Those three regions currently generate about $110 billion in high-technology services, including $45 billion in North America, $37 billion in Western Europe, and $28 billion in the Pacific Basin, including Japan, Australia, Taiwan, South Korea, Singapore and Hong Kong.

According to projections, the lion's share of the market is going to shift from North America, where growth is slowing down, to Western Europe. "During the next five years, the European market, sparked by an integrated economy after 1992, is expected to show a 13-percent annual growth rate, producing revenues of $64 billion annually by 1995," the survey said. "At this level, the European service revenues will match those of America."

The Pacific Basin will experience a faster growth rate at 16 percent, but will remain smaller in size at $58 billion by 1995, the report said. U.S. companies, which have the longest experience in the service sector, appear particularly well positioned to compete on the international marketplace.

According to the survey, telecommunications giant American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is expected to generate 34 percent of its worldwide revenues from its software and service-related sector, while Digital Equipment Corp. should generate 30 percent from the sector; Unisys Corp., 21 percent; Hewlett-Packard Co., 21 percent; and International Business Machines Corp., 17 percent.

IBM emerges as the only player already positioned to play a very strong role in the service sector worldwide, followed by DEC and HP, the report said. AT&T, although very well positioned in North America, is expected to remain weak in the Pacific Basin.

The demand for high-technology services will be strongest in the telecommunications, workstation, personal computer and peripheral sectors, and weakest in minicomputers and mainframes in North America, the report said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Embattled Mayor Marion Barry has drafted a speech saying he will not be a candidate for a fourth term, National Public Radio said Wednesday.

Barry, on trial on 14 drug and perjury charges, conceded in the speech draft that his legal and personal problems had brought turmoil to the city NPR legal affairs correspondent Nina Totenberg said. Totenberg would not say how she obtained the draft of the speech.

''Now is the time for healing; healing for me personally and you politically,'' Barry said in the draft, Totenberg said. ''With that in mind, I announce tonight that I will not seek a fourth term as mayor.''

It was not immediately clear where or when Barry planned to make the announcement.

Barry, 54, the District of Columbia's second elected mayor, has been the city's top official since upsetting incumbent Mayor Walter Washington in the 1978 Democratic primary and easily winning the general election. His term ends Jan. 2.

Barry was arrested in January in a government sting operation which videotaped him allegedly smoking crack cocaine.

The mayor was seen in court Wednesday mouthing words from several sheets of paper with very large printing. Asked if he was preparing a speech, Barry said he was reading a ''financial report ... about the finances of the city.''

Prosecutors asked potential jurors in Barry's case Wednesday if their opinion would be swayed if Barry decided not to run for another term. At least one said it would indicate to him that Barry was admiting guilt.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson also told attorneys to stop telling prospective jurors that the government's use of audio and video surveillance against Barry was ''perfectly legal.''

Jackson ruled the sting operation was legal, but said: ''I don't know if it is 'perfectly' legal.''

Barry Attorney R. Kenneth Mundy also for the first time Wednesday asked prospective jurors their views on a possible entrapment defense.

U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens has said a Barry resignation or announcement that he will not run for office is ''irrelevant'' to the charges or to plea negotiations.

Mundy said he plans to pit the government's actions against Barry's, and let the jury decide.

''The government is going to be very much on trial,'' Mundy said Tuesday.

Mundy, in pre-trial motions and public statements, has repeatedly questioned the legality and morality of the government use of a former model to lure Barry to a downtown hotel, prime him with cognac and then offer him crack cocaine - all under the eye of an FBI surveillance camera.

Stephens has responded that the government has evidence that Barry was predisposed to use drugs and had been doing so for years.

Barry is charged with 14 counts - 11 misdemeanors involving cocaine use and possession and three felony perjury charges that he lied to a grand jury about specific instances of drug involvement.

Jackson Wednesday set a deadline of having the initial phase of jury selection completed by Friday, which would be the 10th day of the trial.

Those who remain in a pool then will be whittled to a dozen jurors and six alternates Monday. Jackson scheduled opening arguments for Tuesday.

Barry and his attorneys have refused to discuss persistent reports the mayor would publicly abandon plans for a fourth term. Some of Barry's allies said such an action could hasten a plea agreement with U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens.

Others have said his announcement that he would not be a candidate in this fall's election could be a move to gather sympathy from the jury.

Barry was arrested Jan. 18 at the Vista International Hotel in downtown Washington, where he was videotaped allegedly smoking crack cocaine in a sting operation run by the FBI and Washington police. Rasheeda Moore, a former model romantically linked to Barry, worked with the FBI in convincing Barry to come to the hotel.

The other charges stemmed from a later indictment.

Barry, 54, could face 26 years in prison and $1.85 million in fines if convicted on all 14 counts against him.

There are already five top Democratic candidates vying for the party's nomination in the Sept. 11 primary: Walter Fauntroy, the city's non-voting member of Congress; City Council Chairman David Clarke; council members John Ray and Charlene Drew Jarvis; and former electric company executive Sharon Pratt Dixon.

Former city police chief Maurice Turner, a native of Washington, is running as a Republican in the Nov. 6 general election after joining the party last summer.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Romania's capital is the scene of violence and protest just six months after the December revolution that ousted dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

About one-thousand riot police stormed anti-communist demonstrators camped in a Bucharest square at dawn today... beating, kicking and arresting protesters.

By late this afternoon, demonstators had fought their way back into the square, setting fire to police buses set up as barricades.

The unrest prompted interim President Ion Iliescu to issue an appeal to supporters to take to the streets and defend the government. Several hours later, hundreds of protesters marched toward government headquarters, where Iliescu backers were gathering.

Officials say about 300 people were arrested in today's early raid on University Square. But it was NOT clear how many were injured or how many protesters were in in the square.

The crowd had swelled to as high as 15-thousand in recent weeks in a growing protest against the presence of former high-ranking communists in the interim government.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Spring floods in the southeast and bad weather in other areas of the nation are believed linked to a drop in retail sales across the country last month.

The government reported today that retail sales plunged seven-tenths of one percent in May. That marked the third straight month that retail sales headed downward.

The Commerce department says the three-month decline is the first of its kind since the 1981 recession. Economist Cynthia Latta at the research firm D-R-I-McGraw Hill in Lexington, Massachusetts, says the latest doward turn could signal a possible recession. But economist Kim Kennedy of Cahners Economics in Newton, Massachusetts, said she sees what she termed ''a silver lining.''

She says poor retail sales could push down consumer prices and interest rates. Lower interest rates would serve to head off a recession.

LONDON (JUNE 13) UPI - Communications giant Cable and Wireless PLC said Tuesday it had earnings of $1.39 billion, or 53 cents a share, for the year ended March 31, a 97 percent increase from profits of $714 million the previous year.

Company sales increased 51 percent in the period to $3.96 billion at the current exchange rate of $1.7055 a pound, compared with $2.61 billion in the preceding 12-month period.

The sales increase, said a company statement, reflected ''growth in all major sections of the business'' as well as inclusion of telephone rental fees for a full year, the acquisition of a controlling stake in Telecommunications of Jamaica and favorable shifts in currency exchange rates.

The major surge in profits reflected a one-time extraordinary profit of $844 million on the sale of Hong Kong Telecommunications Ltd. shares to China International Trust and Investment Corp. Hong Kong (Holdings) Ltd., as well as other share sales, it said.

The company announced a full-year dividend of 17 cents, up 25 percent from the previous year's dividend, payable Oct. 17 to American Depositary Share holders of record as of July 13.

Interior Ministry officials say the fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front scored a victory in yesterday's balloting. That report prompted a party leader to demand that parliament be dissolved and early legislative elections be scheduled.

He noted that under Algeria's constitution, elections must be held within three months of the dissolution of Parliament. The party he heads is made up of a coalition of Sunni Moslem fundamentalist groups and was legalized last September.

The interior minister says the government is considering the request for dissolution of parliament.

Yesterday's election was scheduled as a followup to reforms introduced after riots erupted against government austerity measures in December 1988. Reports at the time said troops fired on the rioters, killing up to 500 people.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (JUNE 13) UPI - Police wielding clubs Wednesday charged and beat protesters who blocked a street after the biggest rally ever held in Belgrade demanding multiparty elections and an end of Communist rule in Serbia, Yugoslavia's largest republic.

There were no serious injuries. But several people complained of bruises after about 40 officers drove demonstrators from the street outside the studios of state-run Belgrade Television.

Opposition leaders said seven protesters were arrested. There was no immediate confirmation from authorities.

Officers using truncheons appeared not to discriminate between protesters and bystanders, a number of whom also were hit.

Enraged protesters condemned the police, shouting from the sidewalks: ''Nobody is allowed to beat the people.''

Dozens of protesters chanting ''death to communism'' marched to the studios after a sit-in before the Serbian assembly, where they burned pictures of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and a red Communist Party flag. Several pulled down signs marking a street named after Marshal Tito, the late founder of communist Yugoslavia.

Leaders of five illegal opposition parties led more than 500 people to the legislature to deliver a petition after about 10,000 protesters held an anti- communist rally in central Republic Square. Traffic throughout the city was snarled into the early evening.

Opposition leaders announced to the crowd that they would hold similar gatherings across Serbia, the largest of Yugoslavia's six republics, to press for the resignation of the republic's ruling Communist Party and the holding of multiparty assembly elections.

Vuk Draskovic, head of the extreme Serbian Renewal Movement, later said that because Communist officials declined to meet after the rally with opposition leaders, they were breaking off ''round table'' talks that began last week on political reforms.

Yugoslavia's federal government, ruled by Communists for more than 45 years, is in the process of creating a capitalist-style economy and has said it would hold multiparty elections to the national legislature by the end of the year.

Pressured by pro-democracy demands from within the country, the changes in Eastern Europe and requirements for economic cooperation with the West, Serbia's Communist Party has declared its willingness to end a 45-year monopoly on power and hold free elections.

Alarmed by their growing unpopularity and the defeat of communist parties in April elections in the republics of Croatia and Slovenia, Serbian Communists are moving to merge with an allied socialist group in order to change their name and image in advance of any polls.

But they have yet to set a date for elections or to amend the constitution to legalize political parties, drawing charges that they are trying to buy time to retain power.

Opposition groups also object to the Communists' plan to enact a new Serbian constitution before holding assembly elections. They insist that work on a constitution await the election of a new Serbian government.

''Serbia is a democratic state and we will not permit it to be a Stalinist state,'' Velimir Cvetic, a leader of the Social Democratic Party of Yugoslavia, declared in a fiery speech to the rally.

''The rulers are lying to us that they are already creating democracy. We are going to hold 100 rallies if needed,'' he said.

Radical Party leader Veljko Guberina said, ''We want freedom of the press, freedom for journalists and freedom for radio and television. Gentleman Communists, you must step down for the welfare of the country.''

The gathering was scheduled to take advantage of the afternoon rush hour and office workers joined students and other opposition supporters waving Serbian flags and banners saying: ''Free elections in Serbia'' and ''You (Communists) have wasted confidence and money.''

The rally was the largest ever held against 45 years of Communist rule of Serbia. Hundreds of protesters spilled into roadways, blocking cars, buses and trolley cars.

''This is the first time the Serbian people have freely expressed themselves,'' remarked one protester.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Firefighters are debating today whether to use chemical foam to put out the hot spots on the crippled tanker Mega Borg in the Gulf coast off Texas.

The fire aboard the Norweigan-owned ship is under control. Crews are spraying water to cool it, causing more oil to spill into the ocean.

The Coast Guard says an estimated three-Million gallons of oil has already spilled from the tanker, but much of it has already dissipated.

The Coast Guard dropped more dispersant today on the oil slick about 12 miles long and up to six miles wide. Some tarballs are expected to wind up on the Texas coast, though when and where depends on the winds and currents.

Elsewhere, Norway's consul general in Houston opened an inquiry into the accident, questioning the captain and surving crew members.

The captain told the panel that explosions hit the vessel Friday evening... NOT early Saturday as has been reported.

An emotional issue is making its way through Congress, with a vote expected as early as late next week by the full House.

A House subcommittee voted 5-3 today to advising the House Judiciary Committee to reject a constitutional amendment against flag desecration.

The Civil and Constitutional Rights Subcommittee voted to report the amendment to the full committee ''adversely.'' The subcommittee then voted 6affirming the values protected by the Bill of Rights.

The amendment was introduced two days after the U-S Supreme Court struck down a federal anti-flag burning law.

To become part of the Constitution, the amendment would have to be approved by two-thirds of both the House and Senate. It would then need the approval of 38 states... or three-fourths of the state legislatures.

(JUNE 13) UPI - The Senate committee looking into allegations against Minnesota Republican Senator David Durenberger heard from the senator himself today.

Durenberger is accused of using a book publishing deal to bypass limits on the amount of outside income senators can earn.

He told committee members he is ''deeply sorry'' for having hurt his family, friends, staff, supporters and the people of his state.

Durenberger added- ''I know I have incurred a debt I will have to work the rest of my life to repay.''

Robert Bennett, special counsel for the committee, recommended yesterday that Durenberger be denounced by his colleagues. That's the harshest penalty the Senate can impose short of expulsion.

In his opening statement yesterday, Durenberger called the proposed penalty ''harsher than warranted'' and said any wrongdoing on his part was UNintentional.

Durenberger's hearings are the committee's first public inquiry in nearly 10 years, since the Abscam bribery scandal.

Protesters turned out in strength today to demand an end to communist rule in Serbia, Yugoslavia's largest republic.

About 10-thousand people were involved in the demonstration, sponsored by five illegal Serbian nationalist parties. Among other things, the marchers demanded multi-party elections that would lead to an end of 45 years of communist rule in the republic.

Speakers at the Belgrade protest say they will continue to press their demands by staging similar protest marches throughout the republic. The demonstration was to be followed by a meeting of protest leaders with communist officials, but the officials refused to meet with them.

The opposition leaders said that in retaliation, they will cut off talks with the officials. Those had centered on proposed political reforms and were launched last week.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Unity Mutual Life Insurance Co. announced Wednesday a $1 million cash tender offer to complete its acquisition of New York-based Empire State Life Insurance Co.

Syracuse, N.Y.-based Unity, which had purchased 68.6 percent of Empire's common stock in 1987, is offering $2.15 a share for the company's remaining 521,715 shares outstanding.

The offer to purchase, dated June 14, said that Empire's board of directors ''has determined that the terms of the offer are fair to the public shareholders...and recommends that shareholders seriously consider the advantages of the offer.''

Unity said in the tender offer that it wants to complete its acquisition of Empire to increase its flexibility in managing the company and to reduce or eliminate expenses associated with Empire's status as a publicly held corporation.

Joseph Masella, chairman of Empire, said that Unity did not intend to make any managment changes at Empire upon completion of the acquisition.

NEW YORK (JUNE 13) UPI - Stocks closed slightly lower Wednesday in moderate trading after a choppy session in which prices were yanked back and forth by program trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which surged 40.85 Tuesday, fell 3.47 to close at 2929.95.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.66 to 199.00 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index slumped 1.35 to 364.90. The price of an average share lost 12 cents.

Declines led advances 774-714 among the 1,994 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 158,910,000 shares, versus 157,100,000 shares traded Tuesday.

The market had been expected to build on Tuesday's rally after the government reported retail sales made a poor showing in May. Sales fell 0.7 percent, the third straight monthly decline.

Bonds rallied on the news as traders saw a chance that interest rates might drop. The 30-year bond was up 7/8 to 103 31/32 in late trading. But stocks never posted any substantial gains. Trading was choppy, which analysts blamed on computerized program trading, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures.

"It wasn't a day of wide swings but of many swings," said Ralph Bloch, senior vice president and chief market analyst at Raymond, James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Fla. "The problem is, we had ostensibly good news today, but the market was all over the place.

Bloch also said investors may have been troubled by the weak economic news arguing players may be beginning to worry about whether the economy will slip into a recession and about earnings.

Analysts said volume was held down by anticipation of Thursday's and Friday's reports on producer and consumer prices and by the volatility that comes with "triple-witching hour" expirations of stock-index futures and options.

On the trading floor, Boeing was most active, up 7/8 to 59 3/4, apparently still rallying on news of a multibillion-dollar jet order from Korean Air Lines. IBM followed, up 1 1/8 to 121 3/8. Detroit Edison was third, up 1/4 to 26 3/4.

American Express was also active, up one to 31 3/8. The company said Tuesday it plans to offer 27 million shares of stock for about $825 million.

Among other blue chips, AT&T rose 1/8 to 43 1/8 and Eastman Kodak gained 3/8 to 41 3/4, but Woolworth lost 7/8 to 33 5/8 after boosting capital spending, reflecting an increase in the number of new stores it plans to open. Philip Morris was down 1/2 to 44 1/2.

Regional banks and savings and loans tumbled after Homefed Tuesday reported an $81 million rise in gross non-performing assets in May and MNC Financial said it expected real estate weakness to hurt earnings.

Homefed plunged 8 1/4 to 25, MNC sank 1 1/2 to 15 1/8, First Fidelity Bancorp lost 1 1/4 to 21, Ahmanson slumped one to 21 1/4 and Great Western Financial fell 1 5/8 to 18 7/8. Reports before the close said the Securities and Exchange Commission has begun a probe of Great Western's fourth-quarter writedown and addition to loan-loss reserves.

Elsewhere, Foxboro extended its rally, surging four to 36 3/8 after saying late Tuesday it has received several takeover bids.

Prime Motor Inns tumbled 1 3/8 to 11 1/2 after reportedly agreeing to sell its Howard Johnson and Ramada franchises to Blackstone Capital Partners for $170 million.

And RJR Nabisco Holdings warrants, which began trading last week, rose 1/4 to 7 1/8. The company's slumping junk bonds surged on a report in the Wall Street Journal that Kohlberg Kravis Roberts, which bought it last year in a leveraged buyout, is planning to inject $1.7 billion into RJR.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 191,909,560 shares, compared with 187,358,520 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index rose 0.73 to close at 365.04. The price of an average share gained two cents. Advances led declines 288-259 among the 825 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 15,604,750 shares, compared with 14,452,000 traded Tuesday.

AT&E Corp. led the Amex issues, down 1 3/4 to 21 1/2. The company, along with the Japanese company Seiko, Tuesday unveiled the world's first paging system that uses a wristwatch as a receiver.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index closed up 2.29 to 468.85.

DALLAS (JUNE 13) UPI - The Justice Department Wednesday announced a 38-count indictment against Don R. Dixon, the flamboyant former owner of the collapsed Vernon Savings and Loan Association.

Dixon was indicted in connection with the fraudulent operation of the now defunct financial institution. He allegedly conspired with other Vernon officials to use S&L funds to make illegal political contributions to 13 political candidates and committees, while hiding the sources of the contributions.

The contributions were made by individuals who were then reimbursed by Vernon by the use of false business expense vouchers, said U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins. There is no evidence that the campaigns or recipients named in the indictments engaged in any illegal or improper activity. They had no knowledge of the sources.

The indictment of Dixon ends a four-year investigation into allegations of fraud, self-dealing and misuse of thrift assets at Vernon, often cited as one of the worses cases of abuse in the state's savings and loan industry.

Seven former officers of the thrift, including Chairman Woody F. Lemons and President Patrick King, have been convicted or have pleaded guilty to criminal charges in connection with the thrift's failure.

Lemons is scheduled to report to the federal penitentiary in Big Spring on Thursday to begin serving a 30-year sentence on his conviction for receiving kickbacks from a Vernon borrower.

Dixon, who presided over Vernon's rise from a small-town thrift to a $1.7 billion institution, has been blamed for the excesses that led to the thrift's collapse, estimated to cost taxpayers more than $1.3 billion.

In the trials of Lemons and King, Dixon frequently was cited as the mastermind behind the thrift's reimbursement of employees for illegal campaign contributions and the hiring of female escorts to entertain state S&L regulators.

He and several top Vernon officers are defendants in a $540 million lawsuit filed by regulators accusing the officials of looting Vernon for their own benefit.

The lawsuit charges that Dixon and the others paid themselves huge bonuses and arranged expensive perks unrelated to the business affairs of Vernon.

For instance, the suit contends, Vernon purchased a $2 million California beach house that Dixon used as his personal residence and paid more than $500,000 for Dixon's personal expenses at the house. The thrift also owned or leased five aircraft, including a Falcon 50 jet, which the suit said Dixon used as a ''private air force'' for personal trips.

Dixon's extravagant lifestyle as Vernon's owner also has drawn the attention of Congress, whose members are criticizing the slow pace of S&L prosecutions. He was called to appear before the House Banking Committee when it held hearings on S&L fraud in Dallas earlier this year. The committee has said it would order Dixon and other former thrift owners to testify although no subpoenas have been issued.

William Ravkind, Dixon's attorney, said the public is demanding a scapegoat for the widespread failure of the nation's thrifts and that Vernon's jets, yachts and houses make Dixon ''the perfect scapegoat.''

''If he gets indicted, I don't think we can win,'' Ravkind said.

Rebels also attacked military installations on the southern rim of San Salvador Wednesday morning, injuring three members of the Mounted Regiment the army said.

''The rebels opened fire ... against military units, wounding a sub-sergeant and two soldiers, who were taken to the Military Hospital,'' they said.

A local radio station also reported that an army tank was damaged in the attack on the installations. Military spokesmen denied the equipment was damaged.

The armed forces also reported two rebels were injured and eight rebel land mines were destroyed in fighting Tuesday in San Idelfonso, about 40 miles east of the capital, while rebels continued their sabotage of electricity, knocking down lines in Chinameca, about 70 miles east of San Salvador.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Concern that the OPEC cartel may finally be getting its act together and reducing its price-depressing overproduction triggered a rally in crude oil prices late Wednesday, nudging prices upward.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate for July delivery ended the day on the New York Mercantile Exchange up 7 cents to $17.58 a barrel after trading lower most of the day. Volume was a moderate 78,881 contracts.

July delivery unleaded gasoline edged up 0.35 cent to 58.85 cents a gallon on the Merc.

The market traded lower earlier on the American Petroleum Institute's report late Tuesday that U.S. supplies of both crude oil and gasoline grew last week.

But an unconfirmed report that the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was finally beginning to abide by an agreement reached in early May to reduce output triggered a late rally, analysts said.

''The report that OPEC was really making some reductions made people nervous. It was pretty dull until late in the day, and the market was then led up by crude and concern about OPEC,'' said James Fiedler, vice president of E.D.F. Man International Futures in New York.

He noted, however, that WTI failed to move up through a key resistance level around $17.80 a barrel, hitting a high on the day of $17.74 before settling back.

The report that OPEC had reduced output to 22.9 million barrels a day ''sort of got things going,'' agreed Bill Hinton of New York's Stotler & Co.

The report followed a Tuesday statement by the United Arab Emirates' oil minister, Mena Saeed Otaiba, that his country had cut output by 200,000 barrels a day since May.

OPEC, at an emergency meeting in early May, agreed to cut its daily output by 1.4 million barrels to 22 million barrels in an effort to alleviate the world crude oil glut and the downward pressure on prices.

OPEC pumps more than a third of the world's oil and tries to support higher world prices by limiting the cartel's output.

U.S. industry sources, however, recently estimated OPEC's May output at 23.4 million barrels a day and said output of the main overproducer - the UAE - had stayed at 2.1 million barrels daily despite a promised reduction of 200,000 barrels.

They said some reduction of UAE output was expected in June because of planned oilfield maintenance.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast cash market, prompt delivery unleaded gasoline fell 1.25 cents to 59 cents a gallon while gaining 0.10 cent on the New York Harbor spot market to 64.10 cents a gallon.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast cash crude market, prompt delivery crude WTI rose 5 cents to $17.55 a barrel.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent slipped 3 cents to $15.95 a barrel.

The UAE's Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - rose 3 cents to $13.58 a barrel.

On the Merc, July-delivery heating oil finished the day at 48.57 cents a gallon, up 0.28 cents.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - President Bush said Wednesday he would oppose extra unemployment compensation for workers in the Pacific Northwest who may lose their jobs because of logging cutbacks forced by federal protection of the northern spotted owl.

Bush's remarks came as a group representing Oregon timber workers and mill owners met in the nation's capital with Interior Secretary Manual Lujan and Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter to discuss the spotted owl issue.

The same 11-member delegation was to meet Thursday with White House chief of staff John Sununu and other presidential advisers. The group is appealing to the administration to do what it can to blunt the economic impact of a spotted owl recovery plan.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is expected to list the spotted owl as a threatened or endangered species later this month, a move that almost certainly would bring drastic logging restrictions in the Northwest to protect the bird's habitat.

The U.S. Forest Service, which manages most of the federal timberlands in the region, recently estimated 28,000 jobs could be lost in Oregon, Washington and northern California by the year 2000 under a plan proposed by government scientists for saving the owl.

At a news conference Wednesday, Bush reiterated his concern for balancing environmental interests against potential job losses.

''I hope we can have a resolution of this problem that will not result in throwing 30,000 families out of work,'' he said.

But asked whether he would support special compensations for workers displaced by a spotted owl listing, Bush said he remained opposed to an approach recently adopted by the House under clean air legislation.

''I oppose that, and I would oppose a similar amendment (aimed at job losses related to the spotted owl),'' Bush said. ''But I am very much concerned about the potential loss of jobs as a result of this spotted owl problem.''

MONROVIA, LIBERIA (JUNE 13) UPI - Four soldiers charged with slayings in the past month went on trial Wednesday as the government stepped up efforts to stem a rash of tribal-related killings that occurred as rebel troops advanced on the Liberian capital.

Determined to prove to an international audience that the trial was not rigged, the court suspended proceedings until Thursday because two of the defendants asked for civilian lawyers to represent them before the court-martial.

Three men, a major and two lieutenants, are charged with killing a suburban mayor, Vajnan Richards, and several members of his family. A fourth man, a private, was charged by the military court with a separate killing on a beach.

For the past three weeks, as troops of rebel leader Charles Taylor advanced, residents of Monrovia have feared to go out after dark because of an outbreak of what appeared to be tribal-related killings and mutilations by bands of men in military uniform, believed to be renegade government troops.

Bodies of men and women, some apparently slain with their hands tied behind their backs, others with body mutilations and some even decapitated have been appearing on beaches, in empty lots or simply by roadsides in the capital.

After Richards' murder, the government began night patrols of the city and set up a high-profile court-martial to deflect mounting local and international concern that it might be condoning the killings.

In a pool of television light in a hot dark hall, once an army canteen at the huge barracks in downtown Monrovia, Col. Isaac Nyeplu began the proceedings by reading from a 1951 edition of the United States Manual for Courts-Martial.

He told Maj. Henry Johnson, 1st Lt. Andrew Gaye, 2nd Lt. Arthur Nyenabo and Private James Grear they were charged with murder under Article 18 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

''I'm not going to allow any press anywhere to say you were not given free and fair trial,'' he said, referring to complaints of rigged trials in Liberia last year by the human rights group Amnesty International.

Liberia's human rights record has been widely condemned, in particular because the government has a history of summarily executing civilians and soldiers it suspects of opposing it.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL (JUNE 13) UPI - A third member of rap band 2 Live Crew received a summons Wednesday to appear in court to face obscenity charges for allegedly performing songs from the controversial album ''As Nasty As They Wanna Be.''

''Mark Ross was issued a notice to appear in court on July 24 at 1:30 p.m. at a meeting today,'' Deputy Deerena Ewing of the Broward County Sheriff's Department said.

Two other 2 Live Crew members were arrested early Sunday, shortly after the group finished a live performance in Hollywood, Fla. The arrests followed a federal judge's ruling last Wednesday that the sexually explicit ''Nasty As They Wanna Be'' is obscene.

All three band members were charged with violating Florida's obscenity law for allegedly reciting lyrics from the album during Sunday's performance.

A fourth band member will not be charged because he did not recite the lyrics, authorities said.

If convicted of the first-degree misdemeanor, each faces a maximum of one year in jail and a maximum fine of $1,000.

U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzalez ruled that the album was legally obscene by community standards, saying its lyrics vividly depict sexual acts and lack any redeeming social value.

Gonzalez said his ruling applied to Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties. The album has been declared obscene in at least eight other counties across the state.

Meanwhile, officials in Gwinnett County, Ga., threatened Wednesday to arrest 2 Live Crew members if the band's performance there Thursday violates the state's obscenity law.

Promoters of the show have promised that 2 Live Crew will deliver a toned-down version of the concert when they perform at The Ozone, a Duluth teen club that normally admits only patrons between the ages of 14 and 19.

''It doesn't take a lawyer to listen to the tape and know it's obscene,'' Gwinnett Chief Assistant Solicitor David Fuller said. ''It's describing sexual acts in a pornographic way. The First Amendment doesn't protect obscenity.''

On Tuesday, police in San Antonio, Texas, visited 30 record stores to suggest that owners remove the controversial album from their shelves or face possible legal action.

Vice Commander Lt. Jerry Pittman said the album rests ''in the same category as any X-rated pornographic movie.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Senate Democrats, ignoring Republican objections, began to push Wednesday for passage of legislation to give workers unpaid leave for the birth of a child or to care for a child or close relative during a serious illness.

''No one should be forced to choose between the job they need and the child they love,'' Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said as debate opened on one of the major domestic issues of the session.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, acting at the request of an unnamed GOP senator, objected to calling up the bill, a procedural move to block consideration.

But debate began anyway after Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine filed a formal petition to stop debate on his motion to call up the bill. Unless an agreement is reached earlier, the Senate was to vote on the motion Friday.

The measure, limited to employees of companies with 50 or more workers, would require up to 12 weeks of unpaid parental leave each year for employees who have been on the job for one year.

The bill also would give employees 12 weeks a year of unpaid medical leave for severe medical problems and for the care of newborn and seriously ill children, spouses and parents.

Employees of federal, state and local governments, as well those of private employers, would be covered.

The bill, the same one as passed by the House 237-187 last month, is opposed by the administration and Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole has said she will ''strongly recommend'' that President Bush veto the measure.

The General Accounting Office estimated the cost to private business at less than $200 million.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., floor manager for the bill, said, ''Parents ought to be able to have job and children. What do parents do in a crisis? They have a ... choice between their jobs and their families.''

Kennedy, injecting a personal note, recalled when his son, Teddy, was hospitalized with cancer 17 years ago and the senator spent three days a week for 23 weeks with the boy while he received chemotherapy.

''I felt that my time away from the office was an obligation I had as a parent - a responsibilty I take very seriously,'' Kennedy said. ''But, as a senator, I was able to take time off from work to care for my child. Millions of Americans are not that lucky.''

''No working Americans should be denied the opportunity to fulfill their baic obligations as parents,'' he said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, speaking for the opposition, said, ''I don't want to see anyone fired because they have a baby,'' but added the bill would inject ''inflexibility'' into attempts by employees to get benefits from their companies.

Hatch also warned of the ''cost burden'' to business and of the ''sweeping and unprecedented consequences'' of passing the bill.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 13) UPI - ''Cheers'' cast member Kelsey Grammer, who recently completed a 30-day jail term for drunken driving, pleaded innocent Wednesday to cocaine possession charges.

The actor, who plays the brainy but absent-minded psychiatrist Frasier Crane on ''Cheers,'' the popular and long-running NBC sitcom, was ordered to return to court July 12 for a pre-trial hearing after denying the single felony count at his arraignment Wednesday. He remains free on bail.

If convicted, Grammer, 35, could be sentenced to three years in state prison.

Prosecutors said Grammer was arrested for possession of a quarter-gram of cocaine after being pulled over by police in North Hollywood in April 1988 for having expired license plates.

Grammer, who lives in Van Nuys, could have avoided prosecution on the drug charge by attending a court-ordered drug rehabilitation program. He failed to do so, and the drug charge was then reinstated.

In a separate case, Grammer on May 24 began serving a 30-day County Jail term for violating probation by failing to attend an alcohol-abuse program for a 1987 drunken driving arrest in Van Nuys. The actor also failed to serve 10 days working on a state transportation department roadside crew in connection with the drunken driving arrest.

Grammer's jail sentence was shortened because of good behavior and he recently completed it, prosecutors said.

Grammer told reporters he was too busy caring for his ailing financee to complete the drug and alcohol rehab programs. He said he missed a May 2 court appearance because he was on a cruise to Mexico.

His jail sentence did not affect production of ''Cheers,'' which is now on hiatus between seasons.

CINCINNATI (JUNE 13) UPI - Procter & Gamble Co., liking the financial fragrance of the men's toiletries market, Wednesday bought the Old Spice and Sante Fe operations for $300 million from American Cyanamid Co.'s Shulton group.

''This gives us a strong foothold in the male toiletries business worldwide,'' said Edwin L. Artzt, P&G's chairman and chief executive officer.

''The male toiletries and fragrances markets have great growth potential, and Shulton's Old Spice represents an outstanding first entry for us. It has the quality and reputation to become a major world brand.''

The deal calls for P&G to buy the Old Spice and Sante Fe men's toiletries and fragrances, along with several other products in the United States and internationally. Excluded, however, was the Pierre Cardin fragrance line.

Also, American Cyanamid said it will pursue the sale of Shulton's line of Breck hair care products and Lady's Choice personal care products to other parties. The total value of these combined transactions to American Cyanamid will be $370 million.

The final cost to P&G will be somewhat more than $300 million, depending on what American Cyanamid gets from the sale of the Breck and Lady's Choice product lines.

Under the agreement, P&G will acquire a manufacturing facility in Memphis, Tenn., and three in other countries.

The agreement is subject to the normal Hart-Scott-Rodino antitrust review by the federal government.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 13) UPI - The 12-nation European Community said Wednesday it will provide $72 million over four years to Colombia to support the fight against production and export of drugs.

Abel Matutes, EC commissioner in charge of relations with Latin America, said the money would be used for projects strengthening Colombia's economy and diversifying its agricultural production, particularly switching from coca to other commodities.

He said the financial aid of $18 million a year from 1990 through 1993 compares with an average annual EC aid of $2.4 million to Colombia over the past 12 years.

The Commission also asked the Council of Ministers to allow agricultural and industrial exports from Colombia, Bolivia and Peru to be allowed to enter the EC without customs duties for four years.

Matutes, speaking at a news conference in Strasbourg, France, which was transmitted live to the Brussels EC headquarters, said Bolivia and Peru were included in this proposal because they also have problems with drug production and trafficking.

He said the measure could not be seen as a precedent by other nations, as it was temporary and aimed at assisting these countries in a particular situation.

The EC applied the same system to Poland and Hungary last year to help them in their economic reforms.

Matutes said the Commission also proposed to coordinate Community action in favor of Colombia with individual support given to the anti-drug program by individual member states so as to ensure maximum efficiency for their combined assistance.

Colombian President Virgilio Barco visited the EC Commission in April, explaining his plans to fight the drug cartel.

''President Barco has declared war on drugs with a specific action program '' Matutes said. ''It is necesary to show the Community's solidarity because of the particular situation in that country.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The World Bank Wednesday said India has joined the nations enjoying rapid economic growth but still needs $6.7 billion in aid over the next 12 months, including $3.4 billion in concessional funds.

Separately, sources from the Bush administration said that U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills will announce Thursday she will not use the so-called Super 301 provision of the Trade Act to retaliate against India's policies limiting foreign investments and foreign insurance companies' activities.

Instead, Hills will refer U.S. commercial and investment gripes with India to the Uruguay Round of trade liberalization negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the Geneva-based group that seeks to lift global barriers to exports.

The World Bank will chair a meeting of donor nations forming the India Consortium June 18-19 in Paris to discuss the economic situation of the Asian giant and its external financing needs.

According to the multilateral organization, India will need over the next 12 months the same amount of aid pledges as it did last year, $6.7 billion of which $3.4 billion were in concessional financing, World Bank Vice President Attila Karaosmanoglu told reporters.

Presenting the results of a World Bank report on India, he said that the country ''joined the nations with higher growth paths.''

The report shows that after expanding at a 3.5 percent annual rate in the first three decades after independence, the Indian economy accelerated to a 5.2 percent clip in the 1980s.

India's export volume growth surpassed 10 percent in each of the last four years, ''dispelling the myth that it can not compete in world markets,'' the report said.

Karaosmanoglu said the bank is optimistic on India's economy but cautioned the country's fiscal deficit is too large, ''although manageable.'' The shortfall in the country's balance of payments reached 3.3 percent in each of the last two years, he said.

Current account deficits were financed by reserve losses and borrowing, swelling India's foreign debt to $63 billion and the debt-service ratio to exports to 27 percent. Reserves now can cover only two months of imports, the report said.

The World Bank is recommending India to further deregulate its economy and imports in order to make production more efficient, Karaosmanoglu said, noting that India's economic strategy seems to give priority to ''creating institutions'' as a first step toward liberalization.

Due to the external difficulties of India, the bank will recommend to the Paris meeting a higher level of concessional aid and quicker disbursements the organization's vice president said.

World Bank Group disbursements to India will fall from $2.3 billion last year to $2 billion this year.

The World Bank proper and its affiliate International Development Association - which lends in concessionary terms to the poorest countries - have $13 billion in their loan ''pipeline'' for India, but approval and disbursements are being slowed down by the lack of project counterpart funds in that country, Karaosmanoglu said.

World Bank lending pledges to India will also fall, from $2.75 billion expected at the last India Consortium meeting, to about $2 billion, because two projects are not yet ready for bank board approval, he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - Lawmakers and business leaders urged Thai Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhaven Wednesday to crack down on trademark pirates in Thailand who are counterfeiting American movies, cartoon characters and other goods.

Unauthorized copies of music and trademark items - like the ''Peanuts'' character Snoopy - cost U.S. businesses $61 million in lost royalties and sales a year, said Eric Smith, general counsel of the International Intellectual Property Alliance.

Chatichai arrived in the United States Wednesday for a meeting with President Bush Thursday. Businesses are angry that the Thai government appears to be tolerating the counterfeiting operations.

In a letter to the Thai ambassador, sent last week and released Wednesday, six senators said, ''We are most concerned about the continued piracy of U.S. copyrighted works in Thailand and the seeming lack of commitment'' by the Thai government to deal with the problem.

The letter was signed by Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Bob Packwood, R-Ore., John Heinz, R-Pa., David Boren, D-Okla., and Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va.

''Thailand is the last of our major trading partners to do anything about intellectual property protection,'' said an aide to Moynihan.

''Since Singapore and Indonesia shut down piracy operations, Thai copies of cassettes are appearing in Saudi Arabia,'' Smith said.

''We complained to the Thai government and they did zero, he added.

''The pirates created a trade asssociation, collected dues for a slush fund of $120,000 to pay fines for retailers. When we tried to target the manufacturers, that's when the death threats started'' against Thai representatives of international copyright protection companies, Smith said.

In a letter to Secretary of State James Baker and Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher - both scheduled to meet with Chatichai - Smith told of death threats in Thailand and the need for enforcement of copyright protection.

By Wednesday the Thai embassy had not replied to the senators' letter and no one was available to comment.

A State Department official said, ''The Thai government is aware this is a concern and they need to give this urgent attention.''

Snoopy, cartoonist Charles Schulz's happy-go-lucky dog, may be one of the most popular characters in modern Thai culture, but his smiling face is used without paying royalties to United Features Syndicate, which holds the copyright.

The State Deparment official said that when the syndicate took the issue to a Thai court, the judge ruled that the drawing simply portrayed a dog, not a unique design, and threw the case out of court.

Thais also pirate computer software and pharmaceuticals, mostly for domestic sales.

CONCORD, N.H. (JUNE 14) UPI - Despite fierce opposition from the state's top Democratic leader and anti-nuclear activists, New Hampshire officials Wednesday approved a $30 million tax-exempt bond package for a Connecticut utility.

The state Executive Council voted 4-1 to allow United Illuminating Co. of Connecticut to bond construction costs for a waste-treatment facility at the Seabrook nuclear power plant.

The facility, which has already been built, includes a lagoon that treats spent nuclear fuel that will be sent elsewhere for permanent disposal, said Marilyn Jewell, executive director of the state Industrial Development Authority.

House Democratic Leader Rep. Mary Chambers of Etna criticized the state's Industrial Development Authority, saying it ''should find better things to do with economic development bonding than subsidizing and out-of-state utility.''

United Illuminating Co. owns 17.5 percent of the $6.5 billion power plant.

The utility has already received $160 million in revenue bond financing from the authority.

Chambers said the authority has apparently been established to subsidize nuclear power interests and said other uses for the state's bonding power have been routinely shot down by state officials.

''I think it's unfortunate in these difficult economic times that the IDA is not focusing its efforts and limited funding on creating jobs and economic opportunities in New Hampshire,'' Chambers said.

Jewell said United Illuminating's share of Seabrook made it eligible for state economic assistance.

''They were considered because this is for a New Hampshire project. New Hampshire citizens are going to be using the bulk of the electricity produced by Seabrook,'' Jewell said.

The authority routinely provides bonding guarantees to private companies that are involved in major building projects in New Hampshire. The tax-exempt bond guarantee helps the borrower secure lower interest rates for loans, Jewell said.

The company in turn passes those savings back to the consumer and also provides jobs during construction, she said.

But Seabrook foe Robert Cushing Jr. said the waste treatment facility at Seabrook will eventually become a ''radioactive waste dump'' that will never be sent out of the state for disposal as state officials claim.

''What they've (Executive Council) done is ensure that the site will be used for a low-level waste dump for Seabrook,'' he said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - General Media Publishing Group, publisher of Penthouse, has acquired three automotive magazines from Lopez Publications Inc., the company announced Wednesday.

The monthly magazines - Stock Car Racing, SuperStock and Drag and Open Wheel - will be published by Four Wheeler Publishing, a division of General Media, said Robert Guccione, the company's chairman, in a statement.

The division, based in Los Angeles, already publishes a magazine entitled Four Wheeler.

The three magazines have a combined circulation of more than 200,000.

''We intend to apply the same winning formula to our new automotive titles that we have to Four Wheeler,'' Guccione said.

Four Wheeler has increased advertising by 87 percent and circulation by 64 percent since General Media acquired the publishing group in 1986, he said.

General Media is seeking to acquire other automotive magazines as well, Guccione said.

General Media, which recently acquired Compute! Magazine Group from Capital Cities/ABC Publishing, publishes Omni, Longevity and several other magazines in addition to Penthouse.

Penthouse recently announced its total number of ad pages for the first six months of this year rose to 310.26, up 5.1 percent from 295.06 a year ago.

Ad revenues rose 12.7 percent to $13 million from $11.6 million a year ago.

MIAMI BEACH, FL (JUNE 13) UPI - Florida's new dress code for beaches, designed to keep sun worshippers from baring it all or nearly all in revealing swimwear, sparked outrage among beachgoers Wednesday and apathy among local officials.

''I like bathing with my top off,'' said Shelly Socol, 20, a topless bather on Miami Beach. ''How you sunbathe is your own business. This is censorship. They're just taking away our freedoms.''

''If they tell me I can't wear this (a G-string style suit), I'll just go without one. I love to see the young ladies walking about in them,'' said Bob Holloway, 50, as he sunbathed on Miami Beach wearing his scanty suit.

The swimwear rules, approved Tuesday by the Florida Cabinet, effectively ban wearing of the popular thong-type bathing suits. Specifically forbidden is exposure of the buttocks, the genitals and the female breast below the top of the nipple.

The Florida Department of Natural Resources recommended the revised restrictions for beaches in state parks. About 30 miles of Florida's 780 miles of beach are in state parks.

Miami Beach sunbathers may be shielded from the regulations, because the city establishes its own ordinances regulating beach attire and may not be affected by the Cabinet's ruling, said detective Tom Hoolahan of the Miami Beach Police Department.

''Technically, the beach belongs to the state. But it is maintained by the county and we patrol it,'' Hoolahan said.

''Our local ordinances are loosely enforced, until we get complaints,'' the detective said. ''It's not our place to put moral reviews on individuals. We have to keep perspective on this because we are a large tourist town and we are not here to chase tourists away.''

Foreign tourists in particular are inclined to shed their tops as is customary on European beaches, he said.

''In my country, we always say America is the country of unlimited possibilities, but then we get here and go to the beaches and it isn't true,'' said Barbara Rimmele of West Germany, who was sunbathing at Cape Florida State Park on Key Biscayne.

Cape Florida is one of the areas affected by the revised regulations, and park officials received several calls Wednesday from sunbathers wondering what to wear to the beach, assistant park manager Peter Scalco said.

''Until we get an official word delineating what is proper and what is not we're going along with what we've been doing, which is whatever is in style is OK basically,'' Scalco said. ''It's not real high on the priority list.''

In Tallahassee, protesters delivered a black boot stuffed with a copy of the Bill of Rights and about 90 letters asking the Florida Department of Natural Resources to set aside clothing-optional beaches. The boot was red-soled to symbolize the trampling of beachgoers' rights by the Cabinet.

''Let us make the rules that will help us all to enjoy the Sunshine State as nature intended,'' William Summers wrote in a letter addressed to the governor and the department.

Like the city of Miami Beach, St. Petersburg, which owns the beach on Treasure Island and a small stretch of downtown waterfront property, has no plans to alter its ordinances.

''I was on St. Petersburg Beach on Sunday,'' said Herb Polson, director of intergovernmental relations for the city. ''I saw a substantial number of people wearing those (thong-type) bathing suits. There was nothing particularly offensive about it. ... The fashion is the fashion.''

That sentiment was reflected in northern Florida as well.

''What the Cabinet did is going to have some impact on coastal cities,'' said Lester Griffis, Jacksonville Beach city manager. ''There's bodies into things that shouldn't be and bodies not into things that should be. I personally do not see it as a big major problem right now.''

Carl Keen, manager of Grayton Beach and Henderson Beach State Recreation Areas, said he has never had a complaint about skimpy swimsuits, but he supports the regulations.

''What any person wears in their own private property or someplace not on public lands they have a constitutional right,'' Keen said. ''But when you come on public lands, you're coming into family-oriented land, and I do believe they should conform to some kind of decency.''

BOSTON (JUNE 14) UPI - A trade association of federal savings banks Wednesday opposed a proposed law that would extend state taxes to services and said the bill ''threatens the viability of Massachusetts-based banking and credit services.''

The group, the Massachusetts Federal Savings Council, represents 25 such institutions, including some big, troubled ones such as ComFed Savings Bank and, until it was taken over recently by federal regulators, Home Owners Savings Bank.

But a council spokesman, Robb J. Osinksi, said small, healthy thrifts would be even harder hit than the big banks because the small ones buy more of the services they use such as computer services and check processing from outside vendors.

Other financial services groups have spoken out against the proposal, including Fidelity Investments, the huge Boston-based mutal fund company that manages $110 billion.

''We are concerned about the competitive impact of a tax like this,'' said Jeannette Akers, a Fidelity spokeswoman.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - House Agriculture Committee leaders unveiled a package Wednesday to strengthen the so-called swampbuster program and create two new programs to protect water quality on environmentally sensitive land.

Farm organizations and environmental groups agreed to three key elements in the package, which was worked out during the past two weeks. The action on swampbuster, created in 1985 to protect wetlands, reversed a subcommittee proposal.

Committee chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, said he intended to complete work on the environmental package Wednesday, fold it into the five-year farm policy law being written by the committee and report the bill to the floor before adjourning for the day.

''It is increasingly recognized that all of our citizens have a role to play in protecting the environment,'' said Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., in explaining why the programs were being offered. ''None of the provisions of the agreement imposes additional burden on producers.''

However, Rep. Ron Marlene, R-Mont., said farmers would be saddled with additional costs to comply with the provisions or would lose the chance to farm some of their land.

An administration official estimated the environmental programs, if funded could cost $2.4 billion over five years.

The 1985 farm policy law, which expires this year, was a watershed, linking environmental and farm program goals for the first time. In general, it required farmers to practice conservation in order to be eligible for farm program benefits.

Swampbuster, the most controversial of the environmental programs, says farmers risk the loss of all benefits if they drain a wetland and plant crops on it. Some farm groups complained of high-handed enforcement of the law while environmentalists contended the penalties were rarely enforced.

Committee leaders crafted a plan which calls for a more precise determination of wetlands and which allows for graduated penalties, rather than the ''drop dead'' penalty now available. A first-time violation could result in a loss of $750 to $10,000 in farm payments and a requirement to restore the land.

The plan also makes it a violation to drain a wetland, rather than the current situation of drainage having to be coupled with planting of a crop. In addition, the plan dropped subcommittee language that would have exempted up to 10 million acres from swampbuster.

On water quality, the package would urge farmers in environmentally sensitive areas to seek government help in drawing up a plan to protect water supplies. Farmers could get up to $3,500 a year for adopting practices that preserve water quality and could get $1,500 a year for steps to preserve wetlands or improve wildlife habitat.

In addition, the package would allow an additional 10 million acres to be enrolled in the Conservation Reserve, the largest long-term land retirement program ever. Under it, farmers are paid an annual rent in exchange for taking highly erodible land out of production.

The package also would set a goal of acquiring easements on up to 2.5 million acres to protect water quality or preserve wetlands.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 13) UPI - The Army announced Wednesday it is going to begin deactivating the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas, eliminating 3,537 military jobs and possibly up to 300 civilian positions by Sept. 30.

In addition, the remaining 8,615 military jobs at Fort Hood will be eliminated between Oct. 1 and Sept. 30, 1991.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's fiscal 1991 budget called for deactivating two Army divisions - the 9th Infantry at Fort Lewis, Wash., and the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood - for a savings of $1.2 billion.

The 9th Infantry Division has not been deactivated yet.

The Army said in a statement Wednesday that it is going ahead with the Fort Hood plan after an environmental assessment determined there would be ''no significant impact,'' and after considering ''comments from the public.''

The statement was held up briefly at the Pentagon until Congress could be officially notified of the Army's action.

The 2nd Armored Division consists of 12,083 active Army personnel. It comprises the division headquarters and staff, two maneuver brigade headquarters, three armor battalions, three mechanized infantry battalions an aviation brigade, artillery, and divisional support command and troops.

Most of the troops were expected to be assigned to other units.

Cheney's proposed budget for fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1, would trim the ranks of America's 2.1 million troops by 38,000 - 17,000 from the Army 15,000 from the Air Force and 6,000 from the Navy and Marines.

LOS ALAMOS, NM (JUNE 13) UPI - More people will die from the illness linked to the health supplement L-tryptophan if the epidemic continues to mirror the outbreak that killed more than 800 people in Spain, doctors said Wednesday.

Researchers discussed the similarities between L-tryptophan-linked Eosinophilia Myalgia Syndrome and Spain's Toxic Oil Syndrome during the second day of a two-day conference on EMS.

''If EMS continues to follow the road of progress of TOS, we could be headed for worse problems,'' said Dr. Edwin Kilbourne of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. ''Current reports ... indicate it is following the same path. That bothers me, to say the least.''

In Spain, 839 people died of the 20,643 who became sick when the Toxic Oil Syndrome outbreak hit in 1981. The victims had ingested contaminated cooking oil and suffered symptoms very similar to those of EMS, severe muscle pain, high counts of the white blood cells called eosinophils, swelling, fever, rashes and skin lesions and muscle and nerve degeneration.

''Our medical system almost collapsed with all these people with this serious illness,'' said Dr. Ferdinand Pozo of the Spanish Ministry's Fund for Health Research.

The Center for Disease Control has confirmed 26 deaths among the 1,517 cases of EMS, first named when the epidemic began in November 1989. The number of new cases has dropped dramatically since L-tryptophan, a widely used health supplement often prescribed for insomnia, was recalled late last year. But, if the same proportion of EMS as TOS sufferers die, at least 62 people will die from EMS.

In Spain, respiratory failure was the leading cause of death at the beginning of the outbreak. Later, more people died as a result of nerve degeneration leading to respiratory failure. Pulmonary hypertension, increased pressure in a major artery in the heart, became the prevalent cause of death in the later stages of the epidemic.

Kilbourne said pulmonary hypertension is being found in more EMS patients, a fact he finds troubling.

Dr. Thomas James, a heart specialist at the University of Texas who conducted autopsies on the hearts of victims of both syndromes, said he found similar conditions in the hearts, although to differing degrees.

In both outbreaks, doctors have yet to identify the cause of the illness.

''We know, with near certainty, the toxic oil was the vehicle for the agent (in Spain),'' said Kilbourne.

Pozo said researchers found a ''high association'' between the levels of illness and analine, a compound found in the oil that is biochemically similar to L-tryptophan and the family of compounds called indoles.

However, Kilbourne said, scientists have been unable to reproduce the illness in animals.

Analine is ''still on the table,'' he said, and the inability to recreate the illness in the lab might be a result of the differences in animal and human physiology. He noted, however, researchers might have yet to find the real cause of the illness.

Similarly, evidence increasingly indicates L-tryptophan made by Showa Denko of Japan after mid-1989 is the culprit behind EMS and an impurity that might be like indole could be the cause of the illness. But, scientists still don't know how such an impurity would cause the EMS symptoms and have more questions than answers.

''We don't know where EMS is going and if it's going to be as severe,'' said Kilbourne.

BALTIMORE (JUNE 14) UPI - SCM Chemicals Wednesday announced an alliance with the South Korean company Lucky Metals to launch a new development in the global titanium dioxide business.

By the end of 1991, Tiona brand titanium dioxide will be produced by a new Lucky Metals plant near Ulsan, South Korea, with an annual capacity of 40,000 metric tons of the pigment, used in coatings, paper and plastics. SCM chemicals will supply raw pigments to the plant, which will incorporate SCM Chemicals' technology.

Prior to the plant's completion, Lucky Metals will serve as SCM Chemicals' agent for Tiona titanium dioxide in South Korea. After the plant begins operations, SCM Chemicals will distribute Lucky Metals-produced Tiona pigments to other global markets.

SCM Chemicals, the world's third-largest manufacturer of titanium dioxide, has headquarters in Baltimore. It is owned by Hanson Industries, the U.S. arm of the British/American industrial management company Hanson PLC.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Accused stock speculator John Mulheren took the witness stand in his own defense Wednesday, denying he ever conducted an illegal stock trade with admitted inside trader Ivan Boesky.

Mulheren, who is accused of helping Boesky evade taxes and securities laws in exchange for valuable stock tips, testified in federal court in Manhattan that he was approached by Boesky's head trader to conduct a fradulent deal but refused.

Prosecutors contend Mulheren held stock for Boesky so the arbitrager could avoid tax liabilities. The practice, known as stock parking, is designed to conceal the true owner of a security.

Under the arrangement, Boesky sold stock to Mulheren, but retained the right to any profits and promised to buy the stock back, prosecutors charge.

Mulheren said he was first approached by Boesky in 1985 and agreed to do him a favor.

Boesky's trader, Michael Davidoff, then called Mulheren and said he had 330,000 shares of Unocal Corp. to sell, Mulheren said.

Davidoff added that ''we might want to buy them back,'' Mulheren testified.

''I told you before we don't do business that way,'' Mulheren said he told Davidoff.

Mulheren admitted he eventually bought the shares, without any agreement, and sold them later on the open market at a loss.

Boesky, who appeared as the government's star witness against Mulheren, testified last month he had arranged with Mulheren to park Unocal stock.

Edward McCarthy, a former partner of Mulheren, testifed earlier this month that Mulheren asked him to keep separate records of his Unocal stock because ''it was Ivan's.'' Mulheren's investment company made a profit of about $500,000 from the Unocol holdings, McCarthys aid.

Mulheren told McCarthy that ''Ivan wanted his money back'' and they decided to inflate the brokerage bills they paid Boesky's trading company, McCarthy testified.

Mulheren, 50, faces 41 counts of fraud and conspiracy. He was implicated when Boesky turned government informant to settle insider trading charges in a 1986 plea bargain.

Mulheren also testified he first met Boesky in 1976, when they had dinner at a posh restaurant on Manhattan's Upper West Side.

Boesky ordered all the entrees on the menu, and then ate only ones he liked, Mulheren recalled.

Boesky pleaded guilty to securities law violations and also agreed to pay $100 million to settle civil charges of trading on non-public information. He was sentenced to three years in prison and was released in April from a Brooklyn halfway house.

Mulheren once allegedly threatened to shoot Boesky for informing on him and is on probation on gun charges stemming from the 1988 incident. His family said Mulheren had failed to take the medication he uses to control manic-depression.

ROME (JUNE 13) UPI - Argentina sidestepped the embarrassment of becoming the second defending chamion to suffer elimination in the first round of the World Cup - but the Argentines aren't safe yet.

Argentina rebounded from its humiliating 1-0 defeat to Cameroon by defeating the Soviet Union 2-0 Wednesday night in Naples. The result virtually eliminated the Soviets, who were upset 2-0 by Romania in their opener.

To reach the second round, the South Americans may need help from Cameroon of all teams. Cameroon and Romania play Thursday in Bari, and a draw or a Romanian victory would hurt Argentina's chances of making the last 16.

The only defending champion that failed to get beyond the first round was Brazil in 1966.

Whatever happens, one thing is certain. The Argentines will play without their goalkeeper Nery Pumpido for the rest of the tournament. Pumpido fractured his right leg after colliding with Soviet striker Alexander Zavarov in the 11th minute.

Pedro Troglio headed in the first goal after 27 minutes. Jorge Burruchaga, who scored the winning goal in the 1986 World Cup final, added the second with 10 minutes left. The Soviets played the last 42 minutes with 10 men after Vladimir Bessonov was sent off for tripping Claudio Caniggia.

In Wednesday's other game, Uruguay and Spain played a 0-0 draw in Udine in Group E to complete the first phase of the opening round. It was the tournament's first goalless game. Uruguay's Ruben Sosa missed a 73rd-minute penalty kick, typifying the defensive struggle full of scrappy play and squandered chances.

On Thursday, Cameroon and Romania, a pair of also rans before the World Cup, will be gunning for first place when they meet in their second Group B match. A draw would almost certainly carry both to the second round.

Romania will be strengthened by the return of star midfielder Gheorghe Hagi, who missed the Soviet game because of a suspension incurred in a World Cup qualifier. The Romanians also have Marius Lacatus, who scored twice against the Soviets.

''Against Argentina we were told to watch out for (Diego) Maradona,'' Cameroon's Soviet Coach Valeri Nepomniachi said. ''Now people say we should fear Hagi and Lacatus. But Cameroon will play against 11 players, not just one or two stars.''

In two other games Thursday, the United States plays Italy in Group A in Rome and Yugoslavia faces Colombia in Group D in Bologna.

Italy, impressive in a 1-0 victory against Austria, will be playing before 80,000 home fans against an American squad completely outplayed in a 5-1 loss to Czechoslovakia.

The U.S. team is now rated at 5,000-1 overall by London bookmakers and 50-1 to beat Italy. Yet Italian Coach Azeglio Vicini is taking a cautious approach.

''The excitement over Saturday's victory has worn off and now we must concentrate on the United States,'' he said. ''I don't put much credence in that result with Czechoslovakia. It's better not to understimate them.''

The Americans are expecting Italy to go for a big victory because of Czechoslovakia's four-goal margin. Italy plays the Czechoslavaks Tuesday and goal difference could be a factor for a tie-breaker to determine seeding for the next round.

''I'm sure their fans will be upset if they only beat us 1-0,'' U.S. Coach Bob Gansler said. ''They saw what Czechoslovakia did to us and they want their team to show they are better than Czechoslovakia.''

The United States lost 7-1 to Italy in the 1934 World Cup and 10-0 in Rome in 1975. The U.S. team can only hope its last encounter with Italy was more telling - a scoreless draw in 1984 at East Rutherford, N.J.

(JUNE 13) UPI - An official at Howard University's Public Television station says Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry will appear on the station tonight. The official says he is NOT sure what the beleaguered mayor plans to say. But it's reported that Barry intends to announce that he will NOT seek re-election. The three-term mayor is currently being tried on 14 drug and perjury charges in a Washington federal court.

Minnesota Republican David Durenberger says he realizes some of his dealings leave the impression he tried to sidestep rules for financial gain. As Durenberger told the Senate Ethics Committee today- quote- ''a clear conscience or a legal opinion does NOT make you ethically bulletproof.'' The Coast Guard says the fire is under control and most of the spill has either burned off or evaporated.

PEORIA, IL (JUNE 13) UPI - Parents of a kidnapped Peoria man said Wednesday the same news media coverage that helped raise $60,000 to win their son's release has led his Columbian abductors to increase the ransom demand to more than $600,000.

Scott Heimdal was working as an engineer for a U.S.-based mining company when he was kidnapped April 28 in Ecuador by Maoist extremists from Columbia.

Marge Heimdal said television news pictures of the family's central Illinois home surrounded by autos has given her son's captors the impression the family is wealthy.

The cars and vans belonged to reporters and family supporters and the family said the one-story, two-bedroom, wood-frame home in a working-class neighborhood is rented.

''They think we have money after someone saw our home on CNN,'' Marge Heimdal said. ''In that country, this looks like a rich house.''

She said the family's intermediary, believed to be Scott's mine supervisor has been told the $60,000 ransom wired to Quito last week will guarantee their son's life - but not his freedom.

''They want 350 million pesos or $612,000 to return him to us,'' Heimdal said, her voice shaking. She said she did not know if the kidnappers had set a new deadline for the money.

Members of the Peoples' Liberation Movement, known by the Spanish acronymn EPL, first had sought $1.2 million until the family said their 27-year-old son convinced his captors the Heimdal's were not well off.

Marge Heimdal said the family had not had time to react to the tenfold increase in the ransom demand ''because the phone keeps ringing.''

She said the family plans to stop talking to reporters because she thinks all the coverage has put her son's life back in jeopardy.

Marge Heimdal said the family was discussing its ''options'' with unidentified ''advisers.''

Roy Heimdal, Scott's father, said their intermediary battled weather conditions and was rebuffed when he tried to pay a portion of the $60,000 ransom in U.S. dollars. The kidnappers demanded the ransom be paid in Columbian pesos, he said.

Scott Heimdal had been in Ecuador for about two years, working for International Mining Co., a U.S.-run gold-mining firm based in Quito.

He was being taken by motorized canoe on the River Bermejan in Ecuador, near the border with Colombia, to receive medical care for an injured foot when he was abducted and the driver of the canoe was killed.

Formed in 1967 as a splinter of the Colombian Communist Party, the EPL has previously kidnapped two Americans. One was later released and one died of a heart attack in captivity.

KUWAIT (JUNE 14) UPI - A senior official of the Palestine Liberation Organization reportedly said Wednesday that PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat had turned down a U.S. offer to upgrade Washington's dialogue with his group if he explicitly condemned the May 30 speedboat attack on a beachfront near Tel Aviv in Israel.

The Gulf News Agency, based in Manama, Bahrain, quoted the unnamed Palestinian official as saying that the offer was communicated to Arafat through ''intermediaries'' from Europe. The news agency did not elaborate.

But a special envoy of Swedish Foreign Minister Sten Andersen last week visited the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, where he met with Arafat three times and it is believed the envoy relayed to the PLO leader the U.S. offer.

The Swedish government has played a leading role in initiating the U.S.-PLO dialogue.

The news agency said the offer presented to Arafat included moving the U.S.-PLO talks from the Tunisian capital of Tunis to Washington and granting Arafat an entry visa to the United States, in return for his explicit condemnation of the Tel Aviv guerrilla attack last month.

''The PLO will not bow to blackmail or threats of any form,'' the Palestinian official was quoted as saying. ''It also will not accept false promises and dramatic measures raised by the American administration.''

The news agency said the official was commenting on statements by U.S. officials that the PLO should explicity condemn the seaborne guerrilla raid carried out by the Palestine Liberation Front, which is affiliated with the PLO and led by Abul Abbas.

The PLO earlier this week issued a statement in Baghdad and Tunis condemning attacks directed against civilians but the condemnation stopped short of denouncing the abortive guerrilla attack or Abul Abbas. Abul Abbas is a member of the PLO Executive Committee.

The U.S. State Departmnent and the White House described the statement, which made no specific reference to the Tel Aviv attack, as ''disappointing.''

ATLANTA (JUNE 13) UPI - An AIDS patient Thursday said he would become the second patient to undergo an experimental blood-heating treatment in the hopes of eliminating the deadly virus from his body, officials said Wednesday.

The patient, identified only as a 38-year-old man named Tony from Chicago, was to undergo the procedure beginning at 7:30 a.m. EDT Thursday at Atlanta Hospital, officials said.

''The choice seemed rather simple to me. I had no other options available '' the patient said during an interview broadcast Wednesday on the Cable News Network. ''... this provides a lot of hope for me.''

Drs. Kenneth Alonso and Dr. William Logan of Atlanta Hospital performed the procedure the first time on Feb. 20 on Carl Crawford to treat him for Kaposi's sarcoma, an AIDS-related cancer. The will perform the procedure on the Chicago man.

The procedure is called hyperthermia therapy and is being studied as an experimental treatment for cancer.

With the patient under general anesthesia, the threapy circulates the blood through an apparatus similar to a dialysis machine and heats it to 115 degrees Fahrenheit. The blood is then funneled back into the patient's body.

When the two-hour procedure was performed on Crawford, the heated blood passing back into his body caused his temperature to rise to 108 degrees, Alonso said. Crawford's brain was protected by a cooling system during the procedure, he said.

Crawford, 33, who was first diagnosed as having AIDS in October 1989, tested negative for the AIDS virus a week after the hypothermia therapy and his blood remains AIDS-free three months later, the doctors said.

''His sarcoma shrunk, and as a byproduct, the HIV (AIDS virus) viral culture has been negative for three months,'' Alonso said earlier this month.

Alonso stressed it was too early to fully evaluate the effectiveness of the therapy. Tests of Crawford's spinal fluid and a lack of AIDS symptoms that commonly afflict the brain, such as dementia, indicate the virus is not lurking in brain tissue, he said. But no tests have been conducted to determine if the virus remains in Crawford's bone marrow, the foundation of the body's immune system, he said.

During Wednesday's CNN report, Logan told Tony: ''I have a lot of confidence that things are going to go very well.''

''I'm starting to pick up that confidence. We'll see what happens,'' the patient responded.

''I know we have to discuss the possible complications but I think we're going to be real pleased with it,'' Logan said.

''We want to know if the patients can tolerate this procedure with the minimal risk,'' Logan later told CNN. ''Following that then we'd like to know of course what course the Kaposi's sarcoma takes. Whether we are able to change the course of that with this particular treatment.''

After the first case was reported, Mathilde Krim, a virologist and co-founder of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, said she was encouraged by the results, but believed the virus was only suppressed, not eliminated.

(JUNE 13) UPI - The Environmental Protection Agency is imposing new emission controls on chemical plants and toxic waste sites in heavily industrialized states. E-P-A officials say the rules were delayed in part by the White House Office of Management and Budget during the Reagan administration.

Scientists say people with heart disease who also have a high cholesterol count face a considerably higher risk of dying from a heart attack. The ABUQUERQUE, NM (JUNE 13) UPI - An astronomer reported evidence Wednesday that may pinpoint the exact center of the Milky Way.

Farhad Yusuf-Zadeh of Northwestern University in Chicago said data gathered with telescopes near Socorro, N.M., indicate the center of Earth's galaxy is a star known as Sagittarius A-asterisk.

''There has been a debate among astronomers about whether the center of the galaxy is at the Sagittarius A-asterisk or a nearby star cluster known as IRS 16,'' said Steve Maran, spokesman for the American Astronomical Society.

Yusuf-Zedeh reported his findings at a society meeting.

''What he found was that a red super giant star, which is also in the vicinity, named IRS 7, has a tail which which points away from Sagittarius A,'' he said.

''The interpretation of this is that some form of radiation or powerful wind of high-energy particles is streaming from Sagittarius A star out and hits the star IRS 7 and drives the gas of the star forward in the form of a tail,'' he said.

''Therefore this means that Sagittarius A star is the center of the galaxy rather than that star cluster because when we look at other galaxies we see powerful radiation coming from the center. Here we found one of the two candidates apparently is producing such radiation,'' he said.

Yusuf-Zadeh also found several hot blobs of gas near the center of the galaxy that may have been thrown out from the center - evidence supporting the existence of a giant black hole at the center of the galaxy.

''We've already known within a light year or so where (the center) is. But there have been two major objects there that astronomers have debated as to which is most likely to be the center. He's got very strong evidence now that the one called Sagittarius A-asterisk star is at the center and it may contain the massive black hole,'' said Maran.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 13) UPI - A day after showing up for his sentencing staggering drunk, a man convicted of driving a school bus while intoxicated was sentenced Wednesday to two years and eight months in state prison.

Harold K. Lone, 40, so outraged Van Nuys Superior Court Judge James Coleman Tuesday that the jurist threatened to reject a plea bargain arrangement and thereby expose Lone to nearly twice as much time behind bars.

But on Wednesday the judge did not reject the plea bargain, but did add eight extra months to Lone's sentence, apparently in part because of his drunken behavior Tuesday.

Lone's sentencing Tuesday was postponed by a day when his blood-alcohol level registered 0.35 percent, more than four times the state legal limit of 0.08 percent for motorists.

A former bus driver for the Laidlaw Transit Co. who has been convicted five times for drunken driving, Lone was wearing shorts, a soiled T-shirt and a blue jacket bearing the word ''Laidlaw'' when he staggered into court Tuesday reeking of alcohol.

He shouted profanities and made obscene gestures at news photographers in the courthouse hallway and interrupted Coleman as he discussed sentencing options.

''No way. No way, Jose,'' Lone muttered as his lawyer tried in vain to silence him.

Coleman stopped the proceedings and ordered Lone handcuffed and taken to a jail cell for the blood-alcohol test. After it was determined just how drunk Lone was, the judge postponed the sentencing until Wednesday, and ordered Lone held in custody overnight.

Lone, sober when he appeared for sentencing Wednesday, was then sentenced to two years and eight months in prison.

Deputy District Attorney Gloria Mas said before Lone showed up in court drunk, the judge had indicated he was going to sentence him to just two years behind bars. Mas said she believed the judge added the eight additional months in part because of Lone's behavior Tuesday. The judge did not say why he was adding the extra time.

''I've never seen someone show up drunk on the day of sentencing,'' said Mas, who prosecuted Lone. ''It's a spit in the face of the system.''

Lone pleaded guilty in March to being drunk when he arrived to pick up children at an Encino elementary school in January.

Authorities said that while waiting to load 57 children onto his bus at Lanai Road Elementary School on Jan. 16, Lone had a blood-alcohol content of 0.27 percent, more than three times the legal limit.

Lone managed to get hired with Laidlaw, a contractor for the Los Angeles Unified School District, by using an alias to hide his previous drunken driving convictions.

PLATTE CITY, MO (JUNE 13) UPI - A U.S. Army major who claimed he accidentally dropped his wife from an eighth-floor hotel balcony in a bungled romantic gesture was acquitted of felonious assault Wednesday.

A Platte County jury deliberated seven hours before finding David Schneider of Fort Leavenworth, Kan., not guilty in the incident last Nov. 4 at the Embassy Suites Hotel north of Kansas City.

David Schneider, 35, claimed he stumbled and fell while trying to carry his wife to their room during a romantic weekend. Deborah Schneider, 34, suffered a broken pelvis, ankle and legs in the eight-story plunge.

But 16-year-old Chantel McCutchen, testified she saw Schneider place one hand on Deborah Schneider's chest, the other on her back and flip her over the railing.

The major was charged with felony assault in what prosecutors said was an attempt to kill or seriously injure his wife. Platte County prosecutors said Schneider's alleged affair with a woman in California and a $220,000 life insurance policy on his wife might have been motives for Schneider to kill her.

Chantel and a friend, Brandi Simmons, said they were standing outside an eighth floor room at a railing when they saw the couple walk down another hallway overlooking the hotel atrium.

Chantel said she saw Schneider flip his wife over the railing, watch his wife fall and afterward rest his hands on the railing. He then yelled for an ambulance, she said.

Deborah Schneider testified that she did not remember anything from the moment the couple checked into the hotel until she woke up in the hospital four days later. She also said that two weeks before her fall, she awoke with pain in the forehead. She said her husband was standing over her and there was a broken porcelain toilet tank lid nearby.

The prosecution said her husband had struck the woman with the lid. David Schneider said he woke up to find his wife moaning, and that she might have been sleepwalking.

Deborah Schneider, who now walks with a cane, said her husband asked her for a divorce last December when she was released from the hospital but he withdrew the petition a week later when charges were filed.

Prosecuting attorney Vic Peters said in closing arguments Wednesday that Schneider, who has a degree in nuclear physics, was a ''mad scientist'' who jurors should separate from society with a conviction and life sentence, the maximum punishment for his charge.

Defense attorney William ''Dick'' Fickle told the jury that Schneider wasn't lying when he said it was an accident. Schneider was exonerated in a cheating scandal at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., 13 years ago, Fickle said.

MIAMI (JUNE 14) UPI - The partner of a former Miami police officer convicted of manslaughter in a case that triggered rioting in the city's black neighborhoods was charged with perjury Wednesday, police said.

Officer Dawn Campbell, 25, was charged with two third-degree felony counts of perjury for testimony she gave in William Lozano's defense, Miami Police Sgt. David Rivero said.

Rivero said Campbell turned herself in at the Miami Police Department Wednesday, and was relieved of duty with pay and placed under arrest.

If convicted, Campbell would face a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Lozano was convicted of two counts of manslaugher in December for firing a single shot that killed black motorcyclist Clement Anthony Lloyd, 23, and his passenger Allan Blanchard, 24.

Lozano, whose manslaughter conviction is on appeal, said Campbell's arrest was an attempt by prosecutors to jeopardize his chances with a higher court ''because that's the only witness I have. I am very upset.''

The charges against Campbell were based on statements she made in court about where she was standing at the time Lozano fired, and whether or not she ducked as Lozano discharged his pistol, according to an affadavit filed by George Ray Havens, the chief investigator for the Dade County State Attorney's Office.

Campbell's statement on the witness stand were contradicted by six eyewitness accounts. Although Campbell claimed that she was in the street at the time of the shooting, the eyewitnesses said she was on the sidewalk.

The single shot struck Lloyd in the head. Blanchard died from injuries suffered in the ensuing crash.

The January 1989 shooting triggered three days of violence in Miami's predominantly black neighborhoods.

One looter was killed, about 400 people were arrested, six people were injured by gunfire and about $1 million in property was damaged during the disturbance.

Campbell was the first witness to take the stand in Lozano's defense.

She testified on Nov. 24 that Lloyd's motorcycle passed within a foot of Lozano, at a speed of about 70 mph.

''I saw the motorcycle come into the southbound lane heading toward officer Lozano,'' she testified. ''I would say he was going about 70 mph.''

Campbell said her partner had to ''make sort of a twisting motion'' in order to avoid being run over.

Lawyers for the Hispanic police officer based their case on the argument of self-defense, but prosecutors claimed Lozano was not in danger and did not need to fire.

A judge sentenced Lozano in January to seven years in jail. Lozano has been free pending his appeal.

Campbell joined the Miami Police Department in August 1987.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - On a party line vote, a House subcommittee Wednesday approved a $15.8 billion foreign aid bill that cuts the administration's military assistance request and provides more economic development money.

But the foreign operations subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee did not vote on two of the most controversial aid issues facing Congress: whether to cut military aid to El Salvador and whether to help international family planning organizations that aid groups paying for abortions.

Under an agreement reached by House leaders to allow the bill to reach the floor June 27, amendments on both of those issues will only be voted on at that time, said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., subcommittee chairman.

The bill provides nearly $15.8 billion in the 1991 fiscal year, of which about $15.1 billion is for discretionary spending. The Bush administration sought some $14.9 billion in discretionary funds.

The measure slices roughly $200 million from the administration's military aid request, while adding about $200 million for Eastern Europe, $200 million for Africa and $150 million children's and refugee programs.

The bill was approved 8-4, with all Democrats voting in favor. However, Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, who objected to defense cuts, said he would vote against the legislation if it reached the House floor in its present form.

Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., said the cuts in the foreign military sales program were ''simply unacceptable,'' warning, ''We do not have a bill at this time that I can support (or) that the administration can support.''

But Obey said a failure to shift money from military to peacetime uses when the Soviet threat is collapsing would produce ''a sleepwalker's budget'' and added that he would cut military aid further if he had the votes.

''This bill is screwed up,'' said Obey. ''We ought to have a hell of a lot less for military.''

As a technical matter, the bill was passed including a 50 percent cut in military aid to El Salvador but without language on family planning, meaning the votes on the House floor will be to keep the Salvador provision or add proposals on abortion, Obey said.

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 14) UPI - Organic oil-eating bacteria could be used to help clean up the light crude that spewed into the Gulf of Mexico from a crippled tanker, state officials said Wednesday.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and Water Commission Chairman B.J. ''Buck'' Wynne asked emergency response officials for permission to conduct a bioremediation field test on the spill.

In bioremediation, microbes reduce oil to an emulsion of fatty acids that sink and are consumed by marine life.

The practice was tried on the oily Alaskan beaches but has not been tried in open water, Coast Guard spokesmen said.

''No one cleans up an oil spill, we only mitigate it. We don't have the capability of cleaning it up,'' Mauro said.

He released the results of extensive lab tests at a news conference as skimmers and booms attempted to contain the 3 million gallons of oil that spilled from the Mega Borg.

Those lab results come from oil spill demonstrations in saltwater tanks at the University of Texas Marine Science Institute near Corpus Christi last October.

Researchers want to drop 100 pounds of powdered microbes daily for three to four days from a plane onto the slick.

''It is urgent that(the spill of oil in the Gulf not reach sensitive estuaries or rookeries along our coast. And, we must not let this oil reach our beaches or barrier islands,'' Mauro said.

''Now, we have the chance to put to real use innovation and new technology that can provide all of us with a means to avoid the potential environmental devastation of an oil spill,'' Mauro said.

He suggested the field test could be started Thursday pending approval from state and federal emergency response officials.

Mauro is a member of the Governor's Oil Spill Advisory Committee.

Oil from the spill are expected to reach the coast, probably between Freeport and Corpus Christi, sometime Friday or Saturday, Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene has said.

The naturally occuring microorganisms that would be used in the field study have been treated to increase their activity by Alpha Environmental of Austin.

The product has been listed by the Environmental Protection Agency on the approved National Contingency Plan produce schedule.

The October lab tests showed a 99 percent decrease in oil on water within the first six hours after application of a powder containing the microorganisms and a catalyst, Mauro said.

(JUNE 13) UPI - British television reports say calm is returning to the Romanian capital tonight following the city's worst outbreak of violence since last December's anti-communist revolution. Witnesses say bloody clashes between pro- and anti-government protesters left at least one man dead and 40 people injured. The bloodshed started at daybreak when riot police stormed anti-communist demonstrators in the center of Bucharest.

The Kremlin is relaxing its economic blockade of Lithuania in a move that may pave the way for compromise. Lithuania's prime minister says Soviet officials agreed today to supply some natural gas and other materials to the republic. But an end to all economic sanctions apparently depends on Lithuania's willingness to suspend its declaration of independence. In Washington, the White House welcomed the announcement as a ''positive'' step.

Secretary of State Baker says he believes the danger of war breaking out in the Middle East is as high as it was in 1967, before the Arab-Israeli war. Baker also publicly blamed the government of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today for the breakdown in peace negotiations. At a congressional hearing, Baker directed his comments to Jerusalem... reciting the White House switchboard number and saying- quote- ''When you get serious about peace, call.''

A constitutional amendment to ban flag desecration is heading toward a make-or-break vote on the House floor. The Senate Judiciary Committee's civil and constitutional rights subcommittee today recommended the full committee reject the 20-word amendment. The committee next week will send the amendment to the full House... with a vote expected late next week at the earliest.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Washington's embattled mayor says he woN'T seek re-election... one dead in bloody clashes in Romania's capital... Soviets offer to relax Lithuanian embargo... and firefighters control tanker fire. U-P-I has details, next:

Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry is putting the talk to rest. He announced tonight that he will NOT seek re-election to a fourth term.

In Barry's words- ''Now is the time for healing- for me personally and you politically.'' The mayor went on to say that he believes he could win, but- quoting again- ''What good does it do to win the battle and lose my soul?''

The word came on a Washington television station in an announcement Barry taped earlier in the day.

Barry's announcement comes on the eighth day of jury selection in his federal drug and perjury trial.

Barry concedes that his legal and personal troubles have brought turmoil to the city... but he denies his decision is an effort to win a plea bargain.

U-S Attorney Jay Stephens was NOT immediately available for comment, but he has said before that Barry's political plans are ''irrelevant'' to the charges.

The American Civil Liberties Union has asked the presiding judge in the case to reject any plea bargain based on Barry's withdrawal from the mayor's race.

The A-C-L-U says such an agreement would take away the right of voters to chose their mayor.

Romania's interim government has broken its pledge NOT to use violence to put down dissent.

The streets of Bucharest turned into a battleground today... six months after the December revolution that ousted dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

The violence began at dawn, when about one-thousand riot police raided a camp of anti-communist demonstrators in the city's center.

By late afternoon, demonstrators had fought their way back into University Square, setting cars and buses used by police as barricades on fire.

Bloody clashes also erupted between pro- and anti-government protesters... with casualties streaming into area hospitals.

Witnesses say they saw one man shot dead by UNknown forces who fired from a building now used by the Interior Ministry. At least 40 other people were reported injured in the day's UNrest.

Police headquarters in the Romanian capital was gutted by fire, with small blazes smoldering inside into the night.

Demonstrators also damaged the government television station, with hundreds of troops sent to guard the building.

Gangs were rampaging through Bucharest... with an estimated 100-thousand people still roaming the streets late into the night.

(JUNE 13) UPI - The Soviet Union is softening its economic blockade of Lithuania while the republics of Latvia and Estonia consider compromising on independence from the Kremlin.

Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskine says Soviet officials today agreed to supply more natural gas and other material to the republic.

But the ball is appears to be Lithuania's court as to whether Moscow lifts all of the economic sanctions imposed in April. Prunskine says she is urging the Lithuanian Parliament to consider suspending its independence declaration to allow time for negotiations on secession.

The signs of a possible break in the Baltic stalemate began with a meeting yesterday between Mikhail Gorbachev and the presidents of the three republics.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater welcomed word that the embargo is being relaxed. Fitzwater described it... as well as yesterday's meeting in Moscow... as ''positive steps.''

The Soviet Parliament today cleared the way for switching the communist giant's centralized economy to a regulated market model.

Soviet legislators adopted a seven-point resolution which calls for supply and demand to determine prices and profits. But today's action also carries with it a demand that President Gorbachev's government develop a specific reform program by September.

Critics contend that the bureaucratic nature of the Soviet system will stymie attempts to reform the economy.

The UNprecedented actions in Moscow came as defense ministers of Warsaw Pact nations gathered in East Berlin for what may be the alliance's final military conference.

East Germany's state-run news agency says the three-day meeting is intended to save ''what can still be saved'' of the East Bloc military pact.

Anti-communist protesters in Yugoslavia vow they woN'T let the beatings they experienced today at the hands of police deter them from staging demonstrations across the communist-ruled Serbian republic. NO serious injuries were reported after dozens of protesters demanded multi-party elections.

(JUNE 13) UPI - The National Transportation Safety Board says it will closely follow an investigation being conducted by Norway into the tanker explosion off the Texas Gulf Coast.

U-S officials are participating in the hearing in Galveston, with Norway in charge because the accident occurred in international waters.

While Norweigan officials try to determine what cause the explosions and fire aboard the Mega Borg during the weekend... emergency workers are still trying to put the blaze out.

Firefighters began using a chemical foam today to douse the hot spots on the tanker still burning in the Gulf of Mexico. The Coast Guard says the blaze is under control and most of the three-Million gallons of light crude oil that spilled has dissipated.

Crews continue to spray water to cool the 853-foot vessel... while chasing the oil slicks created by leaks.

Coast Guard Captain Tom Greene says once the fire is out, workers can enter the tanker to find and plug oil leaks. Green says the possibility of the tanker breaking open is- ''NOT very high.''

(JUNE 13) UPI - The Senate Ethics Committee today abruptly wrapped up its public hearings into alleged financial misdeeds by Minnesota Republican David Durenberger.

The proceedings ended when Senator Durenberger opted NOT to pursue a detailed defense of his alleged violations. Durenberger is charged with cutting a book publishing deal that enabled him to evade senate limits on outside income by about 100-thousand dollars.

Durenberger addressed his colleagues for one hour today, asking that they bear in mind his virtues as a lawmaker as well as his alleged transgressions.

The committee's special counsel who led the investigation had recommended that Durenberger be denounced... one step short of the ultimate punishment of expulsion.

Special counsel Robert Bennett says he expects to complete the written portion of his report before the end of the month. Committee vice chairman Warren Rudman says the six-member panel has NO timetable with regard to deciding Durenberger's fate.

The Environmental Protection Agency today implemented new emission control regulations designed to reduce pollution in some of America's most heavily industrialized states.

The rules... which the Reagan administration blocked saying they were anti-business... call for chemical plants and toxic waste facilities to reduce the volatile organic compounds, or V-O-C, they discharge into the atmosphere.

Currently, chemical manufacturers and toxic waste disposal and storage facilities account for 16 percent of the more than 20-Million tons of V-O-C emissions spewed annually by industrial sources and motor vehicles.

The new regulations are expected to minimize V-O-C emissions, the key element in smog, by less than one percent of national V-O-C discharges.

However, the new rules should affect the states of Louisiana, Texas and New Jersey, where 70 percent of the 33-hundred U-S chemical plants are located.

(JUNE 13) UPI - A new survey indicates most Americans are cynical about financial prospects in the 1990's.

More than eight out of 10 people interviewed say they fear inflation, while nearly seven out of 10 are apprehensive about a possible prolonged economic recession.

But the most pessimistic group questioned appears to be ''baby boomers,'' the generation that spawned the ''yuppie.''

According to the report, the 35-44 age group feels vulnerable about meeting its financial obligations. These obligations include what the polling group refers to the ''triple squeeze''- which entails paying for their children's educations, meeting their own retirement needs and footing the bill for their parents' long-term care.

Another group identified in the survey conducted for the International Association of Financial Planning is the so-called ''raw dealers.''

This 18-25 age group began working just as the 80's boom petered out and as the bills for excesses come due this group feels especially vulnerable.

(JUNE 13) UPI - Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry says his decision NOT to run for re-election is NOT an attempt to win a plea bargain agreement at his drug and perjury trial. Barry took his hat out of the ring tonight on the Howard University public television station.

Darkness has NOT ended Romania's worst outbreak of civil unrest since the December revolution. Gangs rampaged through Bucharest tonight and some people lobbed gasoline bombs at tanks moving with army troops through the streets near University Square. Sporadic shooting was reported.

The violence began at dawn when riot police stormed anti-communist protesters camped in the city's center. Witnesses say at least one man shot dead by UNknown forces. A second death was reported later. At least 40 people were hurt in the violence.

Firefighters continue to pour water on that burning Norwegian tanker off the Texas Gulf Coast, while other crews spray flame-smothering foam onto the vessel. An estimated three-Million gallons of light oil has leaked into the Gulf of Mexico, but officials say most of it has dissipated.

''Cheers'' cast member Kelsey Grammer appeared in Los Angeles court today to plead innocent to cocaine possession charges. The 35-year-old actor, who plays Dr. Frasier Crane, faces a July 12th pre-trial hearing. Grammer recently completed a 30-day jail term for drunken driving.

In March, Harold Lone pleaded guilty in a Vay Nuys, California, courtroom to driving a school bus while intoxicated. But when he showed up for sentencing yesterday, he was staggering drunk. (JUNE 13) UPI - Massachussetts Democrats today filed a class action suit that contends a White House aide and a Republican campaign official conspired with the Springfield police union to disrupt the party's state convention earlier this month. The Republicans named in the lawsuit say there's NO validity to charges they goaded police to set up pickets outside where Democrats were gathering. The action delayed the start of the convention by four hours.

An office of the National Weather Service was knocked off the air today as a severe thunderstorm storm blew through Chicago's northern suburbs. The storm flipped over light planes, blew out windows and left thousands of Officials at Atlanta Hospital in Georgia say they have lined up a second AIDS patient to undergo an experimental treatment tomorrow. The treatment appears to have eradicated the deadly H-I-V virus in another AIDS-infected patient. The therapy calls for circulating the patient's blood through a dialysis-type machine that heats the person's blood to 115 degrees Fahrenheit. The blood is then funneled back into the patient's body. The other participant in the program remains AIDS-free... three months after undergoing the treatment.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Citing high demand for its 386 microprocessor, Intel Corp. Thursday said it would postpone closure of its Livermore, Calif., wafer fabrication plant for a year.

Last July the company announced plans to close the plant in 1990.

''Demand for our 386 microprocessors continues to be strong,'' said Craig Barrett, executive vice president. ''The good performance of the Livermore fab allows us to keep the factory open for at least another year to help us meet customer demand for our processors while we ramp production at newer facilities.''

Fab 3 is Intel's oldest fab; the costs to upgrade it to today's state-of-the-art technology are prohibitive. The 17-year old, 4-inch wafer facility manufactures 386 SX and DX microprocessors and peripheral products.

Intel manufactures microcomputer components, modules and systems.

IRVING, TX (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Carrington Laboratories Inc. announced it has received notice from The Food and Drug Administration which allows the company to begin selling an over-the-counter gel to be labeled Carrington Wound Dressing with indications for its use for pressure ulcers (including decubitus ulcers), first and second degree burns, and skin conditions associated with surgical ostomies.

Decubitus ulcers, also called bedsores, occur in 8 percent of all hospitalized patients and in 20 percent of nursing home patients in this country according to the National Pressure Ulcer Advisory Committee.

Including those at home, there are over five million patients in the United States afflicted with decubitus ulcers according to the Tissue Trauma Institute. These patients are primarily in the senior age group, the fastest growing segment of the American population.

Decubitus ulcers occur in patients immobilized for long periods. Without the relief of normal movement, areas of skin under pressure begin to break down from lack of blood circulation. Ulcers form. These ulcers tend to deteriorate in time over months or years and may cause systemic infection or gangrene which can lead to amputation of the affected limb or even death of the patient.

The need for burn treatment is also substantial. ''There are over two million cases of first and second degree burns in the U.S. each year,'' according to Charles R. Baxter, M.D., of Dallas, past president of the American Burn Association.

Carrington Laboratories manufactures pharmaceutical products and markets them in the United States and Canada through clinic, hospital and retail pharmacies.

LITTLE ROCK, AR (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Environmental Systems Co. (NYSE:ESC) reported Thursday that on Friday, June 8, 1990, it had been advised in a telephone call to Jack W. Forrest, president of the company, from David C. Ferguson, president of Brambles USA Inc., a subsidiary of Brambles Industries Ltd., the company largest stockholder, that Brambles had decided ''to unwind'' its position in the company.

Forrest stated that Ferguson at that time indicated that various means of selling Brambles' stock position were under consideration and that Brambles would be filing a public statement concerning the matter on Monday, June 11, 1990. To the company's knowledge, no such public statement has been made to date.

Forrest also stated that he had been informed by various institutional investors that an investment banking firm purporting to represent Brambles had contacted an undetermined number of institutions to solicit interest in Brambles' stock position in ENSCO.

According to Forrest, after inquiry was made on Monday, June 11, 1990, as to the status of Brambles' expected statement, the company's counsel was advised on Tuesday, June 12, 1990, by a telephone call from Brambles' counsel that Brambles was merely examining its options with respect to its ownership position, and that no firm decision in the matter had been reached.

Forrest noted the apparent differences between Brambles' publicly disclosed position and the position expressed to him by Ferguson. He stated that he encouraged Brambles to publicly disclose its intentions in a clear and unequivocal fashion. He stated: ''Our shareholders and the public are entitled to know what are Brambles' real intentions. To date, that information has been as hard to find as a kangaroo in Arkansas.''

According to past public filings, Brambles, of Sydney, Australia, owns through subsidiaries approximately 3,570,000 shares, or approximately 23 percent of the outstanding common stock, and in addition, Brambles holds a warrant to purchase an additional 2,142,857 shares of common stock, at an initial purchase price of $14 per share.

PHOENIX (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - America West Airlines' (NASDAQ:AWAL/PSE:AWA) President and Chief Operating Officer Michael J. Conway has issued the following statement:

''On Jan. 12, 1990 the National Mediation Board ordered a re-vote to determine whether the Association of Fight Attendants (AFA) will be designated as the collective bargaining agent for a portion of America West's Fully Cross Utilized CSR workforce.

''This action was based on a theory that 'a totality' of America West's actions during 1988 and 1989 'tainted the laboratory conditions' desired for a union election.

''The NMB has ruled out any egregious conduct on the part of the airline but had focused on the timing of certain benefits implemented during the protracted election period and the fact that the carrier's chief executive officer, Edward Beauvais, and myself had been in attendance at one of the airline's customary profit sharing parties.

''America West filed a Motion for Reconsideration with the NMB requesting a hearing on the issues raised by the Board, contending that the Board's designation of a craft of 'flight attendants' at America West was improper and protesting the voting eligibility criteria which the NMB had implemented.

''The AFA continued to file charges and allegations, characterizing events such as the February 1990 profit sharing party as 'illegal conduct' by the company in an effort to have the NMB use extraordinary pro-union balloting procedures in the re-vote.

''Now, almost six months later, the NMB has ruled on the matter. It reviewed each of AFA's allegations and dismissed them along with the AFA's request for special balloting procedures. The NMB also reaffirmed its position as to who will be entitled to participate in the re-vote. The date for the re-vote, however, has not yet been set.

''According the NMB decision, the Fully Cross Utilized CSRs who will be allowed to participate in the re-vote will be only those who were allowed to vote in the intitial election in January and February, 1989. Although there are now approximately 2,500 Fully Cross Utilized CSRs at America West, only about 1,000 wil be eligible to participate in the re-vote.

''It is our opinion that some of the provisions of the NMB decision do a grave injustice to the CSRs; and yet other provisions are at cross purposes with the continuing success of America West. Because we believe that these provisions are so fundamentally unfair, we intend to have these issues reviewed by the courts at every available opportunity. The first opportunity will occur next week when we will seek injuction relief in federal court, focusing on the proposed election notice provisions.

''In the event an election is held in accordance with the terms mandated by the NMB, Ed Beauvais and I continue to believe, just as we did in 19:: anr eArly 1989, that the AFA clearly lacks any significant support from the Fully Cross Utilized CSR workforce. Indeed, it is our opinion that the AFA has less support today than it did in February 1989, when only 301 votes were cast in favor of the AFA.''

DENVER (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - TRI-R Systems Corp. (NASDAQ:RRRC), a

Denver-based diversified recycling firm, Thursday reported decreased revenues and a net income loss for the quarter ended April 30, 1990.

The company attributed the decreased revenues and net income loss to generally lower commodity selling prices, and to competitive forces that precluded a correspondent lowering of its buying prices.

TRI-R reported revenues of $1,776,026 for the third quarter of fiscal 1990 compared with revenues of $2,189,236 for the third quarter of fiscal 1989. The company reported a net income loss of $231,368, or a loss of 7 cents per share, for the third quarter of fiscal 1990, compared with a loss of $127,079, or a loss of 4 cents per share, during the third quarter of fiscal 1989.

For the first nine months of fiscal 1990, TRI-R reported revenues of $6,083,572, compared with revenues of $5,473,392 for the first nine months of fiscal 1989. The company reported a net income loss of $190,225, or a loss of 6 cents per share, for the first nine months of fiscal 1990, compared with a net loss of $354,705, or a loss of 11 cents per share, for the first nine months of fiscal 1989.

''Despite lower selling prices, and consequently lower buying prices, the tonnage of recyclables purchased by TRI-R is increasing, and we envision these increases to continue through the remainder of the fiscal year,'' said TRI-R President David R. Powelson.

Headquartered in Denver, TRI-R Systems Corp. is an innovative, customer-oriented recycling firm that collects a wide range of reusable materials from consumers, businesses and government, processes these materials and sells them to domestic and foreign manufacturers.

LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Delco Electronics Corp. has announced a major expansion project at its Kirkby plant, near Liverpool, that will substantially increase manufacturing capacity to meet the growing demand for its automotive electronics products for existing and potential customers in Europe.

The project centers around production of electronic control modules (ECMs) which ensure efficient engine performance, meter fuel flow precisely, and help to control exhaust emissions.

Officials of the company stated the expansion also will result in a progressive increase in employment.

Jack L. Moore, managing director for the Kirkby plant, said, ''Work will begin immediately on the $16 million phase one project. This initial phase will include installation of state-of-the-art manufacturing and test equipment in renovated and upgraded areas within the Kirkby facility,'' Moore said.

''The demand for our electronic control modules by European automakers is increasing at a rapid rate. Our commitment to current and anticipated new customers is to make the major investments in people, in the plant and in the equipment required to satisfy this demand.''

While he was unable to be specific at this early stage about the workforce requirements, Moore indicated that an increase in employment levels would be required during the multi-phase life of the expansion project.

''Most of our customers in European markets stipulate, as a condition of doing business, that products they purchase be manufactured in plants in Europe,'' Moore said. ''Consequently, this is an important program for the success of Delco Electronics' International Business Unit.''

A major contributing factor in obtaining approval for this investment for the expansion of the ECM final assembly and test capacity and the integration of new surface mount automatic circuit board assembly technology, has been the agreement worked out with the Unions that will allow for the necessary changes to achieve and maintain worldwide competitiveness through the process of continuous improvement. ''It is a tremendous achievement by the workforce and a major turnaround for the plant,'' he said.

BURLINGTON, NJ (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - FMS Financial Corp. (NASDAQ: FMCO), the parent of Farmers' and Mechanics' Savings Bank, S.L.A., Thursday reported establishment of loss reserves in the amount of $1.2 million.

The loss reserves consist of $360,000 relating to real estate held for development and $825,000 for possible loan losses relating to a single construction loan. The real estate held for development is owned by the bank's real estate development subdidiary and consists of two tracts of land located in the bank's lending area awaiting development approvals.

The construction loan has a current outstanding balance of $2.9 million. The corporation has determined to establish a reserve in the amount of $825,000, which is equal to 15 percent of the loan's maximum forecasted exposure of $5.5 million. The remaining reserve amounts relate to various other loans.

These reserve allocations are the result of management's continuing review of the bank's loan portfolio and real estate held for development and of the tentative findings of a recently concluded regulatory examination by the New Jersey Department of Banking and a review of the examination by the Office of Thrift Supervision, which is still in the process of review and subject to change.

In addition, the bank has taken an actual loss in the amount of $796,000 on the sale of bonds issued by the Bank of New England. This investment had been previously reserved for in the amount of $248,000 in the fourth quarter, 1989, and $210,000 in the first quarter, 1990. After adjustment for federal income taxes, this loss will reduce earnings in the second quarter by $68,000.

Michael D. Bisceglie, president, stated, ''The additions to loss reserves will reduce earnings for the second quarter.'' Bisceglie continued by noting that, ''the bank continues to exceed all of it's currently applicable regulatory capital requirements.''

TORONTO, ONTARIO (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - All Computers Inc. announced new memory management software for 80386-, 80386SX-, and 80486-based computers that boasts the highest throughput of any LIM 4.0 software manager.

New All Charge 386 is available for $99 (suggested US resale at participating dealers; dealer and reseller inquiries are invited).

New All Charge 386 frees up conventional DOS space for large applications by loading files, buffers, device drivers, TSRs, and lastdrive into the reserved space above 640K. This also lets a user move network shells and emulation programs out of conventional memory, freeing up DOS space, and only uses 1K of conventional memory.

All Charge 386 supports XMS, LIM 3.2 and LIM 4.0; this can give, for example, Windows 3.0 and Desqview users more usable space to work in. The memory management software also handles exploding and imploding device drivers by rear-ranging high memory to accommodate them.

It provides more memory maps and registers and smaller grain management of memory (it manages memory in 4K pages; other solutions work in 16k only), and supports up to 256 real EMS maps of 256 registers each for high-speed multitasking.

All Charge 386 provides selectible ROM shadowing to speed up such ROMs as video and BIOS. It offers high-speed addressing of extended memory to make the access time to RAM disks up to twice as fast in PS/2 systems.

The software features the same easy-to-use interface to optimize and organize computer memory as the popular All ChargeCard, a 286-based hardware solution. This simplifies the use of All Computers products across all platforms from the 8088 to the 80486. An installation program helps a user quickly install and begin using All Charge 386.

All Computers Inc. is the world's leading supplier of memory-management solutions for the IBM AT, PS/2 and compatible computers. The company has been in the memory-management business for 11 years and supplies products to such OEMs as IBM and 3Com.

SAN JOSE, CALIF (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Cypress Semiconductor was Thursday presented with two awards for environmental achievement from the city of San Jose.

The Mayor's Environmental Achievement in Industry Awards, presented by the city's office of environmental management, recognized Cypress for water conservation and energy management. Cypress is one of seven Silicon Valley companies so honored, and the only semiconductor manufacturer.

Cypress has had a formal water conservation program since 1988. It has redesigned equipment to use reclaimed water and reduce water consumption across the board. Since June of 1988, these efforts have saved over one and a half million cubic feet of water.

The company's energy management efforts range from installing sophisticated controllers for chillers and air conditioners, to putting timers on room lights and painting roof ducts white to reflect heat. All efforts have produced documented savings. Timers on room lights, for example, have saved over $40,000.

Cypress President T.J. Rodgers stated, ''Cypress's commitment to energy and water conservation has helped keep consumption of water, gas and electricity essentially constant, while sales have grown. We strive to be a responsible member of the community, sharing the planet's resources and recognizing their limitations.

''But it has not escaped our attention that conservation also has a positive effect on the bottom line.''

Mayor Tom McEnery said, ''Industry can serve as a role model in encouraging conservation. I personally applaud the proactive measures taken by Cypress to conserve water and energy. When employees see top managers taking our environment this seriously, they are encouraged to save resources at home as well.''

Cypress Semiconductor Corp. is a leader in the design, development and manufacture of a broad line of high-performance digital integrated circuits, fabricated using its proprietary 0.8 and 1.2 micron CMOS and BiCMOS technologies.

Cypress offers a range of products, including RISC microprocessors and peripherals, CMOS PLDs (programmable logic devices), static RAMS (random access memory), PROMs (programmable read-only memories), logic devices, high-speed bipolar and BiCMOS devices, and high-speed static RAM modules.

WINCHESTER, VA (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - American Woodmark Corp. (NASDAQ:AMWD) Thursday announced that sales for the fourth quarter ended April 30, 1990, were $39,088,000, down 2 percent from last year's fourth quarter.

The company experienced a net loss for the quarter of $1,356,000, or 20 cents per share, compared to net income of $1,754,000, 23 cents per share, in the same period of the prior year. The prior year contained an adjustment to tax expense which increased net income $250,000 or 3 cents per share.

The decline in income is attributable to the sales decline, to one-time costs associated with launching the company's new Timberlake brand of stock and semi-custom cabinetry, to a reduction in the book value of the company's Wetumpka, Ala., facility due to the consolidation of the Wetumpka operation into other company facilities, and to the costs of improving cabinet construction methods to make a better cabinet.

Net income year-to-date is $623,000, or 9 cents per share, compared to prior-year net income of $7,522,000, or $1.00 per share. The decline in net income for the year is a result of the same factors as the current quarter, and to higher costs per unit caused by reducing production rates to keep inventories in line with lower sales demand during the second and third fiscal quarters.

During the fourth quarter, the company announced the introduction of its new line of stock and semi-custom cabinets -- Timberlake. The Timberlake brand is available only to qualified distributors. It is a broad line with 36 styles, and offers semi-custom features including solid wood doors, wood drawers and wood veneered end panels. Additionally, the company greatly expanded the American Woodmark line, adding 14 new stock and semi-custom styles.

American Woodmark Corp. manufactures and distributes modular kitchen cabinets and vanities, serving both the remodeling and new housing construction market. Its products are sold on a nationwide basis through a network of independent distributors and directly to home centers and builders. The company presently operates seven manufacturing facilities and nine distribution centers.

SCARSDALE, NY (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Terminal Applications Group Inc. (NASDAQ:TAGI) Thursday reported revenues for the three months ended April 30, 1990 of $1,021,491, versus $403,425 for the same period in 1989, with losses of $222,296 and $704,386 respectively.

Per share losses were 4 cents and eleven cents on weighted average shares outstanding of 6,285,580 and 6,057,040. The 1989 results were after a tax benefit of $235,301 while there was no such benefit in 1990.

Revenues for the six months ended April 30, 1990 were $1,924,055 as compared with $1,362,042 for the same period a year ago, with a net loss of $465,703 or 8 cents per share versus $918,910 or 18 cents per share respectively.

Weighted average number of shares outstanding for 1990 were 6,177,560 and 1989, 5,236,902. The 1989 results were after a tax benefit of $303,045, while there was no such benefit in 1990.

The full effect of the expense cuts (Staff reductions, salary cuts, and other operational savings) instituted in mid March 1990 are not reflected in the results of the 2nd quarter but should be evident in the 3rd quarter results.

The management continues to monitor operations closely. Revenues were up over the prior quarter, and substantially ahead of year ago levels, despite generally poor economic conditions in the company's geographic market place delaying buyers commitments in making substantial capital outlays.

Gerald D. Kaplan, president of the company stated that the company continues to be on target with the translation and enhancement of its proprietary software, with the release for sale of Star Alpha in the third fiscal quarter and installations will start in the fourth quarter of this year. The product's unique characteristics, which will appeal to both large and small sophisticated users, will enable it to overcome economic reluctance by purchasers. The firm's current products will continue to be marketed.

TALLAHASSEE, FLA. (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - MHI Group Inc. (MH/NYSE) Thursday reported results for the three and twelve month periods ended April 30, 1990.

For the year ended April 30, 1990, revenues rose 18 percent to $10,191,000 from $8,697,000 reported last year. Net income for the twelve month period was $482,000 or $0.03 per share as compared to $803,000 or $0.07 last year. Average shares outstanding were 13,085,658 and 12,886,315 for the 1990 and 1989 periods, respectively.

Revenues for the three months ended April 30, 1990 were $2,437,000 as compared to $2,326,000 in the same period a year ago. The Company reported a net income for the fourth quarter of $21,000 or $0.00 per share as compared to $178,000 or $0.02 per share in the fourth quarter of 1989. The average shares outstanding for the quarter were 13,500,900 compared with 12,847,021 shares in the same period a year ago.

The reduction in fourth quarter fiscal 1990 net income as compared to the same period last year is primarily attributable to increased expenses incurred for future delivery of merchandise sold on a pre-need basis, and increased general and administrative expenses relating to completion of the Pasco County acquisition.

During April 1990, the Company completed the acquisition of two funeral homes and two cemeteries in Dade City and Zephyrhills, Florida. Both municipalities are located in Pasco County, which is northeast of Tampa, Florida. By completing these acquisitions, the Company was able to capitalize $557,000 of the $763,000 of acquisition related expenses which were expensed in the second quarter of fiscal 1990. Financial statements for October 31, 1989 and January 31, 1990 have been restated to reflect this correction.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Enzo Biochem Inc. (AMEX:ENZ), a New York based biotechnology company, Thursday reported operating results for the fiscal third quarter and the nine month period ended April 30, 1990.

Revenues for the three months ended April 30, 1990 totalled $5,337,000 - up from $3,364,000 for the comparable quarter in fiscal 1989. An increase in the company's diagnostic service business, primarily due to the diagnostic laboratory acquired in late April 1989, was the main reason for the revenue gain of almost $2 million between the two periods.

The net loss for the third quarter of fiscal 1990 was $1,406,000 or 12 cents per share. This is down from $1,539,000 or 14 cents per share in the second quarter of fiscal 1990. In the third quarter of the prior fiscal year, the company reported a net loss of $956,000, or 8 cents per share.

The rise in expenses between fiscal 1990 and 1989 reflects the costs from the acquired laboratory as well as start-up costs related to the forthcoming consolidation of the company's diagnostic laboratory facilities.

Revenues for the first nine months of fiscal 1990, totalling $16,131,000, were over $6.5 million ahead of the $9,574,000 in revenues recorded for the first nine months of fiscal 1989. The net loss for the first nine-months of fiscal 1990 amounted to $3,715,000. The net loss for the comparable period in fiscal 1989 was $3,030,000.

ZAANDAM, NETHERLANDS (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Koninklijke Ahold nv, a leading European food retailer based in The Netherlands and one of the top 10 supermarket operators in the USA, Thursday reported that net earnings for the sixteen weeks ended Apr. 22, 1990 amounted to Dfl 67.8 million, as compared to Dfl 47.4 million in 1989, a 43.2 percent rise.

This significant rise in net earnings is attributable to a continued growth in operating results, higher income from unconsolidated subsidiaries and affiliates and lower net interest expense. The lower exchange rate of the dollar (on average Dfl 1.90, compared to Dfl 2.10 in the corresponding period of 1989) reduced reported net earnings by about Dfl 2 million.

Sales to third parties in The Netherlands in the first quarter of 1990 amounted to Dfl 2,832.8 million, a 5.2 percent rise. On a comparable basis, taking into account the sale of the AC Restaurants, sales growth in The Netherlands amounted to 6.4 percent. Sales in the United States totalled $1,309.0 million, representing a 9.5 percent rise. Consolidated sales in guilders rose by 2.4 percent to Dfl 5,322.3 million. The lower exchange rate of the dollar reduced the reported sales gain by about 5 percent.

As in previous quarters, sales growth in The Netherlands largely reflects the Albert Heijn chain's increasingly strong market position. In the United States, Ahold's BI-LO, First National Supermarkets and Giant Food Stores subsidiaries all achieved higher sales.

Operating results for the first quarter of 1990 amounted to Dfl 98.7 million (1989: Dfl 80.0 million), a rise of 23.4 percent.

This rise largely reflects strongly improved operating results in the United States, as compared to a relatively weak first quarter performance in 1989. Operating results in The Netherlands were also higher, especially at the Albert Heijn chain.

In the first quarter, the balance of financial income and expenditures improved by Dfl 10.1 million over the comparable period of 1989. This was caused by a Dfl 3.2 million increase in income from unconsolidated subsidiaries and affiliates and a Dfl 6.9 million decrease in net interest expense.

No major changes occurred in the Company's balance sheet ratios as compared to 1989 year end.

Ahold's shares trade on the Amsterdam Stock Exchange and may be accessed on the Reuters Equities 2000 service under the symbol AHLN.AS and on Quotron under the symbol AHOLN.EU. They also trade in ADR form in the US (symbol 3KAHLY on the electronic OTC Bulletin Board).

DAYTON, OH (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Amcast Industrial Corp. (NYSE:AIZ) today reported that earnings for the third quarter ended June 3 were better compared to the previous two quarters of this fiscal year.

Leo W. Ladehoff, chairman and chief executive officer, said that the rate of profit improvement over the first half was held down by a reduction in construction-related orders. Earlier in the year, earnings were depressed by the slowdown in automotive production and a 13-week strike at one of the company's largest Flow Control Products plants.

Sales for the third quarter were $75.3 million compared to $84.5 million for the same period last year. Net income was $1.6 million, equal to 25 cents per share, vs. $1.8 million, or 25 cents per share in the year-ago period. Earnings per share were equal to the same period last year; however, the company has acquired 502,000 shares of common stock in fiscal 1990 as a result of a stock repurchase program. Earnings per share for the quarter are therefore based on the reduced shares outstanding.

For the nine-month period, sales were $200.5 million compared to $248.8 million in the previous year. Net income was $2.2 million, or 32 cents per share, vs. $5.5 million, or 77 cents per share, a year ago. Ladehoff said that the impact of the work stoppage and its aftermath is equivalent to 45 cents per share.

Placing the third-quarter performance in perspective, he said, ''Over 80 percent of the sales decline was due to the sale of three plants in our Cast Products Group last September. Notably, sales and profits of our automotive-oriented operations were in line with last year and sharply improved from the second quarter. Also, our units producing aerospace products are performing better now, despite continued softness in the military sector of the aerospace industry.

''On the other hand, our Flow Control Products operations were adversely impacted by a significant reduction in orders for products used in plumbing and in air conditioning systems. Factors leading to this included; an unseasonably wet and cool spring which impeded construction industry activity; and tightened restrictions by lending institutions which are limiting the availability of funds for commercial real estate development. Our plants affected are normally high contributors to earnings, therefore, less favorable conditions in their markets tend to limit our overall profitability. We have taken steps to adjust to the lower demand and resulting competitive pressures.''

Ladehoff concluded, ''It is difficult to predict just how long the factors hindering construction-related markets will continue. We believe our company's overall position is strong and expect earnings to respond to more favorable external conditions.''

Amcast Industrial Corp. is a manufacturer of technology-intensive metal products. Its two primary businesses are proprietary Flow Control Products marketed through national distribution channels, and Engineered Components for original equipment manufacturers. The company serves four major sectors of the economy: aerospace/aviation/defense, construction, automotive, and general industry.

ATLANTA (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T (NYSE:T) Thursday announced grants totaling a half million dollars to 22 Atlanta arts organizations.

The grants package includes groups representing both the performing and visual arts, as well as groups that focus on diverse audiences.

''These institutions play a crucial role in making Atlanta the cultural as well as the commercial capital of the Southeast,'' said Jack Shultz, public relations vice president for AT&T's Southern Region.

''Their programming and outreach efforts contribute not only to the quality of life but also to the economy of this community. Having a strong, diverse arts community also gives Atlanta a competitive edge in attracting new businesses and new jobs.''

Those groups receiving the largest grants were the Atlanta Symphony and the National Black Arts Festival.

The symphony was awarded a two-year grant of $150,000 through ''AT&T's American Encore'' program for the 1990-91 and the 1991-92 seasons. The grants will be used for the performance of works by 20th-century American composers.

The symphony also received a grant of $60,000 to support its Chastain Pops Series.

The National Black Arts Festival was granted $100,000 for its 1990 festival. Specifically, the AT&T grant will support a new contemporary drama, ''The Talented Tenth,'' written by Drama Desk Award winner, Richard Wesley.

Other organizations receiving grants were the Woodruff Arts Center, The Alliance Theater, The Theatrical Outfit, Theatre in the Square, Atlanta Ballet, Jomandi Productions, Just Us Theatre, Academy Children's Theatre, The Center for Puppetry Arts, NEXUS Contemporary Arts Center, Horizon Theatre, Theatre Gael, Seven Stages, Alternate ROOTS, Georgia Shakespeare Festival, Arts Festival of Atlanta, The Atlanta Opera, and Actors Express.

Grants were also made to Young Audiences and Special Audiences. In making these grants, Shultz said, ''We are particularly interested in helping to expand audience participation. Atlanta is a city of many diverse interests and cultures and we believe that that diversity should be reflected in the audiences of our arts institutions.''

DALLAS (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - The Southland Corp., Ito-Yokado Co. Ltd., and Seven-Eleven Japan Co. Ltd, Thursday announced a revised restructuring proposal to substantially improve the terms of the exchange offers to be made to Southland bondholders and preferred stockholders.

In addition, the three parties have mutually agreed to extend their previously announced stock purchase agreement to August 15.

Southland also announced that it would not make certain interest payments due June 15 on its public debt. While the company is continuing to meet its other current obligations, including obligations to its trade creditors, it reached this decision in order to provide the company with additional flexibility and liquidity.

Clark Matthews, Southland's chief financial officer, said, ''We estimate that the terms of the revised exchange offers represent an increase in current value of approximately $200 million over the original offers. Our goal in significantly improving the proposal is to put Southland on solid financial footing as quickly as possible in order to ensure its long-term ability to compete.

''We believe the revised proposal is responsive to the constructive discussions we have had with our bondholders and will lead to a successful restructuring. We are very pleased that Ito-Yokado and Seven-Eleven Japan are supportive of this proposal.''

The revised exchange offers are the first step of a two-part plan, which includes the previously announced infusion of $400 million of new equity by Ito-Yokado and Seven-Eleven Japan, two long-time Southland business partners. Under the revised proposal, bondholders would receive debt securities with an aggregrate principal amount of approximately $550 million, bearing cash interest at rates of 12 percent to 14 percent and having maturities of six to seven years.

The preferred shareholders would receive shares of a new series of preferred stock, with terms to be established, or common stock of substantially the same value. In addition, bondholders and preferred shareholders would receive a total of approximately 18-1/2 percent of the company's common stock.

The equity position of the existing shareholders would be reduced to 6-1/2 percent, assuming 100 percent acceptance of the exchanges. The specific terms of the revised proposal for each class of security will be subject to further discussions with the bondholder steering committee and its advisors.

Matthews continued, ''In just the past few years, new entrants to the convenience retailing industry have increased competitive pressures to unprecedented levels. In particular, oil companies have invested significant capital in retailing operations and added thousands of new convenience store units.

''During this same period, Southland has had to restrict its capital spending activities due to covenant restrictions and cash flow limitations resulting from its LBO debt. A comprehensive restructuring of Southland's public debt and equity has therefore become necessary to contend with this changed environment.''

Southland has approximately 6,900 Seven-Eleven and other convenience units in the United States and Canada. In addition, area licensees and affiliates operate more than 6,000 Seven-Eleven stores in the United States and 21 foreign countries.

Seven-Eleven Japan, which is Southland's largest Seven-Eleven licensee, went public in 1979. It now operates 3,940 Seven-Eleven stores in Japan, making it Japan's largest convenience store operator. Seven-Eleven Japan purchased Southland's Hawaiian operations, including 58 operating Seven-Eleven stores, in December of 1989.

Ito-Yokado is the second largest and most profitable superstore/supermarket chain operator in Japan. In 1973, it became Southland's first international Seven-Eleven licensee. Ito-Yokado subsequently transferred the license to its subsidiary, Seven-Eleven Japan in which it owns a 50.3 percent stake. Ito-Yokado also owns a 51 percent interest in Denny's Japan Co. Ltd., and has a total of over 38,700 full- and part-time employees.

This announcement does not constitute an offer to sell or to buy any security or the solicitation of any consents or proxies, which offers and consent or proxy solicitation shall only be made by means of a proxy statement/prospectus to be filed by Southland with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

RICHMOND, VA (JUNE 14) BUSINESS WIRE - Construction of Saturn's first dealer facility in Virginia was commemorated Thursday as Saturn Dealer Haywood B. (Huddy) Hyman Jr. and Saturn officials held a site dedication ceremony here for the future home of ''Saturn of Richmond.''

Joining Hyman in the ceremony were Jerry Lewis, UAW coordinator for Saturn Sales, Service and Marketing; Nick Turner, Saturn field executive; and Marty Crocker, Saturn field consultant.

''Huddy Hyman typifies our Saturn dealer partners,'' Turner said. ''They are highly successful retail automotive experts with organizations committed to providing superior customer satisfaction and an exceptional sales and service experience.''

The stand-alone, uniform Saturn dealer facilities will feature new concepts in merchandising and servicing cars including side-by-side sales and service entrances to enhance customer convenience and satisfaction.

''We're focusing on providing an exceptional experience for each customer who walks through the front door of this dealership,'' Hyman said. ''This key element of Saturn's philosophy will distinguish us in the market place.''

Saturn currently has named 99 dealers for 110 marketing areas across the United States. These dealers plan to build 129 facilities. The automaker will introduce its cars first on the West Coast and the Southeast this fall, followed by a rollout across the rest of the United States.

Paying tribute to Saturn's Spring Hill, Tenn., home and the environment, an area at the dealership site has been designated for a Tulip Poplar tree to be planted following construction.

''The Tulip Poplar symbolizes Spring Hill, the team spirit, and the hard work that will go into every car we will build,'' said Lewis. ''Our dealers are planting this tree at their dealerships across the county as a symbol of our roots.''

While construction of Saturn's dealer facilities is under way in several states, the automaker is in the process of building validation vehicles at its new manufacturing and assembly complex in Spring Hill to test its equipment and processes.

Saturn Corp., an independent subsidiary of General Motors, is based in Spring Hill and Troy, Mich. The company's mission is to develop, manufacture and market a family of high-quality, affordable cars to compete in the subcompact and compact segments of the market.

Saturn products will be built at a 4-million-square-foot manufacturing and assembly complex in Spring Hill. The first cars, two-door and four-door models, will be produced this fall.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows in a press release dated May 29, 1990, Colonial Gas Co. announced that the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities (MDPU) approved a method of rate recovery for environmental response costs. The costs are those resulting from former gas manufacturing operations of Colonial and eight other distributors of natural gas.

That approved rate recovery method came through the settlement of generic proceedings between the Massachusetts Attorney General and the nine gas producers. With the cost of gas adjustment clause so reached, the companies may recover their environmental response costs, without carrying costs, over a period of seven years.

Beginning after July 1, 1990, Colonial plans to recover approximately $5 million of the environmental response costs it has thus far incurred.

By MICHAEL STRAUSS - Comtex Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) COMTEX - Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher told the Senate Banking Committee he expects continued cooperation from Japan in ongoing trade talks despite reports of Japanese intransigence in The Wall Street Journal and The Washington Post today.

"I think the decision the president made on Super 301 was right," Mosbacher said, referring to the determination made earlier this year not to cite Japan under the 1988 Trade Act. The Super 301 provision allows the U.S. to retaliate against nations it deems are engaging in unfair trade practices.

"It acknowledges promises Japan has made but that doesn't mean we don't expect continuing progress on their side," Mosbacher added. "We have several check points - telecommunications, autos, electronics, metals. My mind is still open on 301."

The Washington Post reported in its Thursday edition that Japan does not intend to offer further concessions in the next set of bilateral trade talks scheduled later this month.

"Is Japan stonewalling on trade?" Sen. Alfonse D'Amato (R-N.Y.) asked Mosbacher.

"I hope they are just testing us to see if we've lost our resolve," replied Mosbacher. "From where I sit, the administration has not. Japan has taken some good first steps but they've got a long way to go."

The U.S. posted a 1989 merchandise trade deficit of $108.6 billion, including a $49 billion bilateral debt with Japan. Mosbacher expects the deficit will fall to $100 billion this year.

Chairman Donald Riegle (D-Mich.) pressed Mosbacher on specific trade goals but Mosbacher said he had no set of numbers in mind.

"Rather than pick a specific target of trade deficit goals, we want to see improvement in specific increments," Mosbacher said.

"How much longer before the trade deficit drops to $75 billion?" Riegle asked. "We must set a goal."

"I think we're seeing a reduction of $10 billion a year," Mosbacher said. "In 2 1/2 years, assuming the same general parameters, we'll hit $75 billion."

"I think we need a faster track because otherwise the debt will crush us," Riegle said. "I want to see a goal of cutting the deficit with Japan in half within two years."

Mosbacher says he believes it is the primary responsibility of the private sector to improve industrial performance and sustain the domestic economy.

"U.S. industry must undertake the commitment to produce quality goods and services," Mosbacher said. "For its part, the government must seek to foster an economic climate that facilitates rather than hinders private initiative and overall economic performance."

Mosbacher introduced an eight-point plan which focuses on keeping America competitive in the global economic arena. This includes cutting the capital gains tax rate; implementing pending product liability and antitrust legislation; greater educational opportunities; provide higher quality products and services; promote free trade and export opportunities; linking environmental and competitive goals; liberalize export controls; and speeding the research and development and commercialization of new technologies.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) COMTEX - Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher told the Senate Banking Committee today he believes banks have been tightening credit in recent weeks.

"A credit crunch is underway," Mosbacher said. "I'm convinced there is one."

"That's very interesting," replied Sen. Alfonse D'Amato (R-N.Y.). "The Federal Reserve chairman and other bank officials will be here next week to testify on the subject and I bet they will say there is no crunch."

Committee Chairman Donald Riegle (D-Mich.) said he and many of his Senate colleagues have heard complaints from their constituents over tighter bank lending policies. Riegle said the panel will meet on June 21 to take up the issue. Witnesses will include Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan, L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and Robert Clarke Comptroller of the Currency.

Mosbacher was appearing before the panel to report on the competitive position of American industry in the world economy and ways to improve it.

By MICHAEL STRAUSS - Comtex Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) COMTEX - The Securities and Exchange Commission voted yesterday to solicit comments on changes in regulating mutual funds.

The SEC says specific topics for comment include the internationalization of the securities markets; distribution of open-end companies; closed-end funds and repurchases of shares; transactions in options and futures contracts; insurance products under the federal securities laws; and bank involvement with investment companies.

The Investment Company Act of 1940 was created to regulate companies, primarily mutual funds, which actively invest in other concerns. Closed-end funds issue a fixed number of publicly traded shares while open-end funds issue and redeem shares on demand.

The SEC is seeking comment on regulation of mutual funds because it says laws governing them have not been significantly amended since 1970.

The commission also voted to invite comments on a proposal to allow summary prospectuses to be used for initial public offerings. A summary prospectus highlights important information contained in the full registration statement, enabling potential investors to decide if they wish to seek further information on the offering.

Summary prospectuses are presently not permitted for IPOs. Introducing a summary prospectus in place of an IPO which is several hundred pages could result in sharply reduced costs for the offering.

Finally, the SEC agreed to propose for public comment a rule which would amend and clarify bookkeeping requirements of investment companies. Targeted specifically at mutual funds investing in foreign securities, the rule would require investment companies to preserve certain of their original books and records in the United States and provide they all be kept in English.

The rule is designed to allow SEC officials to inspect records of registered investment companies with minimum difficulty.

Beirut (JUNE 14) - The wife, friends and former students of U.S. hostage Thomas Sutherland have sent him a message of solidarity to mark the start of his sixth year in captivity.

The tape-recorded message was broadcast late Wednesday on Radio Beirut and was due to be repeated Thursday evening.

Sutherland, 59, was the dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped on the road to Beirut international airport on June 9, 1985.

Sutherland is one of six American hostages detained in Lebanon by Moslem fundamentalists loyal to Iran.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) - The New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) plans to introduce trading in stocks after hours and off its trading floor later this year for the first time in its 200-year-old history, The New York Times reported Thursday.

The newspaper, citing industry sources who had been briefed on the plans by exchange officials, said the NYSE hopes to recapture business lost to the London and Tokyo stock exchanges as stock trading has evolved into a 24-hour activity.

An estimated 15 to 20 million shares of NYSE stocks currently trade during off hours. The average volume during the NYSE's 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. business day has been running about 160 million shares a day.

The plans involve electronic trading and may bypass specialists, who make markets for stocks on the floor of the exchange, according to the report.

Sometime later this year, the NYSE will begin by introducing two limited after-hours trading sessions that will be governed by rules different from those applied to daytime trading, the Times said.

Next year, the exchange plans auctions of each Big Board stock at 8 p.m., midnight and 5 a.m. New York time - times that fall at the start of the business day in Tokyo, the middle of the day in Tokyo and the middle of the business day in London, the report said.

The stocks would trade only once at the auction times with all trades combined at a single agreed price, the Times said.

NYSE spokesman Richard Torrenzano said late Wednesay the possibility of after hours trading had been under study for two years "and we've begun to discuss some very innovative ways to approach that idea."

"If we see a need by our customers to have an off-hour trading system, we will move very innovatively and quickly to meet that customer demand," he said.

HANOI (JUNE 14) - The Vietnamese parliament opened a two-week meeting here Thursday that is expected to pass several new laws affecting the economy.

Delegates to the National Assembly session lasting till June 30 will also debate proposed amendments to the 1988 foreign investment law and hear reports on Vietnam's socio-economic situation and foreign policy in the first six months of the year, officials said.

Assembly president Le Quang Dao addressed the opening session, attended by top leaders including Communist Party chief Nguyen Van Linh and Premier Do Muoi.

Legislation to be tabled before the session includes draft taxation laws on agriculture, turnover, interest and consumption as well as maritime and trade union legislation, which are expected to be passed, officials said.

The assembly will also debate amendments to the code of criminal procedure and to the foreign investment law.

It will discuss a draft business law covering joint stock companies and the private sector, one official said, adding that this and the maritime law could encourage overseas business interest in Vietnam.

The proposed amendments to the foreign investment law include allowing individual Vietnamese entrepreneurs to deal directly with foreign investors in joint venture companies in certain sectors and under certain coinditions to be set by the Council of Ministers, a senior economic official said.

It would also allow individual foreign companies involved with other overseas firms in joint venture projects to sign contracts in their own right, according to Dau Ngoc Xuan, president of the state committee on investment and foreign cooperation.

EINDHOVEN, Netherlands (JUNE 14) - The troubled Philips electronics group warned Thursday that profits in 1990 would be "very low" because of the cost of restructuring.

The announcement was made in a statement shortly before trading began on the Amsterdam stock market. Philips shares fell at first to 31.80 and then to 31.50 guilder, rising slightly to 31.70 guilder compared with 33.60 at the close on Wednesday.

A broker said that the stock appeared to have "steadied slightly" and that financiers had reacted "quite well" to the announcement.

The statement said: "On the basis of the performance in the months of April and May 1990, we anticipate that the results for the second quarter of 1990 will be appreciably lower than those of the corresponding quarter of 1989, when net income from normal business operations amounted to 197 million guilder.

"Net results from normal business operations for 1990 as a whole will, also in view of provisions to be made for restructuring, be at a very low level."

In the second quarter of 1989 to which the statement referred, net operating profits rose by 62.8 percent to 197 million guilder (about 100 million dollars). But overall profits fell by 24.6 percent to 513 million guilder.

On May 3 the company reported that net operating profits for the first quarter had fallen by 97 percent to six million guilder and that overall profits were down by 26 percent at 450 million guilder. Soon afterwards the then group president Cor van der Klugt retired early.

An extraordinary general meeting of shareholders will be held in Eindhoven on July 2 when "more detailed information about the results will be provided", the statement said. Results for the second quarter will be announced on August 9.

Colombo (JUNE 14) - Sri Lanka's biggest Tamil separatist group Thursday launched an attack on a military base in the north of the island, killing 30 persons and injuring 50, officials said.

The raid by the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam came on the fourth day of fierce fighting with government troops in the predominantly Tamil populated northeastern province.

State Minister of Defence Ranjan Wijeratne said government reinforcements had been sent to the area where rebels were trying to wrest control of the Kilinochchi army base.

At least 200 persons have been killed in this week's clashes despite a hastily worked out ceasefire that was to due to have come into force on Wednesday.

Wijeratne said the government was still open for discussion with the rebels. He said Justice Minister Shahul Hameed would fly to the northern city of Jaffna on Friday for talks with Tigers' leaders.

Wijeratne said 650 policemen abducted by the rebels were still missing, but he declined to comment on reports more than 100 of them were executed in the jungle two days ago.

BERNE, Switzerland (JUNE 14) - Switzerland said Thursday it was banning imports of British beef and beef products immediately because of concern over "mad cow disease."

The ban covers live animals, prepared beef and veal, and bonemeal for animal feed.

The Swiss federal veterinary office said it had taken the move to ensure that Britain did not divert to Switzerland exports of these products following European Economic Community restrictions on their importation due to concern over bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), which affects cattle brains.

Switzerland is not an EEC member and imports only a small amount of British beef, the veterinary office said.

Britain immediately responded that it was disappointed by the Swiss decision, which it said was not based on any scientific evidence.

An agriculture ministry spokesman in London noted that the EEC had tightened controls on British beef, but ordered France, West Germany and Italy to lift their outright bans on its importation.

There was little chance that Switzerland would become a substitute destination for British beef, as it was being exported normally to the EEC and in any case the Swiss market was worth only 6,500 pounds (11,000 dollars) last year.

The EEC ruled last week that British beef could only be exported to other Community countries if it was prepared and all visceral tissue susceptible to contamination removed, or if the meat was certified as coming from a disease-free herd.

Some 14,000 cattle have died or been destroyed since 1986 after contracting the disease.

HANOI (JUNE 14) - Australia and Vietnam signed an economic agreement here Thursday paving the way for a substantial increase in bilateral trade and investment, Australian diplomats said.

Australian Industry, Technology, and Commerce Minister John Button and Vietnamese Commerce Minister Hoang Minh Thang signed the Agreement on Trade and Economic Cooperation, they said.

The pact provides the framework for increased activity in infrastructure development, science and technology, transport, tourism, banking and finance, and environment and education. Further details were not available.

Two-way trade between Australia and Vietnam has jumped from 6.1 million Australian dollars (4.7 million U.S.) in 1984 to 99.6 million dollars (76.8 million U.S.) last year, according to official Canberra figures.

The agreement calls for setting up a ministerial level joint committee that will meet at least once a year and review progress, work to remove obstacles to economic cooperation and examine proposals for further trade ties.

The Australian minister said Canberra was also ready to negotiate an investment protection agreement and double taxation arrangements with Hanoi to set the framework for further bilateral economic expansion.

Cash-strapped Vietnam has been striving over the past two years to attract overseas investment and boasts cheap and abundant labour, large untapped natural resources and a massive potential market of 65 million people.

Mr. Button also held talks Thursday with Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach and Agriculture and Food Industries Minister Nguyen Co Tan and was scheduled to meet later with Prime Minister Do Muoi, officials said.

He arrived Wednesday in Vietnam for a week-long visit heading a team of 17 businessmen representing some of Australia's leading concerns.

Mr. Button said "the ink was not even dry on the agreement before members of the delegation were exploring all sorts of business contacts."

The Australian delegation is scheduled to leave here Saturday for the Vietnamese trade capital of Ho Chi Minh City and will head for Tokyo from the southern metropolis on Tuesday.

The motion, presented by the Socialists and the Greens, was approved partly with the votes of liberal and conservative deputies.

Mandela, on a European tour, made his appeal in a speech before the European parliament Wednesday.

SYDNEY (JUNE 14) - The Federal Court on Thursday upheld Primary Industries Minister John Kerin's decision to cut the wool floor price, a move that drew strenuous opposition from farmers here.

Mr. Kerin in May ordered the price cut from 8.70 Australian dollars (6.71 U.S.) a kilo to 7.00 dollars (5.40 U.S.) cents from July 1 to ease the crisis in an industry plagued by declining sales and a mounting stockpile.

The three-judge court unanimously rejected a challenge to the minister's powers by the New South Wales Farmers' Association, which argued that only the Australian Wool Corporation could set the floor price.

It ruled that the minister had the reserve power to alter the floor price if it was in the national interest.

The cut in the wool floor price was "obviously of national significance to a nation heavily dependent upon its exports of primary products including wool," the court said.

"The interests of the wool industry alone may not always coincide with the national interests of Australia," it said.

The government had asked the industry to slash its floor price because it was concerned at the mounting debt needed to fund the wool stockpile.

Canberra was also worried about the loss of export income.

PARIS (JUNE 14) - France's current account balance plunged into the red in April, showing a 4.2 billion franc (736 million dollars) deficit after a 1.6 billion franc (280 million dollars) surplus the previous month, it was announced here Thursday.

This gave a deficit for the first four months of the year of 780 million francs (136 million dollars), against a 3.7 billion francs (649 million dollars) surplus in the same period last year according to the seasonally-adjusted figures.

The poor showing is largely due to a sharp fall in the surplus in the services sector over last year's level.

Provisional figures issued by the national statistics office INSEE Thursday showed that consumer prices in France rose 0.2 percent in May over the April level, and are rising at an annual rate of three percent.

Prices rose 0.4 percent in April and 0.3 percent in March, and have increased by 1.4 percent over the first five months of the year.

The three percent year on year increase in May was "the lowest since November 1988," Economy Minister Pierre Beregovoy told journalists, and the May figures also brought France closer to its aim of bringing its economic performance into line with that of West Germany.

The difference in the inflation rate between the two countries stood at 0.9 percent in April, but was back down to 0.7 percent, the same as the March level, in May.

KUALA LUMPUR (JUNE 14) - Malaysia and Vietnam plan to resume talks next week on a proposed memorandum of understanding on the forced repatriation of boat people, a top official said Thursday.

Foreign Minister Abu Hassan Omar told reporters that he briefed the visiting United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), Thorvald Stoltenberg, on the bilateral discussions during a meeting here Thursday.

Mr. Abu Hassan said the Vietnamese team would be led by Deputy Foreign Minister Vu Khoan.

"Our discussions will be on those who don't volunteer to go home with a view to signing (the memorandum) later this month," he said.

Vietnam has already accepted 107 boat people who returned home voluntarily from Malaysian camps, but says it is opposed to forced repatriation. The United States has said there should be no forced repatriation before next year.

Malaysia hosts 17,000 boat people, of whom 13,000 landed after the March 14 1989 cut-off date that ended the right to automatic resettlement in third countries.

Malaysia has screened a quarter of the boat people who arrived after the cut-off date and has ruled 70 per cent of them non-refugees, officials said.

Western diplomats said the number of boat people in Malaysia would have been higher if Malaysia had not turned away more than 5,000 arrivals since May last year.

TOKYO (JUNE 14) - Japan's major companies suffered a 12.2 percent drop in pre-tax profits in the first quarter of 1990 from a year earlier to 9.321 trillion yen (61.325 billion dollars), the Finance Ministry said Thursday.

The ministry's survey covered 16,831 companies in all fields except finance and insurance.

It found that sales posted a six percent rise to 296.036 trillion yen (1.947 trillion dollars) and capital spending jumped 15 percent to 14.646 trillion yen (96.356 billion dollars) for the 10th straight quarter of double-digit increases.

Ministry officials said that the drop in pre-tax profits was temporary and resulted from the so-called "triple losses" -- a weaker yen, higher interest rates and higher crude oil prices.

The companies surveyed were each capitalized at more 10 million yen (65,800 dollars).

KATHMANDU (JUNE 14) - Nepal's public exchequer will lift additional duties on 78 goods of Indian origin effective Thursday, the Nepalese Finance Ministry said.

A finance ministry spokesman said late Wednesday that the decision "was expected to make a positive impact" on sales of the goods in Nepal.

The list includes colour televisions, video cassette decks and light vehicles, the spokesman said.

Duties will also be lifted on several unprocessed agricultural, forestry and mineral goods, as well as horticultural products, raw wool, livestock, bonemeal, cottage milk products, oil cake and herbal medicines.

The ministry said there were no immediate changes on goods imported from other nations, although an increase was expected under the new budget for fiscal 1990-1991 starting July 16.

The additional duties, which ranged from 15 percent to 55 percent, were imposed by the government that was dissolved by royal decree in April and has been replaced by the interm coalition government of Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai.

The duties raised the prices on Indian products - especially jeeps, cars, appliances and electronic goods - putting them on a par with those imported from other nations.

After Chinese protests over tariffs, the former government made certain alterations in the duties on Chinese exports via neighboring Tibet, but Nepal made no changes in the tariffs on Indian imports.

The situation brought a reaction from India, which was particularly upset by a Sino-Nepalese arms deal in the latter half of 1988.

BEIJING (JUNE 14) - Gold production in China reached a record high during the first five months of this year, up 36.3 percent over the same period in 1989, China Daily reported Thursday.

The high output was expected to help Beijing pay off its foreign debt, the English-language newspaper said. The country's foreign debt stands at 41.3 billion dollars.

China, one of the world's largest gold producers, has never disclosed its output, but observers estimate production at about 50 tons per year.

Gold production between January and May was 36.5 percent of the target set for this year, China Daily said.

Beijing expects an overall production increase of 6.8 percent this year over 1989, the paper cited a State Gold Administration official as saying.

It added that China's gold production has risen an average of 10 percent annually during the last decade.

Observers here noted that gold prices on the world market dropped last week for the third time since March 26, with experts and analysts predicting further dives in the near future.

Massive sales in the Middle East of gold from an unknown origin stirred fears that the Soviet Union was liquidating large quantities of the precious metal in a bid to obtain hard currency.

HONG KONG (JUNE 14) - Hong Kong's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for February to April was 1.8 percent, the Census and Statistics Department said Thursday.

The figure was higher than the 1.3 percent for the three months ending January, 1990 and the 1.5 percent for the corresponding period a year earlier.

The department said an estimated 48,700 people were out of work in February-April this year, compared with 36,800 in the three months ending January 1990 and 40,500 in the corresponding period in 1989.

It said that although there were signs that the labor market might have eased off marginally, there was still no conclusive evidence that a trend had emerged.

Hong Kong, which is currently facing an acute labor shortage, is to import 14,700 workers including labor needed for a 16.3 billion U.S. dollar port and airport project.

The program, which is to start in two months, has sparked strong criticism from various labor unions, which fear that the new policy will hurt local workers, and they have threatened to hold mass demonstrations over the issue.

The provisional estimate of the unemployment rate for March-May 1990, which provides an early indication of the latest unemployment stituation, was 1.6 percent, compared with 1.5 percent for the three months ending February 1990 and the corresponding period a year earlier.

LONDON (JUNE 14) - Precious metals and chemicals group Johnson Matthey said Thursday its pre-tax profit fell 25 percent in the year to March 31, to 48.2 million pounds (80.3 million dollars) from 64.6 million (107.6 million dollars).

Turnover was up 5.7 percent over the previous year at 1.51 billion pounds (2.51 billion dollars), from 1.43 billion (2.38 billion dollars) and final dividend was sent at six pence, giving a total for the year of 8.5 pence, up from eight the previous year.

Earnings per share fell from 28.4 pence to 17.1.

Johnson Matthey said the fall in profit was largely due to previsions to finance the restructuring of the group.

The result was well below market forecasts, due to exceptional items totalling 53 million pounds.

Johnson shares were down two pence at 262 in mid-session trading in London in a sharply rising market.

DUNKIRK, France (JUNE 14) - Greenpeace activists Thursday blocked the departure from this northern port of a train-ferry carrying radioactive wastes from West Germany to Britain for disposal, port authorities said.

An unknown number of activists on board a Greenpeace boat and five inflatable rafts encircled the Sealink ferry "Nord-Pas-de-Calais" in the port just before its scheduled departure at 11:OO p.m. (O900 GMT).

They also attached buoys to the ferry so as to block its propellors, according to police sources.

The radioactive waste represented no more than two freight-cars in volume, said officials at the Angleterre-Lorraine-Alsace company, which operates the train-ferry for Sealink. The waste originated from the Unterweser nuclear power plant, near Bremen, West Germany, and is destined for a disposal center in Sellafield, Britain.

TOKYO (JUNE 14) - The Japan Socialist Party (JSP) decided Thursday to set up a special group within the party to devise ways of blocking the opening of the Japanese rice market, party officials said.

The JSP, the largest opposition party, made the decision at a meeting of its Central Executive Committee, the officials said.

They said the group would be headed by party vice-chairman Makoto Tanabe.

All political parties here oppose the liberalization of Japan's rice market.

But former prime minister Noboru Takeshita said Wednesday that the policy of the ruling Liberal Democratic party (LDP) on rice should be reconsidered in line with changes of public opinion in Japan.

Mr. Takeshita resigned as prime minister a year ago, but still wields considerable influence in the LDP.

Despite growing foreign pressure, Japan has adamantly refused to open its rice market in the current Uruagay Round of multilateral trade negotiations in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, citing the need for food security.

The round is to end in December, but its successful completion has been put into jeopardy by slow progress in agricultural and other areas, analysts said.

PARIS (JUNE 14) - French steelmaker Usinor-Sacilor said Thursday it was making a bid to acquire a 20 percent stake in Britain's second largest steel trader ASD.

Usinor did not give the value of its bid, but said it had received the support of ASD's main shareholder, the Stemcor trading company, which holds a 77.7 percent stake.

Usinor's offer essentially concerns the shareholding outside Stemcor's control.

Usinor-Sacilor and ASD are also to set up a joint company in Barking outside London for cutting and trading flat steel products. Usinor will hold a 51 per cent stake and ASD the remaining 49 percent.

ASD is based in Leeds in northern England, and had a turnover of two billion francs (350.8 million dollars) last year. It employs 1,300 people and markets 500,000 tonnes of steel a year.

The Usinor-ASD deal is subject to official approval.

Usinor has said that it is planning to spend three billion francs (526 million dollars) on new acquisitions, and earlier this year acquired the second largest U.S. producer of stainless steel plates, J and L.

It has recently acquired British steel concern Alpone Stainless Steel and is seeking to acquire U.S. metallurgical products specialist Alloy and Stainless.

It is also holding talks with West German concern Mannesmann on a possible joint tube-making subsidiary.

It is also seeking a tie-up with Falck, Italy's leading private steelmaker.

Falck president Alberto Falck said in Milan Thursday that his company had not yet made a decision on whether it would link up with Usinor or Italian state-owned concern ILVA.

"ILVA and Usinor are on an equal footing, and a decision will be taken by the end of the month," Mr. Falck said following a meeting Wednesday of the company's board.

Usinor had initially been seen as the favourite, but ILVA has re-entered the ring with new proposals recently.

Usinor pulled out of the red in 1988 after 14 loss-making yuears, and last year showed a net profit of 7.5 billion francs (1.3 billion dollars).

EIJA said it would be the first meeting between Japanesee and European electronics industry leaders.

The Brussels-based European European Electronic Component Manufacturers Association (EECMA) planned to send representatives. The association groups major electronics makers in West Germany, Britain, France and four other European nations.

The EIJA has met regularly with its U.S. counterpart, the U.S. Semiconductor Industry Association, since 1987 but it has not yet had such opporunities with EECMA, the officials said.

KARACHI (JUNE 14) - The official 5.7 percent inflation rate for the fiscal year ending June has been challenged by independent financial experts in Pakistan, who put the annual inflation rate at around 18 percent.

Aftab Ahmed Khan, a former government finance secretary and a highly respected economist, has said the government's efforts at curbing inflation did not carry conviction.

"The shadow between statistics and reality is significantly long," Mr. Khan said in a comment on the budget appearing in Tuesday's Daily Business Recorder.

He said that governments generally indulged in "terminological inexactitude" when announcing inflationery trends in the country.

He also said the government had been "quite permissive" in regard to the downward slide in the external value of the Pakistan currency in a managed float against a trade-weighted basket of foreign currencies.

According to the State Bank of Pakistan, the value of the Pakistan rupee has depreciated sharply, from a dollar parity of 21.10 rupees on June 15, 1989, to the current rate of 21.88 rupees.

Analysts said that apart from other factors involved in inflation, the depreciation had raised the prices of imported goods, such as heavy machinery, cars, television sets, electronic goods and medicines.

They said that the most critical cause of inflation was the 15.8 percent increase in the domestic prices of petroleum products announced by the government in March.

This had contributed to a rise in transport charges, as well as bus and taxi fares, with an all-round escalation in prices of consumer goods, they said.

Although the government gave an annual inflation figure of 5.7 percent, it announced 10 percent interim relief for low-paid government employees in the national budget last week.

SEOUL (JUNE 14) - The South Korean government announced Thursday a controversial plan to reintroduce private broadcasting, but press unions said it was a plot to regain government control of broadcasts.

The Information Ministry said the government would permit a radio and television network to beam to Seoul and surrounding areas under a policy of diversifying broadcasts to meet increasing demand.

"It is also necessary to allow the people more variety in channels at this time when the cultural invasion by Japanese satellite television is getting serious," the anouncement said.

Japan's NHK satellite television broadcasts can now be received in South Korea, irritating many here who complain about cultural imperialism by the former colonial power.

The government will also set up an educational broadcasting station with a T.V. channel and two radio bands which are currently owned by the state-run Korea Broadcasting System (KBS), and a radio station to broadcast abroad, the announcement said.

The plan was met with criticism from many who said that far from resulting in less government control of the press, the plan would actually ensure it.

"This is no more than a government plot to regain control of broadcasts by setting up a new, docile private broadcasting company," said a spokesman of the press union of the state-run Korea Broadcasting System (KBS).

Since forming an independent union last year, KBS has produced "pro-democracy" programs, including a documentary on the military crackdown on a 1980 popular uprising in Kwangju, the spokesman said, adding that the government was now seeking to reshape the broadcasting system.

"We plan to launch a joint struggle in alliance with other press unions and academicians opposed to the government plan," he said.

LONDON (JUNE 14) - A pampered pet tortoise has inherited 26,000 pounds (40,000 dollars) in the will of an eccentric English woman, press reported here Thursday

BEIJING (JUNE 14) - China is to take special measures to curb tax evasion by foreign firms, a state tax bureau official said Thursday.

Beijing has allowed a total of 23,000 foreign-funded companies to establish themselves in China, most of them in coastal development areas, and given them tax privileges.

"A number of foreign-funded enterprises have sought to evade taxes in spite of these perks," the official said, quoted by the New China News Agency.

The official said some foreign managers were guilty of exaggerating the price of imported raw materials and understating export revenue in dealing with their overseas affiliates.

He was quoted as saying there was no question of withdrawing privileges for foreign firms, adding that the aim of the campaign against the evaders was to protect properly managed enterprises.

China has double taxation agreements with 30 countries, all of them containing clauses aimed at preventing tax fraud.

DAR ES SALAAM (JUNE 14) - The Tanzanian High Court has ordered the auctioning of moveable assets of the state-owned Mwanza Textile Mills (MWATEX) to recover income and sales-tax arrears it owes the government, the official Tanzanian News Agency, SHIHATA, said Thursday.

MWATEX, one of the largest textile industries in East Africa, was built in the 1970's with loans from France and Kuwait and its defaulted sales tax since 1988 amounts to 193.2 million Tanzanian shillings (1.01 million U.S. dollars).

The court order empowered a local court broker in the Lake Victoria shore-town of Mwanza to seize textiles and vehicles found within the factory compound for public auction, the agency said.

MWATEX started experiencing operational problems in 1979 due to constant power and water supply breakdowns that seriously affected its output, but last year the power supply began to improve after Mwanza was connected to the National Power Grid.

At present, a big percentage of the company's estimated 4,000 workers are on enforced leave due to liquidity problems, which has made it difficult for MWATEX to buy even essential materials such as cotton, dyes and spare parts.

BANGKOK (JUNE 14) - Burmese drug lord Khun Sa sent a letter to the White House offering to help the United States fight heroin trafficking, a report here said Thursday.

Mr. Khun Sa sent the letter as opium growers in the Golden Triangle reaped bumper harvests. Heroin is a derivative of the opium plant.

His letter said he was ready to cooperate with the United States on drug issues, according to a report in the English-language daily Bangkok Post.

Khernsai Jaiyane, chief liaison officer to Khun Sa, said that as opium production reached 2,200 tons this year, the United States would need to change its drug policy if it wanted to eradicate narcotics, according to the report.

Mr. Khernsai said the United States would need new steps to deal with the heroin flowing from Burma, backed up by development projects to enable producers in the Shan State to switch to another livelihood.

"The Americans come to buy heroin from us and we are blamed for it. Do they want us to wear tree leaves and eat grass?" the report quoted him as saying.

Mr. Khun Sa also pledged to cooperate "only in narcotics matters" with "whoever becomes" the Rangoon government, which Khun Sa's Shan State Muang Tai Army has been fighting for regional autonomy for several decades.

"If the (U.S.) president wants the eradication of narcotics in the golden triangle and the Shan State and if he does not want to contact me directly he can go through the Rangoon government," the Post quoted the letter as saying.

The report said U.S. President George Bush would receive the letter just as talks were to begin in Washington with Thai Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan.

The talks were scheduled for Thursday, and Mr. Chatichai was expected to discuss Thailand's role as a major drug shipment point, among other issues.

PARIS (JUNE 14) - French television production firm SFP has announced a cut of 500 jobs by the end of 1991, a move that led employees to call a general strike Thursday and demand the resignation of Chairman Jean-Pierre Hoss.

The firm, which is among Europe's leading producers of television programs, had announced the job cuts late Wednesday due to a record loss of 400 million francs (70 million dollars) last year, on sales of less than a billion francs (175 million dollars).

Mr. Hoss, referring after a board meeting to the firm's semi-governmental status, said that "No company can long survive such results, even if the government is its main shareholder".

The cumulative loss for 1987-89 is almost 800 million francs, on sales of three billion.

The job cuts will affect more than one-fourth of the company's current 1,930 employees.

Management has also decided to transfer a large part of company activities to Bry-sur-Marne, east of Paris, making it possible to rent or sell part of its huge building in the capital.

The government is the main shareholder (others being the TF1, Antenne 2 and FR3 television networks and Caisse des Depots), and will contribute 590 million francs to the firm's budget in 1990-91, in addition to 120 million paid in last March.

The government will also add 180 million francs to the company's share capital this summer.

In exchange, SFP has undertaken to "intensify modernization of its technical facilities" by investment of 273 million francs over a three-year period.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 14) - The European Economic Community imposed a record number of anti-dumping taxes on non-EEC products in 1988, the European Commission said Thursday, but denied that the taxes were a protectionist measure.

A total of 18 imported products were hit with unlimited anti-dumping taxes and 28 with temporary anti-dumping levies pending the outcome of an official investigation, the "highest ever seen," the Commission, the EEC's executive, said in its annual report to the European parliament.

The Commission imposes the anti-dumping levies on products shown to be sold at an artificially low price in the EEC and which are affecting the Community's domestic industry.

The latest report showed that the Far East was one of the chief offenders, with 18 of the 40 anti-dumping enquiries opened during the year coming from just three countries, China, South Korea, and Japan. But the Commission denied that the levies were protectionist or aimed at building a "fortress Europe."

It said its anti-dumping measures targetted only "isolated cases of fraudulent dumping" in line with General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) regulations, and stressed that they affected only 0.9 percent of EEC imports in 1987.

Chemicals and mechanical products topped the list of anti-dumping enquiries in 1988, but there were no investigations into textile imports, against ten the previous year.

DHAKA (JUNE 14) - More than 50 people were injured Thursday as police broke up in Bangladesh's capital a demonstration against new taxes in the proposed national budget.

Protesters hurled stones, tore apart billboards and disturbed traffic in central Dhaka as Finance Minister Abdul Munim announced the 1990-91 budget foresaw new taxes amounting to over 200 million dollars.

Eyewitnesses said several persons were arrested as police used batons and shields to disperse a crowd of over 5,000 people in central Dhaka.

Begum Khaleda Zia, head of the opposition Bangladesh Nationalist Party, earlier told a rally that the taxes would raise consumer prices and lower living standards.

The finance minister proposed to parliament taxes on edible oil, salt,

PARIS (JUNE 14) - Shareholders in the Banque Internationale pour l'Afrique Occidentale (BIAO) agreed on Thursday that the bank should be wound up, the French bank said in a statement issued here.

Shareholders nominated Jacques Piot to oversee liquidation of the bank and pledged to give him all the means needed to ensure the bank's solvency.

This pledge would cover the bank's commitments and those of its branches in London, New York, Hamburg, Monte Carlo and Lyon.

The Banque National de Paris (BNP) holds 51 percent of the BIAO, the rest of the capital being divided between the Banco do Brazil (20 percent), l'Union des Banques Swiss (20 percent) and the Compagnie Interafricaine d'Investissement (nine per cent).

The French-state-owned BNP recently decided to reorganise its position within the BIAO network. On June 1 it pulled out of two loss-making subsidiaries in Ivory Coast and Senegal and is also planning to pull out of Cameroon.

The BIAO has 17 subsidiaries, most of them in French-speaking Africa.

BNP has said that it would be willing to take over remaining subsidiaries in countries where its own overseas Banques Internationales pour le Commerce et L'industrie (BICI) network is not operating, and mergers are envisaged for the others.

The BIAO made a loss of 588 million francs (103 million dollars) last year, up from 393 million (69 million dollars) the previous year.

BIAO management sources meanwhile said the bank's 290 Paris staff, who went on strike May 29, had resumed work after a mass meeting. Management had promised they would all be redeployed.

TOKYO (JUNE 14) - Investing in a Japanese agricultural cooperative is bound to bear fruit, with interest being paid in the form of cherries, grapes, pears and apples according to the season.

One million yen (6,500 dollars) deposited for a year with the cooperative at Sagai in the northern prefecture of Yamagata, will give a return in fruit or rice, making up nearly half the interest earned, the daily Asahi reported Thursday.

Out of a total of 57,300 yen (376 dollars) earned, 25,000 yen (164 dollars) will be in the form of fruit, which might not please everyone, the paper said. But the fruit can always be passed on to someone else as a gift, it noted.

GENEVA (JUNE 14) - The Soviet Union is suggesting a ministerial conference with Western countries on an expected future flow of Soviet workers onto Western labor markets, Soviet Labor Minister Vladimir Sherbakov announced here on Thursday.

"I wouldn't want our workers to swell the ranks of the unemployed in Western Europe," he said, adding that in any case he wanted social protection for such workers.

Mr. Sherbakov, attending the International Labor Conference here, told a news conference that he had consulted with several of his counterparts, including those of the United States, Canada, France, West Germany, Finland, Sweden and Belgium, with a view to setting up a conference of labor ministers from East and West.

He said the Soviet Union was getting ready to allow its workers to go abroad to work, and a Soviet law on freedom of emigration would probably be adopted in September.

He said some workers have already started moving west illegally, but that "the big movements will get under way on January 1". That was when "the problem will begin to become serious".

Mr. Sherbakov said Western startes supposed their laws would restrict an influx of Soviet workers. "I have my doubts. There are numerous ways of getting around national laws," he said.

The minister also said that if the Soviet Union adopts a "shock treatment" move to a market economy, there would be as many as 35 to 40 million unemployed in the long run, out of a Soviet work force of 140 million.

A gradual transition to the new type of economy would put four to six million people out of work.

The minister added that Western labor ministers with whom he had talked here "had not really thought" about the problem and were surprised by its scope.

He planned to visit the European Economic Community (EEC) Commission and the European Parliament in July, and then "things might get under way in concrete fashion" on the question.

COLOMBO (JUNE 14) - Tamil rebels of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (Ltte) Thursday lost 25 men and suffered about 50 injured when the Sri Lanka military repulsed their attack against an army base, military sources said.

One soldier was killed and 13 wounded, while government reinforcements had been sent to the area where rebels were trying to wrest control of the Kilinochchi army base.

More than 300 soldiers, rebels and civilians have been killed in four days of fighting despite a hastily worked out ceasefire that was to due to have come into force on Wednesday.

State Minister of Defence Ranjan Wijeratne said Thursday 650 policemen abducted by the rebels were still missing, but he declined to comment on reports that more than 100 of them were executed in the jungle on Tuesday.

Wijeratne said Justice Minister Shahul Hameed would fly to the northern city of Jaffna on Friday for talks with Ltte leaders. The government will plan its next move after these talks, he added.

In the northern town of Mullaitivu, a police station surrendered to attacking rebels, police said without giving further details.

In Colombo, police warned on radio and television against bomb attacks by ''subversive elements'' and voiced fears that ethnic clashes between Singhalese and Tamils could occur in the capital as a result of a resurgence of the civil war.

LONDON (JUNE 14) - Plans for construction of a high-speed rail link between the Channel Tunnel and London have been dropped because the government could not meet requests for financial support of the project, British Transport Secretary Cecil Parkinson announced here Thursday.

The announcement was expected but nonetheless marked a major setback for the project which was being planned by the Eurorail consortium grouping British Rail and the private concerns Trafalgar House and BICC.

Mr. Parkinson said British Rail had asked to continue feasibility studies on building a link between the southeastern coastal city of Folkestone and the English capital.

But his announcement that the current plans had been scrapped virtually ensured that Trafalgar House and BICC would pull out of the project and cast doubt on whether a new link would be built before the end of the century.

It also came just two days after the French government announced ambitious plans for investment of some 190 billion francs (33.3 billion) dollars in the next 15 to 20 years in its own high-speed rail lines, which include links with the Channel Tunnel.

John Prescott, the opposition Labour Party's spokesman for transport, said the announcement marked "a sad and bad day for Britain" and was "the culmination of months of indecision."

"Britain will enter the 21st century with an inadequate 19th century railway link," Mr. Prescott said.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said earlier that her government had invested more money in railway development than any government for the past 25 years.

Criticism of the government's refusal to spend taxpayer's money on funding the rail link was "absolute nonsense," Mrs. Thatcher said.

KHARTOUM (JUNE 14) - Sudan Thursday called on India and Pakistan to exercise self-restraint and refrain from military escalation over Kashmir.

A statement issued by the Sudanese ministry of foreign affairs urged the two countries to abide by the United Nations resolutions which call for a referandum to determine the view of the Kashmiris.

According to the statement, the resolution ''constitutes a sound base for any negotiations that can be held in the search for a final and just settlement of the Kashmir dispute.''

The statement came at the end of a four-day official visit by a 14-member Pakistani parliamentary delegation, led by Senator al-Gadi Hussein Ahmed, to solicit international support for Kashmir.

According to the statement, ''the bonds of kinship and common history of the two peoples will enable India and Pakistan to by-pass their outstanding differences in the region.''

Ahmed said at a press conference at the end of his visit that ''the purpose of our tour is to draw the attention of the world and our Muslim brothers to the plight of the Kashmir people and pressure India to refrain from provoking war.''

He charged that ''in recent months alone, India killed and arrested over 2,000 Kashmiris and imposed a round-the-clock curfew on the region to provoke hunger and famine.''

Ahmed, who had earlier visited Turkey and Egypt and is due to proceed to Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, noted that ''if Islamic states support Kashmir, India will have no option but to solve the dispute.''

LYONS, FRANCE (JUNE 14) - Thirty-one Romanians are asking for political asylum in France, 23 of them members of a coach party of Romanian holidaymakers who went missing the day they were to return home, French officials said Thursday.

Of the coach party of 80 Romanian tourists, 58 failed to turn up for the return journey after their two-day Rhone valley excursion, and their six guides took the bus back without them, border police said.

Some 23 of the party contacted Rhone police Wednesday saying they "feared the Romanian government was heading toward a new dictatorship".

The others were still unaccounted for, the Rhone prefecture said Thursday, suggesting they may have extended their holiday, or may not have decided to request asylum yet.

In addition, in recent days eight other requests for asylum had come from Romanians in the Rhone region, the prefecture said.

A Lyons humanitarian group, "Equilibre", is housing the Romanians pending a ruling by the authorities on their asylum request.

BEIRUT (JUNE 14) - Syrian and Iranian mediators left the Lebanese capital Thursday after again failing to secure a settlement in the conflict between the rival Shiite groups Amal and Hezbollah, informed sources said.

Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon, General Ghazi Kanaan, and Iran's ambassador to Damascus, Mohammad Akhtari, were unable to reconcile the two sides' widely differing positions in nine days of talks here.

The sources said the main unresolvable issue remained the pro-Iranian Hezbollah militia's return to areas in southern Lebanon from where they had been evicted by the Syrian-backed Amal group more than two years ago.

The two groups have battled since then for control of Lebanon's Shiite community. On-and-off clashes in south Lebanon, west Beirut and the central Bekaa Valley have left at least 800 people dead and 3,200 wounded.

Syria and Iran have tried on several occasions to end the conflict, notably with a cease-fire agreement in January 1989 that failed to hold.

The Syrian army, which controls west Beirut, has for the past two weeks been conducting house-to-house searches for weapons to prevent a resumption of fighting there and in the southern suburbs between the Shiite rivals.

PARIS (JUNE 14) - The army of Niger has massacred hundreds of people belonging to the nomadic Touareg tribes in retaliation for an earlier raid Touaregs carried out against a public building, the daily Le Monde Thursday reported here.

It quoted in its Friday edition reliable sources as saying massacres occured shortly after Touaregs had attacked a public building in the desert town of Tchin-Tabareden on May 6-7.

Black army troops of the Djerma ethnic group had attacked several Touareg camps. They had arrested at least 200 people and tortured them before execution. Soldiers had plundered and had raped women, Le Monde added.

The daily quoted Niger's President, Brigadier Ali Saibou, as saying: ''I am not a racist. The Touaregs want an autonomous region, something I will never support.''

More than 18,000 Touaregs, who are white, recently returned from Libya and Algeria to Niger. They had fled their country in 1984 because of a drought.

They charge that the government in the capital Niamey did not keep its promises to help them reintegrate into society.

The West African state of Niger is one of the poorest countries in the world because of its aridity and remoteness. Two-thirds of the territory is part of the Sahara. The population was estimated at about six million in mid-1981.

MONROVIA (JUNE 14) - Hundreds of Christians, Moslems and civil servants Thursday took part in a "peace march" here organized by the Liberia Council of Churches in opposition to war in Liberia.

The marchers called for an end to wanton killings in the West African state and to the six-month-old war between Liberian government troops and rebel forces.

In spite of heavy rains, they marched though the main streets of Monrovia carrying banners and singing "We shall overcome".

Some carried palm branches, others carried banners reading "Ceasefire", "Stop tribalism", "Stop harassment and unite in Christ".

Late Wednesday, Methodist Bishop Arthur Kular told state television the march was also a statement of solidarity with those seeking refuge in the grounds of churches.

Thursday's march ended at the Providence Baptist Church where prayers were said for a successful outcome to the peace talks between government and rebel representatives currently taking place in Freetown, Sierra Leone.

Meanwhile, a court martial trying four army officers charged with the wanton killings of several people resumed Thursday at the Barclay Training Center military headquarters.

The press which attend the brief first appearance of the accused Wednesday was excluded from Thursday's session, despite a request by one of the accused for press coverage.

NAIROBI (JUNE 14) - More than 300 students went on strike over introduction of a ban on contact between male and female students in their school, the Daily Nation newspaper reported Thursday.

The high school students in Kenya's Laikipia district accused headmaster Tassy Munyeshili of ignoring their grievances and serving the commercial interests of the school's proprietors.

Mr. Munyeshili was reported to have said the unrest could have been caused by his decision to separate classes for boys and girls and to prohibit social contact between the sexes.

The Nation reported that on Tuesday the male students extinguished lights and began screaming and throwing stones. When police were called in, the boys fled, while the girls took cover in their dormitories.

Following the strike, all 190 male students were sent home for a week but the girls were allowed to remain.

JAKARTA (JUNE 14) - PT International Nickel Indonesia (INCO), a Canadian nickel mining firm, announced Thursday that it was revising downwards its output forecasts for this year due to problems at its plant.

Nickel production for this year would only reach 70 million pounds (31,600 tons) instead of the forecast 80 million pounds (36,300 tons), the company said.

This was due to a planned partial shutdown of INCO's processing plant in Soroako on the northeastern island of Sulawesi in August for repairs, and also because construction in connection with an expansion program had fallen behind schedule, it said.

Supplementary power from a thermal power plant originally expected to support the plant's operation had now become unavailable, postponing further earlier projections of higher capacity, it added.

PT INCO owns and operates an integrated nickel mining and processing plant in Soroako with a capacity of 35,000 tons of nickel matte annually.

It is jointly owned by INCO Ltd of Canada, a consortium of six Japanese firms led by Sumitomo Metal Mining Company, and the Indonesian public.

BEIJING (JUNE 14) - Two Chinese were executed and a third condemned to death in different provinces of the country amid a nationwide crackdown on crime, press reports received here Thursday said.

The Yunnan Legal Daily dated June 8 said Huang Jianjun was sentenced to death for drug trafficking on May 26 by a people's intermediate court in the provincial capital of Kunming in southwest China, and executed the same day.

The Zhejiang Legal Daily reported that Jin Yinzhong had been shot May 17 at Jiaxing, in the north of the eastern province for embezzling 123,000 yuan (about 26,000 dollars) while a company accountant between 1984 and 1989.

Also in the east, the Anhui Legal Daily said that Zhang Yong, a bus driver, was recently sentenced to death in Hefei, the provincial capital, for causing the death of seven people while driving drunk.

The paper did not give the date of the sentence nor say if it had been carried out.

The Chinese authorities have been waging a harsh war on crime since the end of May, with dozens of executions reported from eastern and southern regions as well as the two main cities of Beijing and Shanghai.

SOFIA (JUNE 14) - The leader of the Bulgarian Socialist Party (BSP, ex-communist), Alexander Lilov, declared Thursday that he was "certain" that he would be able to form a broad-based coalition government.

Speaking at a press conference after the announcement of the official first round results gave the BSP 172 out of 400 seats in parliament, Mr. Lilov declared that "no matter what the percentage of our electoral success, we propose a coalition government of national cooperation because of the grave problems facing the country and the need for competent technicians."

Mr. Lilov said that he would be able to form a coalition government even if certain other principal parties rejected his offer, citing the existence of a broad range of political forces.

The BSP needs to win only 29 more seats in next Sunday's second round of voting to gain an absolute majority in parliament.

The opposition Union of Democratic Forces emerged with a total of 107 seats in the first round, while the Turkish minority Movement for Rights and Liberties took 21 seats and the Bulgarian Agrarian Party (BAP) 16.

Meanwhile, BAP President Viktor Valkov, who expressed disappointment with his party's disappointing showing in the first round, announced that the BAP would not participate in a two-party government with the BSP, but would consent to a role in a larger coalition which might include the former communist party.

Asked if the BSP would seek a coalition with the Turkish minority party, Mr. Lilov answered that "we will form a coalition government with all parties who support democracy, national integrity and prosperity."

He also announced that the PSB would hold a congress at the end of the year, and that changes in leadership would take place at all levels within the party following the elections.

Mr. Lilov said the BSP's success at the polls did not surprise him and he attributed the party's strong showing to "qualitative changes" which had been made within the organization after observing the errors made by other Eastern European ruling parties.

SIDON, LEBANON (JUNE 14) - Pro-Israeli militiamen waged fierce artillery duels with Lebanese and Palestinian fighters in southern Lebanon Thursday, police reported here.

There were no immediate reports of casualties in the shelling on the Kfarfalous front, 10 kilometers (six miles) east of this main southern port, which police said was the heaviest in almost two months.

The clashes pitted the pro-Israeli South Lebanon Army (SLA) against the People's Liberation Army, led by Sidon militia chief Mustapha Saad and grouping Palestinian and Lebanese from leftist and Moslem fundamentalist movements.

They came amid charges by Israel that Palestine Liberation Organisation leader Yasser Arafat is trying to extend his area of influence east of Sidon in an effort to create permanent Palestinian settlements there.

The Sidon area houses some 200,000 Palestinian refugees and is the only area in Lebanon where the PLO has an autonomous armed presence.

The SLA helps Israel control its self-declared "security zone" further south along the Lebanese-Israeli border.

During Thursday's fighting, which erupted in the morning and began dying down at noon, three tank shells crashed onto a road in the suburbs of Sidon near the Palestinian refugee camp of Ain Helwe, police said.

TOKYO (JUNE 14) - Nuclear energy will meet 43 percent of Japan's electricity needs by the year 2010, compared with 26.6 percent today, the Ministry of Trade and Industry (MITI) said in a report.

The report forecast that total electricity demand would increase by 66 per cent to 1,080 billion kilowatt-hours (kwh) in 20 years, of which nuclear power would provide 473 billion kwh. Demand in 1988 totalled 672 billion kwh.

The share of coal in electricity production was predicted to increase from nine percent to 15 percent in 2010, while that of oil would fall sharply from 29.2 percent to 10 percent.

In another report published earlier this month, MITI predicted a sharp increase in the use of nuclear power compared with Japan's total energy resources, from nine percent now to 16.7 percent.

It said that 40 more nuclear power plants would be needed on top of the 37 currently in service.

CAPE TOWN (JUNE 14) - South Africa hopes to replace its 13 percent General Sales Tax (GST) with a Value Added Tax by October 1, Deputy Finance Minister Org Marais told a press conference Thursday.

The new tax, of between 10 and 13 percent, was based on systems operating in Canada and New Zealand, he said.

International travel, financial and medical services, schooling, cars and houses would be zero-rated, he said.

But the current GST exemption on food staples like bread and meat would go.

Although the poor would end up paying 420 million rand (157 million dollars) more tax the extra revenue generated on food sales to the rich, who currently benefit from 82 percent of the exemption, would make money available for schemes targetting the poor, Mr. Marais said.

"We could spend a billion rand on adjusting social pensions and introducing feeding schemes and still show a profit for the treasury," he said.

Feeding schemes would target the aged, children and pregnant women, he said, adding that the rest of the money could be used to raise pensions and start training and job creation programmes.

"We already agree with the African National Congress and the Pan-Africanist Congress that priority number one is the poor people," he said.

"We agree with the ANC that if we don't tackle the poor problem no constitution is going to work."

The new tax would be spread over the production and distribution stages, reducing the burden on the consumer, who pays all of GST.

Sixty percent of the new tax would be collected before the final, consumption stage, so tax evasion would be more difficult.

It would also knock five percent off the price of South African exports, Mr. Marais said, helping to generate as much as an extra 1.5 percent growth per year.

SAO PAULO (JUNE 14) - Striking workers closed Brazil's largest oil refinery Thursday as labor protests against government austerity measures spread.

Some 60,000 oil workers went on strike nationwide against the state-run oil company Petrobras, halting work at the Paulinia refinery here, in protest at the announcement late Wednesday that 1,700 workers were being fired.

A spokesman for the strikers said the work stoppage would affect all Petrobras' 11 refineries in the country. The Paulinia complex produces 25 per cent of Brazil's refined petroleum products.

The oil industry's 19 labor unions had decided last week to go on strike if the governmente went ahead with its plans to reduce the work force as part of a broad austerity drive initiated in March by President Fernando Collor de Mello.

Some one million workers went on strike Wednesday all over the country in protest against dismissals and in demand of wage increases to offset Brazil's runaway inflation, which topped 166 percent for March and April.

Although participation was uneven, it was in the industrial belt surrounding Sao Paulo where the strike was most successful, union leaders said.

Workers complain of hardships caused by the austerity program introduced by Mr. Collor when he took office March 15.

Among other controversial measures, Mr. Collor imposed a wage-price freeze and prohibited bank withdrawals of more than 1,000 dollars in a bid to counter hyperinflation and prevent capital flight.

Plans to make state-run industries more efficient call for massive dismissals putting the new government on a collision course with labor unions.

BAGHDAD (JUNE 14) - Kurdish separatists claimed here Thursday to have killed 50 Iranian soldiers, captured another five and shot down a helicopter during an operation in Iranian Kurdistan.

The Democratic Party of Iranian Kurdistan, in a statement from its headquarters here, said four of its men were killed in the fighting which occurred June 6-10 in the northwestern regions of Piranchahr and Nagadah.

STRASBOURG (JUNE 14) - The European Commission appealed to the Romanian authorities Thursday to cease using violent methods, after several deaths were caused at Wednesday's anti-government demonstrations in Bucharest.

"The Commission is shocked and disappointed at the use of violence," Commissioner for regional policy Bruce Millan told Euro-MPs, warning that Romania jeopardised its chances of association with the Community unless it changed tack.

Community foreign ministers will discuss the Romanian crisis Monday in Luxembourg, where they are due to sign a trade agreement with Romania, as yet not finalised because of "technical translation difficulties".

Romania would be the last Warsaw Pact state to reach such a trade accord.

Britain called for the discussion of Wednesday's events in Bucharest, with Foreign Office minister William Waldegrave describing Romania's treatment of protestors as a "great over-reaction".

He said Romania could not expect favours afforded other Eastern European countries if it pursued a policy of seeking to crush opposition movements.

Mr. Millan said that the Community and a grouping of 24 western countries meeting early July on aid plans for Romania would be "following closely the situation in Romania in order to ensure that the basic conditions exist for cooperation and assistance which will bring concrete benefits to the Romanian people."

Countries wanting to benefit from such aid have to meet exacting criteria on human rights and political and economic liberalisation.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 14) - The all gold index on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange shed 94 points Thursday to close at 1,370 as the price of the metal dropped to 345 dollars an ounce in London.

Johann Liebenberg, senior general manager of external relations at the Chamber of Mines, representing the major gold producers, responded with a "guess ... that the price is now at or near the bottom of a trough."

But London analysts quoted by state-run television forecast a further drop to around 325 dollars an ounce, which would mean that mines already described as marginal would become loss-makers.

Gary Maude, managing director of Gengold, warned Wednesday that 3,000 miners' jobs were at risk, following announcements by Gengold and Anglovaal that 1,100 miners were to be made redundant this week.

Liebenberg also gave a veiled warning to the black National Union of Mineworkers, currently in dispute with the Chamber of Mines over the annual wage claim. He told state-run television the industry had to be "very, very careful about what we do to increase working costs."

At least half of South Africa's 31 gold mines are running at a loss on current prices, and a commission headed by Justice David Melamet starts work Monday to decide if the government should continue sponsoring the highly marginal East Rand Proprietary Mines (ERPM), east of here.

BARI (JUNE 14) - The Romanian team waited anxiously for news from Bucharest assuring them their families were safe before playing Cameroon in the World Cup here Thursday.

"We have been waiting anxiously for news for the last two days," said the Romanian team spokesman Ovidiu Ioanitoaia.

The players watched television coverage of the bloody crackdown on protestors in Bucharest.

"We tried to avoid talking about what was happening back home but it upset morale," said coach Emerich Jenei.

"The players were also overconfident after beating the Soviet Union. We started to play for a draw and got caught out," he added.

Gavrila Balint, who scored a late goal after Roger Milla's coule for the Africans, said they had been upset about what was happening in Romania.

"It was disturbing as we were so optimistic for the future after the December revolution," he said.

"Some players had been trying to contact their families and we only received a telegramme from our federation telling us everyone was alright just before the kick-off."

ALGIERS (JUNE 14) - The fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) has come out ahead in 55.42 percent of Algeria's 1,539 councils in local elections held earlier this week, Interior Minister Mohamed Salah Mohammadi announced late Thursday.

The ruling National Liberation Front (FLN) won 31.64 percent, he said.

The centrist Rally for Culture and Democracy (RCD) won 5.65 percent.

The turnout in voting for Tuesday's municipal elections was 75.15 percent and 64.15 percent for district elections held simultaneously, Mr. Mohammedi said.

The Islamic Salvation Front came in first in 32 of the country's 48 districts, or wilaya, and the FLN in 14, the minister said. The other two wilayas were won by the RCD and by an independent list.

CAGLIARI (JUNE 14) - The Netherlands flew into Sardinia on Thursday for their match with England looking relaxed and ready to put their dismal display against Egypt behind them.

Coach Leo Beenhakker promised a more incisive performance than their 1-1 draw in Palermo on Tuesday.

"That was a very bad match for us, but I am planning a few changes, one or two which I had in mind before the Egypt game," he said.

Beenhakker kept his distance from his squad, fuelling speculation that all is not well between them, but he showed no signs of strain.

"I don't feel under any pressure to get a result," he said confidently. "I have lived with pressure for 15 years and this is nothing new."

Ruud Gullit, still on his way back to full fitness after a year's absence through injury, echoed the coach's assessment of the Egypt match.

"It was very bad, but England didn't play very well against Ireland so we are both in the same position, we both need to win," he said.

"I can understand why you didn't see the best of England against Ireland, because of the links between them. It's like when Milan play Inter. But England have some very good players, players like Gary Lineker, and I'm expecting a tough game."

Ronald Koeman, another player subdued by the Egyptians, played down the reported rift between the players and Beenhakker.

"I don't understand why people want to make so much of this, just because things are not going right. There is no problem with the players and the coach."

ROME (JUNE 14) - Italy looked anything but World Cup favourites when they bumbled to a 1-0 win over the United States here on Thursday.

Their multi-million dollar strike force was bankrupt of ideas as to how to break down the bargain-priced American 11-man defence.

The 70,000 Italian fans filling the Olympic stadium had come to see a goal feast. Instead, they were served up a paltry portion -- a single goal and a missed penalty.

To add insult to injury the Americans, realising the Italians were going nowhere fast, nearly equalised Guiseppe Giannini's first half-goal in the 70th minute.

John Harkes hit a ferocious 30 metre free kick that a grasping Walter Zenga could only parry.

Peter Vermes got a toe to the loose ball but Riccardo Ferri was on the line to clear.

MANILA (JUNE 14) EFE - At least 50 people were killed by a powerful tornado that hit a town in the southern Philippines, and another 47 people were reported missing, officials said Thursday.

Most of the 50 bodies recovered were children who died when the giant twister smashed into their houses Tuesday in Manukan Town, 840 km southeast of Manila, the government-run Philippine Information Agency said.

It said only six of the fatalities have been identified by their relatives.

Joy Yumul, spokeswoman of the Department of Social Welfare, said the number of dead people is expected to increase because other remote villages were also affected.

"We are thinking that there are more casualties. We had reports that there are countless missing people in another village," Yumul told a radio station in Manila.

Yumul said 85 houses made of light materials were totally destroyed, 30 others were partially damaged. She said hundreds of families were affected because the whirlwind also caused a big river in the area to overflow.

Rescue and relief officials were still searching for survivors, she added.

BOGOTA (JUNE 14) EFE - Leaders of Colombia's Maoist People's Liberation Army (EPL) rebel group were to meet with government negotiators Thursday at a newly-designated "neutral zone" set up under a government peace plan, to continue 3-week-old talks.

"We are starting the process of regional detente," government peace negotiator Rafael Pardo Rueda said Wednesday when he announced that the EPL command would move to a small village in the Necocli region of the northwestern department of Cordoba.

The neutral zone resembles the Peace Citadel set up for the M-19 guerrilla movement during the peace process which led to it laying down arms to become a political party in March.

On May 23 the EPL signed an agreement to start negotiating an end to its 13-year-old insurgency under similar terms to those offered to the M-19.

Only one of the five Colombian guerrilla groups, the pro-Cuban National Liberation Army, has ruled out peace talks with the government.

SAN SALVADOR (JUNE 14) EFE - The next round of peace talks between the Salvadoran government and leftist rebels is to take place in Mexico on Monday and Tuesday, according to unconfirmed Salvadoran media reports.

The San Salvador daily El Mundo Wednesday cited unnamed government sources as saying that the talks would be held in Mexico.

Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari last week offered to host future Salvadoran peace talks during an official visit to the country by rightist Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani.

Meanwhile, the Canal 6 television network, also quoting unnamed officials, reported that the talks would take place Monday and Tuesday, but did not specify the location.

United Nations peace mediator Alvaro de Soto has been in San Salvador since Monday for meetings with leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) rebels and government representatives aimed at fixing the place and date of their next meeting.

At the last round of talks, held in Venezuela May 16 to 22, both sides agreed to seek a cease-fire by September.

More than 75,000 people have died in the 10-year-old civil war. Rights groups have blamed rightist death squads linked to the Armed Forces for half of the killings.

Venice had also been put forward as a possible host city but its candidacy was withdrawn by the Italian government because of environmental concerns.

Seville in Spain is to hold the next Expo show, in 1992.

FREETOWN (JUNE 14) EFE - Liberian rebel and government peace negotiators have called for an end to the killing of civilians in their second day of talks aimed at ending the country's six-month-old insurgency.

In a joint statement issued Wednesday night in the Sierre Leone capital where the talks are taking place, the government of President Samuel Doe and the National Patriotic Front (NPF) led by Charles Taylor, called for an end to "the massacres, and the destruction of property of civilians and non-combatants".

If the killing of "innocent" and "unarmed people" were ended, "it would contribute to strengthening the peace process which is currently being carried out successfully", the statement read.

Both parties to the talks agreed the negotiations were being carried out, "in a friendly, open and free atmosphere".

Liberian Information Minister Emmanuel Bowier, who forms part of the government's negotiating team, said Wednesday that the talks were being held between "friends, not enemies".

The NFP had earlier insisted that Doe should step down and leave the country as a condition for ending their six-month-old insurgency in which over 1,000 people have died.

Troops on both sides have been blamed for many civilian deaths in massacres of rival tribal groups.

Wednesday's statement follows calls earlier in the week by foreign diplomats in the Liberian capital of Monrovia for an end to "persistent and gratuitous violations of human rights".

Doe called for peace talks, which are being held near the U.S. embassy in Freetown, after Taylor's rebel troops came within 16 km of Monrovia last week.

Taylor began his rebellion last December after a failed military coup against Doe, whom he accuses of corruption and human rights abuses during his ten years in power.

MOSCOW (JUNE 14) EFE - The Soviet Union's Supreme Soviet was Thursday to debate a three-fold increase in the price of bread, which if approved will be the first step forward in President Mikhail Gorbachev's economic reform program.

The price of bread, the Soviet stable diet, has not increased since 1954.

The government originally wanted to treble the price of a loaf of bread on July 1 but the increase has been postponed and a new date is expected to be set on August 1.

Deputies have recently criticized Gorbachev's planned price rises, which will later affect other basic foodstuffs, and the Supreme Soviet only passed a motion Wednesday approving the general outline of his reforms after hours of argument.

The Supreme Soviet resolution gave Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov until September to come up with a series of concise plans for making the transition to a market economy within one year.

The announcement of the economic reform plan set off a wave of panic buying in Moscow last month with shoppers clearing store shelves of essential commodities.

Nine of the 15 Soviet republics have agreed to back the price hikes on the condition that Moscow takes measures to compensate the public two weeks before any increase takes effect.

MOSCOW (JUNE 14) EFE - An earthquake measuring between seven and eight points on the 12-point Mercalli scale struck the Soviet central Asian republic of Kazakhstan Thursday near the underground nuclear test site at Semipalatinsk.

There were no reports of death or damage but the Ministry of Defense put out a message through the Soviet news agency Tass, denying the quake had been caused by a nuclear test.

Local residents have been calling for the nuclear test facilities to be moved.

The epicenter of the quake was 50 km north of Zaisan, near the western borders of both China and Mongolia.

The Boston right-hander Wednesday night became the major leagues' first 11-game winner, carrying the Red Sox to a 4-1 victory over the Yankees in New York.

''Momentum comes your way when you are doing things right,'' he said. ''Every one goes at me harder since I won the Cy Young. I'm used to it.''

Clemens, 11-2, pitched six-hit ball over eight innings in posting his seventh straight victory. He walked none and struck out eight before giving way to Jeff Reardon, who picked up his ninth save. John Marzano provided the offensive support with four hits.

''We won, that's what counts,'' Clemens said. ''My fastball had pretty good velocity. Marzano, my rookie catcher, got four hits and stayed relaxed calling the game. He helped a lot. We went with the flow.''

Tim Leary, 3-8, went 8 2-3 innings and lost for the fourth consecutive time. He gave up nine hits, walking one and striking out six. Leary has received but 10 runs in his eight losses.

''Leary pitched a great game,'' Yankees Manager Stump Merrill said. ''We just don't get any runs for him. He gave a quality effort, but ran into a guy who pitched a little better.''

Boston moved ahead 2-1 in the fifth. Carlos Quintana singled, advanced to second on an infield out and to third on a single by Marzano. Wade Boggs then drove Quintana home, beating the relay at first after his grounder to second baseman Steve Sax forced Marzano. The Red Sox added two insurance runs in the ninth.

In other AL games, Oakland edged Texas 3-2, Chicago pounded Seattle 11-2, Milwaukee beat Baltimore 7-2, Detroit nipped Cleveland 5-4, Toronto dumped Minnesota 10-1 and Kansas City defeated California 11-4.

In the NL, it was: New York 15, Chicago 10 in the first game; New York 9, Chicago 6 in the second; Cincinnati 13, Atlanta 4; Montreal 4, Philadelphia 3; Pittsburgh 6, St. Louis 5; Houston 5, Los Angeles 1; and San Francisco 6, San Diego 0.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Thursday the basic U.S. money supply, narrowly defined under the name of M1, rose $4.3 billion in the latest reporting week. The broader M2 and M3 aggregates also rose.

M2 climbed $4.5 billion and M3 gained $6.8 billion.

M1, which is made up of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts - money that is available for immediate spending - rose to a seasonally adjusted average of $808.2 billion in the week ended June 4 from a revised $803.9 billion the week before.

Over the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $805.8 billion, a 4.1 percent rate of increase from the previous 13 weeks, the Fed reported.

M2 averaged an estimated $3,363.8 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $3,259.4 billion. M2 includes M1, passbook savings, small time deposits, including money market deposit accounts, consumer money market mutual funds and certain other short-term assets.

M3, which includes M2 plus large time deposits, repurchase agreements longer than one day at banks and thrifts and institutional money market funds, averaged $4,057.3 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $4,050.5 billion, the Fed said.

TOKYO (JUNE 14) KYODO - JAPAN IS LIKELY TO COMMIT ABOUT 450 TRILLION YEN TO PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING OVER A 10-YEAR PERIOD AS PART OF ITS PLAN TO EASE TRADE FRICTION WITH THE UNITED STATES, A SENIOR RULING PARTY LEADER SAID THURSDAY.

THE SIZE OF JAPAN'S PUBLIC WORKS INVESTMENT IS A KEY ISSUE IN THE YEAR-OLD STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII) TALKS BETWEEN TOKYO AND WASHINGTON AIMED AT EASING TRADE AND INVESTMENT BARRIERS IN BOTH COUNTRIES.

FORMER DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER SHIN KANEMARU SAID JAPANESE AND U.S. NEGOTIATORS ARE LIKELY TO SETTLE EVENTUALLY ON THE 450 TRILLION YEN SUM.

THE NEGOTIATORS ARE SCHEDULED TO MEET IN TOKYO ON JUNE 24-25 TO THRASH OUT A FINAL REPORT ON THE PROGRESS OF SII, WHICH IS DUE OUT IN JULY.

JAPAN AGREED UNDER THE TERMS OF AN INTERIM SII REPORT RELEASED IN APRIL TO GIVE A SPECIFIC AMOUNT ON THE SIZE OF JAPAN'S PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING OVER THE NEXT 10 YEARS.

REFERRING TO A FINANCE MINISTRY ESTIMATE THAT JAPAN CAN ONLY AFFORD TO SPEND 415 TRILLION YEN FOR PUBLIC WORKS PROJECTS OVER THE NEXT 10 YEARS, KANEMARU SAID THE FINANCE MINISTRY PROJECTION IS "THE WORST CASE."

THE FINAL AGREEMENT IN JULY "WOULD ONLY EXCEED THAT AND NOT BE BELOW," HE SAID.

"I THINK THE FINANCE MINISTRY WOULD DECIDE ON AROUND 450 TRILLION YEN," KANEMARU SAID IN AN ADDRESS TO A GROUP OF HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY LEADERS.

KANEMARU, WHO WIELDS STRONG INFLUENCE WITHIN THE RULING PARTY, IS THE FIRST LDP POLITICIAN TO CITE A SPECIFIC AMOUNT ON PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING.

A SENIOR FINANCE MINISTRY OFFICIAL SAID KANEMARU'S FIGURE IS "A LITTLE BIT TOO HIGH," BUT IMPLIED A POSSIBLE BOOST OF THE FIGURE FROM 415 TRILLION YEN TO MAKE IT CLOSER TO KANEMARU'S FIGURE.

FOREIGN MINISTER TARO NAKAYAMA TOLD REPORTERS THURSDAY JAPAN REMAINS COMMITTED TO THE STANCE TAKEN LAST APRIL IN THE SII INTERIM REPORT ON A COMPREHENSIVE PLAN FOR INCREASED INVESTMENT IN THE INFRASTRUCTURE.

NAKAYAMA IS SCHEDULED TO MEET U.S. SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES BAKER IN SAN FRANCISCO ON FRIDAY.

ON THE U.S. DEMAND FOR GREATER JAPANESE PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING AS PART OF SII REQUESTS, KANEMARU SAID ROADS AND THE SEWERAGE SYSTEM WOULD LONG REMAIN AS NATIONAL ASSETS IN NEED OF PUBLIC FUNDING AND THAT EXPRESSWAY NETWORKS WERE ALSO URGENTLY NEEDED TO AVOID FURTHER CONGESTION.

"SO NOW THE FINANCE MINISTRY SHOULD NOT BE STINGY ON THIS," HE SAID, STRESSING THE NEED FOR GREATER PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING WHICH HE SAID WOULD BENEFIT THE JAPAN-U.S. RELATIONS.

THE FINANCE MINISTRY HAS SAID ITS PROJECTION IS EQUIVALENT TO 8 PERCENT OF JAPAN'S GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT, BUT KANEMARU, QUOTING CALCULATIONS BY THE CONSTRUCTION MINISTRY, SAID THE FIGURE SHOULD BE 500 TRILLION YEN, AND NOT 415 TRILLION YEN AS STATED BY THE FINANCE MINISTRY.

TOKYO (JUNE 14) KYODO - TAIWAN HAS DECIDED TO REGULATE IMPORTS FROM JAPAN IN A BID TO SLASH ITS MASSIVE TRADE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN, SOURCES FAMILIAR WITH JAPAN-TAIWAN TRADE SAID THURSDAY.

THE MEASURES, TO BE TAKEN BY TAIWAN'S MINISTRY OF ECONOMIC AFFAIRS, WILL FEATURE INCENTIVES TO DISCOURAGE PRIVATE FIRMS FROM PURCHASING MACHINERY

AND A BAN ON BIDDING BY THE JAPANESE FOR PUBLIC WORKS PROJECTS, THE SOURCES SAID.

THEY ALSO CALL FOR ANTIDUMPING DUTIES ON IMPORTS FROM JAPAN WHEN SUCH IMPORTS ARE FOUND TO BE SOLD BELOW FAIR MARKET VALUE, THE SOURCES NOTED.

TAIWANESE TRADING HOUSES IMPORTING CONSUMER GOODS FROM JAPAN WILL ALSO BE REQUIRED TO IMPORT SUCH GOODS FROM THE UNITED STATES AND EUROPEAN NATIONS, THEY SAID.

IN THE MEANTIME, TAIWAN INTENDS TO EXPAND EXPORTS TO JAPAN WITH SUPPORT FROM JAPANESE TRADING HOUSES, THE SOURCES ADDED.

TAIWAN'S TRADE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN INCREASED IN 1989 FOR THE FOURTH STRAIGHT YEAR, AMOUNTING TO 6,964.9 MILLION DOLLARS.

TO HALT THE TREND, TAIWAN TRIED TO BOOST EXPORTS TO JAPAN LAST YEAR, BUT THE ATTEMPT HAS SO FAR PROVED INSUFFICIENT, GIVING RISE TO A VIEW IN TAIWAN THAT JAPAN LACKS THE WILL TO RECTIFY THE TRADE IMBALANCE.

THE NEW TAIWANESE MEASURES COME AT A TIME WHEN MANY TAIWANESE ARE UPSET OVER A REVISION OF JAPANESE LAW THAT TOOK EFFECT JUNE 1 ABOLISHING A CLAUSE ALLOWING TAIWANESE TO STAY IN JAPAN UP TO 72 HOURS WITHOUT VISAS.

BUT THE SOURCES DENIED THE POSSIBILITY THAT TAIWAN DEVISED THE IMPORT-RESTRICTING MEASURES IN PROTEST AGAINST THIS, SAYING THE MEASURES ARE SOLELY INTENDED TO CUT THE TRADE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN.

OSAKA (JUNE 14) KYODO - A THINK TANK AFFILIATED TO NIPPON LIFE INSURANCE CO. (NISSEI) SAID THURSDAY IT EXPECTS JAPAN'S GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT (GNP) TO GROW BY 5.2 PERCENT IN THE CURRENT FISCAL YEAR, ENDING NEXT MARCH, SUPPORTED BY VIGOROUS CONSUMPTION AND CAPITAL SPENDING, UP 0.3 PERCENTAGE POINT FROM FISCAL 1989'S ESTIMATED 4.9 PERCENT.

THE FIGURE REPRESENTS A 0.7 POINT UPWARD REVISION FROM ITS FORECAST IN NOVEMBER.

THE "TRIPLE SLUMP" PHENOMENON -- THE YEN'S WEAKNESS, HIGH OIL PRICES AND INTEREST RATE HIKES -- WILL ACT AS A BRAKE ON GROWTH, AN ANALYST AT THE THINK TANK SAID.

SO FAR THIS YEAR, ECONOMIC RESEARCH INSTITUTIONS HAVE ANNOUNCED A CONSERVATIVE GNP GROWTH RATE OF 3 TO 4 PERCENT, TAKING INTO ACCOUNT THE "TRIPLE SLUMP" PHENOMENON.

IN LATE MAY, HOWEVER, THE RESEARCH INSTITUTE ON THE NATIONAL ECONOMY ESTIMATED GNP-BASED ECONOMIC GROWTH AT 5.0 PERCENT.

BUT NISSEI'S FORECAST IS STRONGER STILL. ACCORDING TO NISSEI, PERSONAL CONSUMPTION WILL SHOW A HIGH 4.7 PERCENT GAIN FAVORED BY THE DISAPPEARANCE OF THE INITIAL EFFECTS OF THE CONSUMPTION TAX AND BY A HEALTHY WAGE INCREASE IN THE SPRING LABOR OFFENSIVE.

VIGOROUS PERSONAL CONSUMPTION IS THEREFORE EXPECTED TO BE THE DRIVING FORCE BEHIND ECONOMIC GROWTH, THE ANALYST SAID.

THE THINK TANK ALSO PREDICTS THAT CAPITAL SPENDING WILL MAINTAIN A HIGH LEVEL OF GROWTH AT 7.9 PERCENT ON THE ASSUMPTION THAT THE EXCHANGE RATE WILL STAY AT A STABLE LEVEL OF 150 YEN AGAINST THE DOLLAR, WITH INTEREST RATES CONTINUING AT THE CURRENT LEVEL.

TOKYO (JUNE 14) KYODO - PROSECUTORS THURSDAY ARRESTED FOUR EXECUTIVES OF A LEADING AERIAL SURVEY FIRM ON SUSPICION OF SPECULATIVE SALES OF THE COMPANY'S OWN STOCKS BUT INFORMED SOURCES SAID ABOUT 20 MORE EXECUTIVES OF THE COMPANY WERE ALSO INVOLVED.

AMONG THE EXECUTIVES -- ALL MIDDLE-LEVEL MANAGERS -- OF KOKUSAI KOGYO CO. WAS ONE WHO MADE A 15 MILLION YEN WINDFALL PROFIT BY SELLING THE COMPANY'S STOCKS.

THEY TOOK THE ACTION WHEN THEIR PRICE SOARED DURING A STOCK-BUYING BATTLE WITH ANOTHER COMPANY SEEKING TO CORNER THE COMPANY'S SHARES, ACCORDING TO INFORMED SOURCES AND INTERNAL DOCUMENTS MADE AVAILABLE TO KYODO NEWS SERVICE.

KOKUSAI KOGYO PLUNGED INTO THE PURCHASE BATTLE FOR ITS OWN STOCKS AGAINST THE KOSHIN GROUP, A GROUP OF SPECULATORS, AROUND JUNE 1987 WHEN NORIO ISHIBASHI, ONE OF THE FOUR ARRESTED THURSDAY, BOUGHT FIVE MILLION STOCKS THROUGH ANOTHER FIRM.

THE KOSHIN GROUP LAUNCHED A SCHEME TO CORNER SHARES IN KOKUSAI KOGYO AROUND MAY 1987 AND BOUGHT ABOUT 17 MILLION SHARES OR 43 PERCENT OF ITS ENTIRE ISSUE WITHIN A TWO-MONTH PERIOD.

THE SHARES OF KOKUSAI KOGYO SOARED FROM 2,000 YEN IN MAY THAT YEAR TO 7,000 YEN IN OCTOBER, PARTLY AS A RESULT OF THE BUYOUT BID FROM KOSHIN.

THE SOURCES SAID THE 20 OR SO KOKUSAI KOGYO EXECUTIVES STARTED TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE KOKUSAI-KOSHIN STOCK-BUYING BATTLE IN JULY THAT YEAR AND BOUGHT BETWEEN 1,000 AND 5,000 SHARES EACH.

THESE EXECUTIVES WERE ALL CONNECTED TO ISHIBASHI, OR WORKING FOR HIROMITSU HAMAGUCHI, A FORMER BOARD DIRECTOR AND ACCOUNTING MANAGER WHO WAS ALSO ARRESTED THURSDAY.

INFORMED SOURCES SAID TAX AUTHORITIES APPEAR TO BE AWARE OF THE INTRA-FIRM STOCK DEALS BY THE OTHER 20 OR SO OFFICIALS.

THE TOKYO PUBLIC PROSECUTORS OFFICE ARRESTED THE FOUR KOKUSAI OFFICIALS ON SUSPICION OF EVADING 910 MILLION YEN IN TAX AFTER MAKING 1.5 BILLION YEN THROUGH THE SALE OF KOKUSAI STOCKS.

THE OTHER TWO EXECUTIVES ARRESTED THURSDAY ARE YOSHINORI WAKISAKA, A FORMER SALES MANAGER, AND EIJI SAKAE, PRESIDENT OF A KOKUSAI KOGYO SUBSIDIARY.

ISHIBASHI ALSO ALLEGEDLY EVADED TAXES ON HUGE PROFITS HE MADE THROUGH INSIDER TRADING IN 1981, THE SOURCES SAID. AT THAT TIME, INSIDER TRADING WAS NOT ILLEGAL.

INVESTIGATORS CONFISCATED SEVERAL HUNDRED BOXES OF DOCUMENTS THE SAME DAY AFTER RAIDING 20 LOCATIONS IN TOKYO, INCLUDING THE HOME OF KOSHIN GROUP PRESIDENT MITSUHIRO KOTANI.

FROM THE BULLS:

ROBERT O'TOOLE of SHEARSON LEHMAN says the market is still steaming ahead. "Money is still coming in. There aren't any sellers in the market so far. And the news is bullish because retail sales were lower than expected. That means it's good for inflation, and 1 interest rates will probably come down." (CNBC "Business View", 6/13)

"I think things are nicely positioned here to move higher without the need for a sustained pullback," says EUGENE PERONI JR. of JANNEY, MONTGOMERY, SCOTT. "Some pullback I think would be good - it would help to keep the balance of psychology in check - but as far as a big correction from here, I just don't see it." (CNBC "Business View", 6/13)

FROM THE BEARS:

"A great degree of strength [in the market] is the program buying, tending to bootstrap the market higher," says DAVID BOSTIAN JR., the chief economist at JESUP & LAMONT. "That tends to put psychological pressure on the money managers" to turn some of their cash into stocks as the market heads up. Mr. Bostian says recent developments around the world are likely to create a good market in the long term. "But there's only a small chance that this is the beginning of that move." This market's "program trading and window dressing explain most of the momentum," he says, "as opposed to a real fundamental conviction that it's time to buy stocks." He adds, "The market could burn itself out when people least expect it." (NYT, 6/14)

STOCK MARKET:

"Anything that affects interest rates - anything that will make them go down - will make the market go up," says LOU EHRENKRANTZ of EHRENKRANTZ & KING. "And there's a strong belief now that interest rates will come down finally. I think when the good news comes out, the market will rally further on a spike upward. At that point, after the interest rates come down finally, I think it will be time to do a lot of selling because eventually this market has to come back to reality. The reason interest rates are coming down is because business is terrible." (CNBC "Business View", 6/13)

"I think it was natural for many investors to be cautious due to the upcoming economic data," says JACK SOLOMON of BEAR, STEARNS & CO. "The market appears to be showing a see-saw tendency with an upward bias." ("Investor's Daily", 6/14)

MONTE GORDON of the DREYFUS CORP. attributes yesterday's choppy market action to the fact that "people don't want any surprises at this point, they're waiting for the Thursday and Friday [inflation] numbers. This is a market that's still fragile and vulnerable to surprises." ("USA Today", 6/14)

"I think the market is paying its respects to these multiple unknowns Thursday and Friday," says ALFRED GOLDMAN, director of technical research at A.G. EDWARDS. (Reuters, 6/13)

"I think what you saw [Wednesday] was an unwinding of positions going in both directions, a lot of sitting on the sidelines and a fair amount of window dressing," says EDWARD NICOSKI, technical research chief at PIPER, JAFFRAY & HOPWOOD. Mr. Nicoski notes that financial stocks were not gaining as they usually do if investors think the producer price index and the consumer price index will show moderate inflation, bolstering the case for lower interest rates. "If the market were to roll from here based on the PPI and the CPI, I think financial stocks should be doing better." (NYT, 6/14)

"It's decent breadth, but it's not investment stampede breadth," says ROBERT FARRELL, chief market analyst for MERRILL LYNCH. He says the spring rally looks more like the late stages of an old bull market than the early stages of a new one. Mr. Farrell says he would like to see volume of more than 180 million shares daily for a sustained period to give him more confidence that the current advance will last. (WSJ, 6/14)

"The volume and some of the divergences we're seeing indicates that the stock market's rally may be waning and we could begin to see some backing-and-filling action," says DAVE ALLMAN, director of research with the "Elliott Wave Theorist" newsletter. "The mid-2900 area of the Dow is a critical resistance zone. There's a possibility the stock market could be putting in a top in this area. If the Dow were to break out through the 2950 area with daily volume surging to 300 million shares or more, then there is a good chance the Dow could surge to around 3600 this year." ("Investor's Daily", 6/14)

"I think secondary stocks are finding their own way," says WILLIAM SULYA, director of over-the-counter trading at A.G. EDWARDS & SON in St. Louis. "Business [in OTC trading] in general is much better than it was in the first quarter." (WSJ, 6/14)

STOCK TIPS:

ETHYL CORP. is in the "Company Spotlight" this morning in "USA Today." Much of the interest in the company's stock stems from a product called HiTEC 3000, a gasoline additive awaiting Environmental Protection Agency approval. The new product is said to boost octane and reduce exhaust emissions at the same time. PRUDENTIAL-BACHE analyst LEONARD BOGNER says average annual earnings gains between 1991 and 1995 should be about 13% without the additive winning approval and 19% if it does. He rates the stock a buy in any case, "but with HiTEC, the stock could double in two years." ("USA Today", 6/14)

EUGENE PERONI of JANNEY, MONTGOMERY, SCOTT says it's not too late to participate in this rally, especially if one focuses on big cap issues. Peroni's favorites include BOEING, TRIPLE M, MOTOROLA, PROCTER & GAMBLE and PHILIP MORRIS. (CNBC "Business View", 6/13)

PRUDENTIAL-BACHE SECURITIES INC., DEAN WITTER REYNOLDS, MONTGOMERY SECURITIES and SOUNDVIEW FINANCIAL GROUP all lowered their earnings estimates for TANDEM COMPUTERS for the fiscal quarter ending in June. As a result the stock fell 5/8 on Tuesday and another 5/8 on Wednesday to end at 24 3/8. (WSJ, 6/14)

MARIA RAMIREZ, president of RAMIREZ CAPITAL CONSULTANTS, likes three global, diversified consumer goods companies: GILLETTE, REEBOK and NIKE. "They are very well positioned for the kind of increase in demand we will see in Europe and other parts of the world." (CNN "Business Day", 6/14)

SEAGULL ENERGY added 1 5/8 to 28 3/8 yesterday as OPPENHEIMER & CO. and ROBERT W. BAIRD & CO. reiterated buy recommendations on the stock in response to the company's signing a letter of intent to buy WACKER OIL for about $77 million. (WSJ, 6/14)

With the U.S. FISH AND WILDLIFE OFFICE ready to issue 4.8 million 1990 duck stamps this month, "USA Today" says "the lowly duck" might be a good "fowl weather investment." "If somebody had bought stamps every year from 1934, they'd have expended about $180, but the collection would be worth about $4,000," says NORMA OPGRAND, chief of the stamp program. "I would encourage anybody to buy a federal duck stamp." ("USA Today", 6/14)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 14) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

WILLIAM MIKUS of SALOMON BROTHERS said the dollar could be vulnerable to a decline depending on producer prices and consumer prices. "If it shows there is still an inflationary problem, bonds fall and the dollar falls." Mikus says he is still bullish on the dollar longer term, but "I would buy at slightly lower levels" than seen on Wednesday. (Reuters, 6/13)

CHARLES LIEBERMAN, a managing director at MANUFACTURERS HANOVER SECURITIES CORP., says that before the news on declining retail sales yesterday "investors had pretty much accepted the statements by Fed officials that the central bank has no intention of easing policy in the future. Now, it's re-emerged as a good possibility." (WSJ, 6/14)

"The data on retail revenue Wednesday was cause for some concern at the Fed," says MITCHELL HELD, chief financial economist at SMITH BARNEY, HARRIS UPHAM & CO. "But I think the Fed will wait for another month, until after it sees the reports on June prices, before it takes any action" to lower interest rates. ("USA Today", 6/14)

"We are almost back in the best of all worlds with imminent easing," says one bond dealer, expecting the Fed to act sometime after the next Federal Open Market Committee meeting in July. For now, the market will have to contend with inflation data later this week. Inflation has been seen as the one hurdle to easier credit. (Reuters, 6/13)

"The economy is weakening. Inflation is coming down, but not sufficiently for the Fed to start easing aggressively at this very moment," says HEIKO THIEME of DEUTSCHE BANK CAPITAL. "For the second half [of the year] we'll see better growth with lower interest rates - I call for long-term rates to go below 8% - and you now have to be very selective in the stock market." (CNBC "Business View", 6/13)

"You have to wonder how much of the [bond] rally was in anticipation of good [inflation] numbers," says JAY GOLDINGER of CAPITAL INSIGHT in Los Angeles. "But you had better keep an eye behind you. If the news isn't as good as the market expects, we could see it fall." ("USA Today", 6/14)

"It's been an astounding day," DAVID FEINMAN, a junk bond trader at

JEFFERIES & CO, says of yesterday's trading in RJR NABISCO bonds. "This is the way it used to be in terms of trading volume and action." (WSJ, 6/14)

Bonds will rally with the risk of a recession forcing the Fed to ease credit over the summer, says LAWRENCE LEUZZI, bond analyst for S.G. WARBURG. Leuzzi says the rally will be sharpest in the shorter-dated 2-5 year issues. Price increases in longer-term bonds will be muted by lingering concerns about inflation, the federal budget deficit and a weaker dollar. "We probably will see a recession," says Leuzzi. "The economy is going through a period where we have lost significant momentum ... the consumer is growing cautious." (CNN "Business Morning", 6/14)

"The evidence is building that the economy is weaker," says EDWARD HYMAN JR., vice chairman at C.J. LAWRENCE MORGAN GRENFELL INC. "The most important thing the bond market is piecing together is that the unusual weakness we have seen in employment, money growth and retail sales over the past three months suggests that we might also see an unusual slowdown in inflation." (NYT, 6/14)

THE ECONOMY:

"The recessionary threat has eased," says MONTE GORDON of the DREYFUS CORP. "What I think is beginning to emerge is that the sluggishness of the economy is a little bit heavier, so the economy is a little more turgid than people had thought, and it will continue that way for a little bit longer." He believes that with this sluggishness the economy is cleansing itself of the speculative excesses without going through a recession and without the Fed easing. (FNN's "Marketwrap", 6/13)

RICHARD BERNER of SALOMON BROTHERS says that while the latest retail sales figures "paint a picture of sluggish consumer spending," they probably overstated the severity of decline in retail sales. He observed that exceptionally warm weather early in the year may have "stolen" sales from the spring and predicted that the May figures would be revised upward substantially, as occurred in May 1989. (NYT, 6/14)

JANET MANGANO of JOSEPHTHAL & CO. reports the drop in retail sales was "really a washout for most of the retailers. On the contrary, stocks of retailers like WAL-MART continue to hit new highs on a daily basis." These selective stocks are doing well despite the fact the numbers indicate consumer spending is down. "What [retail sales] does project is a slowdown in consumer spending. Three months in a row is very significant and the durable good numbers have been weak for at least a whole year, so there is a slowdown in the consumer sector." (CNBC "Business View" and "Nightly Business Report", 6/13)

"After the weak employment numbers we've seen, a decline in retail sales means the economy continues to be weak and raises concern about recession

" says SUNG WON SOHN, chief economist at NORWEST CORP. in Minneapolis. (WSJ, 6/14)

Retail sales "was a grim number indeed," says DONALD STRASZHEIM, chief economist at MERRILL LYNCH, suggesting it was now "very possible" that the Fed would cut interest rates even before the next scheduled meeting of its policy-making Federal Open Market Committee on July 2. (NYT, 6/14)

"I think it's clearly going to put some pressure on profits," says MONROE GREENSTEIN of BEAR, STEARNS, regarding the slowdown in consumer spending. "Already I think second quarter earnings estimates for retail companies are going to be coming down, and later this year you'll be up against some very tough comparisons. So, I think you've already seen the peak rate of improvement in profits at the retail level." ("Nightly Business Report", 6/13)

The May CPI figures will reflect an increase in energy prices and an upturn in medical prices, says DAVID WYSS of DATA RESOURCES. "I don't think the Fed is going to be very happy and I see no change in monetary policy." (Reuters, 6/13)

"The Fed is engaged in an experiment to bring down inflation without the usual device of triggering a recession that wrings things out. its normal cold turkey way out of inflation," says DAVID JONES of AUBREY G. LANSTON adding, "It would be too easy to stumble into a depression." (Reuters, 6/13)

Savings and loan companies will cease to exist as a separate industry, says PETER TREADWAY, savings and loan analyst at SMITH BARNEY. With 1700 of the country's 2800 S&L's expected to go under, Treadway says there's no reason to have a S&L industry regulated separately from banks. "The healthier thrifts are dying to become banks, anyway," according to Treadway who says many have changed their names to include "bank" in the title. (CNBC "World Business", 6/14)

IN WASHINGTON:

The SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION is seeking comments on whether an overhaul is in order for the 50-year-old Investment Company Act that regulates the mutual fund industry. "After half a century of service, it certainly is timely to review whether we can enhance the safety and soundness [of the act]," says SEC CHAIRMAN RICHARD BREEDEN. ("USA Today", 6/14)

U.S. TRADE REPRESENTATIVE CARLA HILLS says the Bush administration has decided against imposing trade sanctions on India for its barriers to foreign investment and insurance sales. ("The Washington Post", 6/14)

JAMES LOCKHART, head of the federal PENSION BENEFIT GUARANTY CORP., says looming business failures of a handful of big corporations could leave the insurance fund with an $8 billion deficit. ("The Washington Post", 6/14)

ORANGE, CALIF. (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Bergen Brunswig Corp. (AMEX: BBC) today reported record results for the third quarter and nine months ended May 31, 1990.

Net sales and other revenues for the quarter ended May 31, 1990, increased 16 percent to $1,142 million from $987 million for the comparable quarter last year. Net earnings of $21.3 million compare to $13.5 million in the prior year quarter. The 1990 results include a $3.5 million extraordinary gain from early debt retirement equal to $.08 per share. Fully diluted earnings per share of $.57 compare to $.44 in the prior year quarter.

For the nine months ended May 31, 1990, net sales and other revenues were $3.3 billion compared to $2.9 billion, a 13 percent increase.

Net earnings of $51.5 million equal to $1.43 per fully diluted share compare to $36.9 million and $1.32 per share in the 1989 period.

Emil P. Martini Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, said, "Bergen Brunswig Drug Company continued to produce strong sales and earnings growth in the quarter. The combination of gross profit contribution from the sales increase and operating expense efficiencies were the principal factors in the earnings improvement."

For the quarter ended May 31, 1990, Commtron Corporation, Bergen Brunswig's approximately 80 percent-owned home entertainment distribution subsidiary, reported an increase in revenues of 12 percent to $144.4 million compared to $128.7 million for the year ago quarter and net earnings of $2.3 million compared to $1.6 million. Contributing to Commtron's results were strong sell- through video sales, operating expense efficiencies, and improved working capital management.

WEST DES MOINES, IOWA (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Commtron Corporation (AMEX: CMR) today reported improved results for the third fiscal quarter ended May 31, 1990.

For the quarter, net earnings rose 39.0 percent to $2.3 million or $0.23 per share compared to $1.6 million or $0.16 per share last year. Revenues increased 12.2 percent to $144.4 million compared to $128.7 million for the year-ago quarter. For the nine months, net earnings rose 17.2 percent to $7.2 million or $0.71 per share compared to $6.2 million or $0.61 per share last year. Revenues increased slightly to $434.6 million compared to $421.6 million a year ago.

Home video revenues grew 20.0 percent to $117.5 million, reflecting strong sell-through sales of Disney's "Honey I Shrunk The Kids" and "The Little Mermaid" and rental titles such as RCA/Columbia's "Look Who's Talking." Consumer electronics revenues were $26.9 million, down 12.4 percent from $30.7 million as a result of lower demand for entertainment, office and communications equipment.

Improved working capital management more than offset lower gross margin which resulted from higher unit volume of competitively-priced sell-through titles.

Robert Martini, Vice Chairman and President, commented: "We are pleased with Commtron's continued ability to move with the changing dynamics in home video and strengthen profits."

Commtron Corporation is the nation's largest distributor of prerecorded videocassettes and a national distributor of consumer electronics.

CHATSWORTH, CA (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Diodes Inc. (AMEX: DIO), a full-line semiconductor rectifier supplier, today announced unaudited revenues and earnings results for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended April 30, 1990. Revenues for the year were $12,843,287, a 7 percent decline from revenues of $13,795,277 for the prior year. Net earnings showed a loss of $382,421 compared with a loss of $2,913,151 for fiscal year 1989.

Revenues for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 were $3,399,563, an increase of almost 10 percent over revenues of $3,101,638 recorded in the corresponding period of the prior year. Net after-tax earnings were $114,110, or 2.5 cents per share, compared with a loss of $2,974,199 in the fourth quarter of the prior year.

In commenting on the announcement, David Lloyd, president and chief executive officer, stated: "The decline in revenues in fiscal 1990 reflected slowness in the marketplace during the early part of the year. Profits were impacted adversely by certain non-recurring expenses. These included settlement of a lawsuit as well as additional expenses related to our NAE subsidiary which were not accrued in the prior year. But for these non-recurring expenses, the year would have shown a small net profit.

"We are very encouraged that our efforts during fiscal 1990 have now returned the company to profitability in the fourth quarter. Billings and bookings in this period showed significant improvement compared with last year -- the book to bill ratio for the fourth quarter was 1.17. Our backlog has been improving steadily over the past two quarters and we expected this to continue in the future. It is now at an all-time high. Projected revenues for the first quarter of fiscal 1991 show improvement over fourth quarter results. Based on performance to date, first quarter fiscal 1991 earnings are expected to exceed the 1990 fourth quarter results reported here. We are now beginning to ship several new products including transient voltage suppressors for which we estimate the total U.S. market to be about $600 million. Our Taiwan manufacturing facility is expanding its operations into these areas and customer acceptance of these new products has been excellent."

"The market for our multi-media videographics products remains strong and we continue to build market share. Several major corporations have recently elected to use our products as part of multi-media systems under development. However, it is important to note that as the market for our

Net income for the 12 weeks totaled $8,267,000, equal to 36 cents per share, compared with $7,349,000 or 33 cents per share a year ago. Fourth quarter revenues were $135,212,000, up from $124,810,000 in the prior year.

For the 52 weeks, net income amounted to $31,526,000, equal to $1.39 per share, compared with $28,495,000 or $1.27 per share in fiscal 1989. Revenues were $560,677,000, compared with $541,654,000 one year earlier, which included $18,953,000 from Gino's East of Chicago and Ed Debevic's Inc. On the basis of continuing operations, revenues for the year were 7 percent higher than a year ago.

Sizzler and the International Division posted higher sales and income for the fiscal year while Kentucky Fried Chicken was lower.

"Sizzler's average restaurant sales were essentially unchanged from the prior year on slightly lower customer counts. In addition, higher food costs and labor costs associated with the roll-out of the new Buffet Court & Grill restrained profit growth in the fourth quarter.

The board of directors declared the regular cash dividend of five cents per share, payable July 16, 1990, to shareholders of record June 27, 1990.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - System-wide sales, revenues and earnings of Sizzler Restaurants International Inc. (NASDAQ: SIZZ) rose to new highs in the fiscal year ended April 30, 1990, Thomas L. Gregory, president and chief executive officer, announced today.

System-wide sales (which consist of sales from both company- operated and franchised restaurants) grew 8 percent to $916,748,000. Net income per share increased 9 percent on a 7 percent improvement in revenues.

Net income for the year totaled $22,736,000, equal to $1.37 per share, compared to $21,184,000 or $1.26 per share in the prior year. Revenues were $333,519,000 compared to $311,490,000 in fiscal 1989.

Tom Gregory noted that "We were pleased to continue our record of annually increasing sales and earnings. However, the environment was challenging and competitive. Average restaurant sales were essentially unchanged from the prior year on slightly lower customer counts. In addition, higher food and labor costs associated with the roll-out of our new Buffet Court & Grill restrained profit growth in the fourth quarter."

For the 12 weeks ended April 30, 1990, net income was $5,733,000, equal to 35 cents per share, compared with $5,880,000, or 35 cents per share one year ago. He continued: "The new Buffet Court & Grill represents another step in the continuing evolution of our highly successful salad bar. Several new food stations -- an appetizer bar, a deli bar for lunch and a desert bar -- are offered, providing customers with very high value. The sales response has been favorable. However, the higher costs associated with the roll-out will continue for some time as we enhance our operation of the new concept.

As of April 30, 1990, Sizzler Restaurants International Inc. operated 662 restaurants, consisting of 207 company-operated and 455 franchised units.

OAKBROOK, IL (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - "There is no domestic issue today of greater urgency than the education of our children," Kay R. Whitmore, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Eastman Kodak Company (NYSE: EK) said at the 1990 Distinguished Citizens Luncheon award ceremonies here today.

"Business has an important and pivotal role to play in the education process," Whitmore said.

He spoke of motivation as the key to learning and mentioned the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry's Youth Motivation Program, which reaches nearly 50,000 students in 50 Chicago area high schools, and Young Life, a Christian Youth Program designed to motivate high school students. Kodak's Oakbrook office works with both of these organizations.

According to Whitmore, industry too often takes the easy way and simplifies jobs. "This only makes our organizations mindless and less flexible," he said. In the information age, this is nothing short of a prescription for disaster and a sure formula not only for lower intelligence, but for a lower standard of living.

"You can't talk about motivation without talking about standards," Whitmore said. "If we set low standards, we can only expect low capability."

Whitmore said that business people must raise standards and must work with school systems to help define elevated entry-level standards."

He said that the answer to the question "How do we do that?" is coalition building between business and organizations like the Boy Scouts, the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry, and other organizations that are capable of raising the sights of young people.

Also speaking at the luncheon was NFL Hall of Fame member Alan Page. Last year, Kodak and Page formed a partnership with the Council of Great City Schools to promote higher education. The Kodak/Alan Page Challenge, a nationwide essay contest offered 500,000 fourth-graders in 44 of the largest urban school districts across the USA, a trip to Hawaii for the 1990 Pro Bowl for writing the best essay on the topic: "With an education, the future is yours."

DETROIT (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - A Toyota forklift truck is hard at work at the "official" workhorse of the Detroit Grand Prix.

Working some 20 hours a day behind the scenes, this single Toyota forklift is handling the heavy lift needs for moving materials and supplies for a multitude of tasks, including placement of some of the concrete barriers. The 6,000-pound-capacity, propane-powered lifttruck sports the orange-and-black colors of Team Toyota.

"This Toyota is easier to maneuver and very precise," said a volunteer for the Detroit Grand Prix who has been the main operator of the Team Toyota lifttruck. "I've driven all of them and this new Toyota is very, very, very good."

Toyota Industrial Equipment Manufacturing, Inc. (TIEM), Columbus, Ind., and Bell Forklift of Detroit donated the use of the Toyota lifttruck to handle the many material-movement tasks of the Detroit Grand Prix volunteer and professional team.

The top-end speed of the Toyota lifttruck is 12 mph. Should it take a lap on the 2.5-mile Detroit Grand Prix course, it would take 12.5 minutes -- much slower than the CART super cars. No matter, it would beat the official Detroit Grand Prix golf carts hands down.

Should you see the orange-and-black sled of "TIEM Toyota" this weekend, give it a cheer. It's the little forklift that does. It won't win the race, but will help win the checkered flag for the car and driver who does.

TIEM last month began to manufacture Toyota Forklift trucks at their new Toyota Industrial Equipment Manufacturing plant in Columbus.

HARRISBURG, PA., (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - A nationwide retailer of leather furniture has paid $10,000 to settle allegations that it used deceptive "sale" advertisements for its store in Montgomery County, Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr. announced today.

Preate said the allegations are part of an "assurance of voluntary compliance" filed today in Commonwealth Court by the Philadelphia office of his Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The assurance alleges that newspaper ads placed for the Leather Center, 311 W. Moreland Road, Willow Grove, Pa., claimed that consumers could get "33 percent to 50 percent savings on all furniture" for a limited time.

"Based on our investigation, we allege that the advertised prices were not special prices in effect for a limited time, but may have been the store's regular everyday selling prices," Preate said.

Under terms of the assurance, Leather Center USA Inc. of Carrollton, Texas denies any wrongdoing but agrees to pay the state $10,000, of which $5,000 is designated as costs of investigation.

The store also promises it won't advertise that any price is a reduction from the "usual" selling price unless the usual price is one at which the goods were or are to be "openly and actively offered for sale...for a reasonably substantial period of time" prior to or following the sale.

Deputy Attorney General Nora A. Dowd of the Bureau of Consumer Protection's Philadelphia office said the bureau's investigation was prompted by consumer complaints.

The assurance was signed by Kent Bouldin, president of Leather Center USA Inc.

Preate noted that the bureau is "actively involved in monitoring the advertising practices of retailers throughout the state."

CLEVELAND (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Sales and earnings of LESCO, Inc. (NASDAQ: LSCO) rose to record levels for the second quarter ended May 31, 1990, it was announced today by James I. FitzGibbon, chairman and chief executive officer.

Sales of $34,853,400 were 15 percent greater than the $30,186,300 reported in the year-ago second quarter.

Earnings increased to $1,888,600, or 46 cents a share, the best quarter in the company's history, more than double the year-ago second quarter earnings of $895,200, or 22 cents a share. Results for the year-ago quarter were adversely affected by heavy rains in major marketing areas which sharply reduced sales. Costs and reserves for the consolidation of manufacturing operations to Florida and interest costs also impacted the year-ago quarter.

"Most of our major product lines contributed to the gains for this year's second quarter and first half with our business operating at a more traditional level than last year," FitzGibbon said. "The results reflect the strength of our business as we continue to invest in the diversification and depth of our product line and the expansion of our marketing operations."

FitzGibbon added that the second quarter is traditionally one of the best periods of the year because of customer purchasing patterns which are based on regional weather conditions.

In the first half, the company earned $484,500, or 12 cents a share on sales of $50,849,400. These results were significantly better than the year-ago first half sales of $45,521,300 and a loss of $937,900, or 23 cents a share.

LESCO, headquartered in Cleveland, operates a fleet of tractor trailer sales trucks which services golf courses nationwide, and regional service centers which supply the professional lawn care operator and landscaper. The company produces the vast majority of the fertilizers, turf control products and turf care equipment sold through the trucks, service centers, conventional sales representatives and telemarketing.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - A high-level delegation of four Soviet government officials met here today with executives of the Westinghouse Electric Corp. (NYSE: WX) to discuss ways to facilitate the conversion of their nation to a free-market economy.

John C. Marous, chairman of Westinghouse, said the visit resulted from a meeting he and Frank Carlucci, former U.S. secretary of defense and a current member of the Westinghouse board of directors, had with Vitaliy Mikhailovich Shabanov, Soviet deputy defense minister, in Moscow last month.

Marous said today's discussions centered on how the Soviet Union can adjust to a competitive vs. a controlled marketplace.

"The meeting is useful to us because it gives us valuable insights into how we might expand our business in the Soviet market," Marous said. "And I believe our experience in total quality processes can help our visitors gain a better understanding of how to deal with some of the obstacles the Soviet government will face in the conversion of their economic system."

Members of the Soviet group were Shabanov; Vsevolod Sergeyevich Avduyevskiy, chairman of the Soviet National Commission on Conversion; Vladimir Leonidovich Koblov, first deputy chairman of State Commission of the Soviet Council of Ministers on Military/Industrial Matters; and Valentin Ivanovich Smyslov, first deputy chairman of the State Planning Commission.

"In Moscow, I told the Minister Shabanov of the work Westinghouse was doing in the areas of improving manufacturing and production processes and invited him to visit our Productivity and Quality Center here," he said. "The center annually attracts hundreds of executives and quality specialists from companies all around the world."

The delegation was being briefed on the theory and application of total quality processes in product development and manufacturing for customers in competitive markets.

In introducing the Soviet visitors at a news conference today, Marous noted that George Westinghouse, who founded the corporation in 1896, had operated two factories in Russia early in this century.

The Soviet delegation also was scheduled to leave Friday for New York on the return trip to Moscow.

MANCHESTER, MI (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - The Washington State Department of Ecology recently named Johnson Controls, Inc. (NYSE: JCI), as its "Industry Recycler of the Year" for 1990.

The award was presented in appreciation of the statewide program developed by Johnson Controls to collect, recycle, and market post- consumer polyethylene terephthalate (P.E.T.) plastic containers.

This award marks the first time that this organization has recognized a plastic products manufacturer for recycling leadership. Aggressive recycling legislation and high public awareness make Washington one of the more "environmentally conscious" states in the nation.

The Washington state recycling program was launched in February of 1989. The agenda: Make P.E.T. a profitable part of new and developing recycling infrastructures. The approach covered public education, market development, and support for a variety of collection systems, including curbside pickup routes and buy-back centers. The program works. Last year, approximately 300,000 pounds of post-consumer P.E.T. were collected; that is the equivalent of 2.4 million 2-liter soft drink bottles.

Johnson Controls is the largest manufacturer of P.E.T. containers in the world, and the leading producer of 2-liter plastic soft drink bottles in Washington state.

Currently, Johnson Controls is constructing a $3.3 million P.E.T. recycling facility in Southeast Michigan. When it comes on line this fall it will have the capacity to recycle more than 20 million pounds of P.E.T. each year. Utilizing advanced plastics reclamation technology, Johnson Controls expects to use much of this material in the production of new, non-food containers.

FACT SHEET: Polyethylene terephthalate, or P.E.T., is the primary plastic used to manufacture 2-liter soft drink bottles; this accounts for the majority of P.E.T. used in containers. Other applications include containers for peanut butter, juice, mouth wash, water, and liquor.

First introduced in the late 1970s, P.E.T. has been recycled for more than a decade -- into products such as paint brush bristles, carpet fibers, fiberfill for jackets and sleeping bags, automotive products, rope, and industrial strapping. The newest and fastest-growing market is for use in new, non-food containers.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Spelling Entertainment Inc. (AMEX: SP), a leading entertainment production and distribution company, today reported increased revenues and operating income for the nine months ended April 30, 1990. The company also reported a decline in net income versus the comparable period a year ago.

Revenues for the first nine months of fiscal 1990 were $119,188,000, a 19 percent increase over the $99,973,000 for the first three quarters of fiscal 1989. Operating income for the period climbed 32 percent to $18,311,000 from $13,861,000 for the first nine months of the previous year. Net income for the first nine months was $5,412,000, or $0.13 per common share, compared to $9,044,000, equal to $0.41 per common share, for the comparable prior year period.

For the third quarter, revenues were $37,429,000, a 40 percent decline over the $62,060,000 recorded for the year-earlier quarter. Operating income declined slightly to $5,326,000 from $5,863,000 for the previous year's second quarter. Net income for the quarter was $954,000, or $0.03 per common share, compared to $2,627,000, equal to $0.09 per common share, for the comparable fiscal 1989 quarter.

Jules Haimovitz, president and chief operating officer, said the lower net income for the quarter and nine months reflect increased interest and purchase-price amortization resulting from the company's acquisition of Worldvision.

In addition, 13 episodes of a new half-hour series, "American Chronicles," produced by David Lynch and Mark Frost, was ordered by the Fox Broadcasting Company for airing in the Fall. Spelling's Worldvision subsidiary has acquired the worldwide distribution rights for both of these properties.

Spelling added that a new one-hour dramatic series entitled "The Class of Beverly Hills," produced by Torand Productions, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Spelling Entertainment Inc., is scheduled for airing in the Fall by the Fox Broadcasting Company. Also in production by Aaron Spelling Productions is "Jailbirds," a television movie for CBS.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Despite the belief by many that Long Island is in a recession, CEOs of mid-sized firms there are generally optimistic on business, according to a survey of 550 New York metropolitan area CEOs released today by National Westminster Bancorp.

"I expected Long Island CEOs this year to be more pessimistic than their peers from other regions," says Peter Radford, chief economist of NatWest Bancorp. "Although the results are far from 'full speed ahead,' the CEOs appear more optimistic than I anticipated."

In fact, 79 percent of the 100 Long Island CEOs who participated in the survey, noted that their firms performed better or about the same over the past year, while 21 percent reported a decline. Last year's survey revealed slightly more negativism. In looking ahead, 92 percent feel that business will improve or stay about the same, compared to an 87 percent response for the Region's CEOs.

Though Long Island CEOs are optimistic on business, they are somewhat cautious on expansion. While 50 percent plan to expand in the next few years, this is a somewhat lower response than previous surveys (56 percent in 1989 and 66 percent in 1988), and slightly lower than the 55 percent reported for the region as a whole. Of those expanding, 51 percent will add employees and 28 percent will expand marketing and sales territories.

Is a recession looming? About half of the Long Island CEOs believe so. And like their peers elsewhere, they overwhelmingly point to a decline in the national economy over the past year. In fact, only five percent believe the economy has improved, while 58 percent saw it declining.

Looking ahead, 44 percent see the economy improving and 52 percent say it will be about the same or worse.

The NatWest survey also found that a greater number of Long Island CEOs are thinking of relocating in the next year or two. Twenty percent of the CEOs anticipate moving, compared to 14 percent a year ago. Of those expecting to move, 72 percent said they will consider moving within the same community. The rest would consider areas outside the metropolitan area, then, in descending order, New Jersey, Connecticut, Westchester and New York City.

Among the reasons for relocating, 47 percent of the CEOs surveyed said it is for larger space, 23 percent note that the old space was too expensive, and 14 percent reported that it was for a better location.

In reviewing a list of factors as benefits or drawbacks to operating in the region, Long Island CEOs noted as drawbacks the cost of health care, the level of state and local taxes, and the quality of local transportation for business needs.

NatWest's fourth annual survey of CEOs, conducted by Northstar Associates Inc., covers mid-sized firms between $5 million and $250 million in annual sales.

National Westminster Bancorp, headquartered in New York City, has $22 billion in assets.

The agreement will initiate pilot phases of computer projects in civilian nuclear power safety, petroleum exploration, electric power generation and transmission control, software development and workstations.

Control Data technical delegations will begin visits to the Soviet Union this month to discuss planning for pilot phases of cooperative projects.

"Technological cooperation with the Soviet Union can benefit the United States and the rest of the world by helping to solve environmental, economic and social issues, and global concerns such as nuclear safety," said Jim Ousley, president of Control Data's Computer Products Group. "We must work together using computer technologies to solve common problems."

The new agreement expands Control Data's relationship with the Soviet Academy of Sciences, the Ministry of Geology and other ministries.

Control Data said that activities under the agreement are subject to U.S. and U.S.S.R. laws and regulations and government-to-government assurances.

The agreement was signed June 3, the day President Gorbachev visited Control Data to see firsthand a demonstration of Control Data's CYBER 960 computer and nuclear safety technology, which the Soviet Union has ordered to improve the safety of its civilian nuclear power plants. The U.S. government has indicated to Control Data it will soon approve export of six of these computers, subject to a special U.S.-U.S.S.R. agreement. The computers will be the most powerful ever exported to the Soviet Union, and the deal will be the largest instance of technology cooperation with the Soviets to date.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - In one of the first actions of its kind to protect American intellectual property rights, Honeywell Inc. (NYSE: HON) today said it has chosen to seek relief under a new provision of Section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930, amended in 1988, in its ongoing patent infringement dispute with Minolta Camera Co., Ltd.

Minneapolis-based Honeywell alleges infringement of its autofocus technology used in Minolta cameras and asserts that Minolta's actions have cost Honeywell hundreds of millions of dollars in potential royalties. In 1987 Honeywell took legal action against Minolta.

At a Washington press briefing held today to announce the filing, Christopher J. Steffen, Honeywell vice president and chief financial officer, stated: "Today, with its extremely popular Maxxum camera, Minolta enjoys annual worldwide sales of $1 billion on its camera products while Honeywell is denied millions of dollars in royalties as our lawsuit moves very slowly through the courts. The protracted nature of the patent-litigation process has prompted us to seek a remedy under U.S. trade laws that protect intellectual property rights."

If Honeywell is successful in its Section 337 case, the law provides for remedies, including a halt in the importation of Minolta products that violate U.S. patent law. Although the dispute began in the mid-1980s, Honeywell was unable to file the Section 337 petition with the International Trade Commission (ITC) until Congress passed an amendment to the trade law in late 1988.

Section 337 declares it unlawful for overseas companies to engage in unfair methods of competition, including infringing valid U.S. patents, when importing or selling products in the United States. In 1988, Congress amended Section 337 to give holders of patents standing to file with the ITC if they had made either a substantial investment in the development of a technology, or significant effort to license it. (The amendment significantly modified the prior requirement that a company also manufacture the product).

"With this action, Honeywell is asserting its option under the law to protect our intellectual property rights. It is an action we believe is not only in the interest of Honeywell's employees, customers and stockholders, but in the national interest as well," said James J. Renier, Honeywell chairman and chief executive officer.

Renier said that while Honeywell has enjoyed a longtime business relationship in Japan and has supported stronger economic ties between the two countries, it has no alternative but to aggressively protect its intellectual property rights.

Honeywell is a global controls company that provides products, systems and services for homes and buildings, industry, and aviation and space. The company had 1989 sales of $6.1 billion.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - In a further effort to gauge just how mid-sized businesses are performing in the metropolitan area, National Westminster Bancorp has created a "Metro Region Business Confidence Index " in conjunction with its yearly Metro Region Business Climate Survey.

The business confidence index reveals a decline to 77 this year, down from 82 in 1989 and the base rate of 100 in 1988. Using carefully analyzed and weighted factors drawn from CEOs' views on how their firms performed last year and how they expect to perform next year, the index records the degree of optimism upon which the CEOs will make such decisions as expansion, borrowing, hiring and relocation.

"This trend mirrors a general softening in the metro region's economy," says NatWest Bancorp Chief Economist Peter A. Radford. "And it also reflects CEO concerns about the slower rate of activity at the national level."

In looking at the index regionally, Westchester shows the highest level of optimism, though it dropped to 95 from 101 a year ago. Posting modest increases in optimism were New Jersey, from 76 to 78; Long Island, from 86 to 91, and Connecticut, from 71 to 78. The index found New York City CEOs trailing other areas, revealing a drop to 75 from 93 a year ago.

"The bulk of the auditors' recommendations require only minor or moderate modifications, many of which have already been implemented." The utility received an optimum rating for its corporate planning.

As part of the PUC's regular review of Pennsylvania utilities, the commission authorized the consulting firm of Hogan & Co. to conduct the audit. Begun in June 1988, the audit studied Penn Power's cost containment organizational structure, long- and short-term planning, and service to customers. According to the auditors, up to $13 million in annual savings could result from their 68 recommendations.

"Obviously, we are concerned about maintaining good customer service while minimizing the cost of service," Markle said. "We thoroughly reviewed each of the auditors' recommendations, and we've put together a practical and cost-effective implementation plan. We've already implemented about one-third of the recommendations."

The only area cited by the auditors as requiring major improvement is in staffing, particularly at the Penn Power-operated Bruce Mansfield Plant in Shippingport, Pa., where a reduction was suggested. In its final report to the PUC, Hogan & Co. said it "endorses the commissioning of a special study and does not recommend immediate across-the-board employee reductions."

The company will conduct an independent analysis to address the concern over staffing. Another independent study will be performed on compensation and benefits, one of three areas cited by the auditors as needing significant improvement. The other areas cited for significant improvement due to estimated savings were fuels management and interchange and purchased power. "We believe that the savings in these areas were overstated," said Markle.

All 68 of the auditors' recommendations, if implemented, would result in estimated one-time costs to Penn Power of up to $4.3 million and annual costs of $1.2 million. The cost of the audit, charged to Penn Power's operating expenses, was nearly $500,000.

MAYNARD, MA (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Digital Equipment Corporation (NYSE: DEC): James M. Osterhoff, vice president finance, today spoke before several hundred investment professionals from both the U.S. and Europe at the sixth annual Sanford C. Bernstein Strategic Decisions Conference held at the Plaza Hotel in New York City. Focussing on one of the conference's themes, Osterhoff spoke of managing a corporation in an environment that is constantly changing. His comments specifically addressed Digital's vision of the computing environment needed to help people manage change. Known as Enterprisewide Computing, this strategy envelops all the terminals, PC's and workstations, all the departmental computers, all the mainframes and data centers within an enterprise. Everything works together as a single, integrated machine. Instead of seeing multiple computers in the enterprise, one sees a single computer surrounding the enterprise - even linking the enterprise to customers, suppliers, and other constituencies outside the enterprise.

In his prepared comments, Osterhoff said that "In a shorter time horizon, we have some other challenges facing us at Digital. Our current rate of profitability doesn't meet the expectations of our investors -- or ourselves. The U.S. market continues to be sluggish for us, and certain international markets are experiencing softness -- such as the U.K. where high interest rates are cutting business expansion. Because of these factors external forecasts of this quarter's earnings would appear to be too optimistic."

Digital Equipment Corporation, headquartered in Maynard, Mass., is the leading supplier of network computer systems and services. Digital offers a full range of computing solutions and systems integration for the entire enterprise -- from the desktop to the data center.

WICHITA, KS (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Latshaw Enterprises' sales for the second quarter ending May 5, 1990 totaled $7,300,000 compared to $7,081,000 for the same period in 1989. Net income for the quarter was $94,000 after a deduction of $170,000 for an unrealized loss on securities. The new income in 1989 was $399,000 for this same period.

For the six months of 1990, sales were $14,995,000, up 7 percent over 1989. In 1990, there was a loss of $279,000 after deducting an unrealized loss on securities of $909,000 and recognizing $100,000 in income for Bionaire. For the six months of 1989, there was a net profit of $843,000. Unrealized losses from the adjustment of marketable securities will vary from one period to the next depending on market conditions.

"The commitment by your board of directors is evident in the continued upgrading of the physical plant and capital equipment required to support our customers. The order backlog from these customers reflects their growing perception of their inventory costs and our awareness of the necessity of effective Just-in-Time Programs. Like many manufacturers today, we are required to ship more with less lead time," a company spokesman said.

Expansion is continuing into the heavy mechanical controls market, medical molding, and into the newest area, that of premium lawn and garden tools through the Latshaw Lawn & Garden Tool Division. Initial penetration into this expanding market will be evident in Fiscal 1991. Shipments should start at the end of 1990.

The Helton & Helton Company of McMinnville, Tenn. was recently acquired by Latshaw Enterprises. Helton and Helton manufactures vacuum formed plastic containers sold to original equipment manufacturers for parts handling, both in-plant and plant-to-plant. These reusable containers are meeting the requirements of an ecologically motivated customer demand to reduce disposables from their processes. It is likely that additional investment in plant facility will be required. Earnings from this investment relative to the total company are not expected to be significant in the next few years.

As was previously announced, the American Stock Exchange has delisted the common stock of Latshaw Enterprises from trading on the exchange due to the limited nature of trading in its shares and the relatively low number of round lot shareholders. Latshaw Enterprises' common stock is now traded on the over-the-counter market, and B. C. Christopher Securities Co., Kansas City, Mo. is acting as a market maker for the stock.

HOUSTON (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. (TGPL), a subsidiary of Transco Energy Co. (NYSE: E), has accepted a certificate issued by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to construct its southern expansion project. The $60 million project is designed to provide 25 customers in Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia with an additional 167 million cubic feet per day (MMcf/d) of firm mainline transportation capacity during peak winter months. TGPL has accepted the certificate but will ask the FERC for rehearing of certain rate design and receipt point flexibility conditions.

Transco President and Chief Executive Officer George S. Slocum said, "This project represents Transco's first major expansion of TGPL's southern mainline in many years, and is designed to provide additional reliable service at attractive rates to customers in this important growth market area. With much of the expansion taking place along existing rights-of-way and through additions to compression, we are able to minimize the cost and environmental impact of this incremental service." Slocum noted that construction should begin this summer, pending remaining environmental approvals, with initial service slated for November 1990.

Slocum added, "We are pleased to have received approval for this project, which is another example of the cooperation among the pipeline, local gas distributors, and state and federal regulators to deliver needed gas services to our markets." He said that customer support of Transco's comprehensive customer settlement was instrumental in resolving for TGPL many of the problems that have plagued the industry in recent years and have prohibited the development of new market initiatives such as the southern expansion project. The customer settlement, approved by the FERC in 1989, established take-or-pay cost sharing and a viable interim merchant service.

MIAMI (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - AT&T (NYSE: T) today inaugurated its service on the first undersea fiber-optic communications link to the Caribbean and Latin America.

AT&T's first official telephone call on the cable was a five-way conference call placed from Miami by Don Smith, regional managing director AT&T-Latin America, and Rod Sturm, regional managing director, AT&T-North America. The call connected Miami to each of the cable's landing points.

The submarine Transcaribbean Cable System (TCS-1) extends the reach of AT&T's Worldwide Intelligent Network and marks the first digital fiber link connecting the United States mainland, Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Jamaica and Colombia. The 2,833-mile system is capable of advanced voice, data and video transmission.

"The opening of this Latin American link is an important milestone in the continuous expansion of AT&T's Worldwide Intelligent Network," Smith said. "It's significant because sophisticated telecommunications services are a key ingredient to Caribbean and Latin American countries as they compete for monetary investment. We view ourselves as the communications technology conduit to such international business development," Smith said.

AT&T owns the largest share of the TCS-1 cable. AT&T won a contract in October 1988 to manufacture and install the fiber cable, which is estimated to have cost $130 million.

The technology of the TCS-1 cable is based on the latest fiber and laser achievements, with more than six times the transmission capacity per fiber pair than was possible just 10 years ago. The TCS-1 operates on a 140 megabit system, capable of transmitting 140 million bits of information per second or 18,900 simultaneous voice conversations.

Incorporated into the same cable between south Florida and Puerto Rico is another fiber connection called Florico-2. This particular fiber connection more than triples the calling capacity for domestic long-distance calls from any U.S. city to Puerto Rico.

AT&T first entered the world of underwater telephone transmission in 1950, installing the world's first repeatered submarine cable system between the United States and Cuba. Since then, AT&T has constructed more 96,500 miles of submarine coaxial and fiber-optic cable systems, linking the United States to Europe and to the Pacific Rim countries.

AT&T is an international leader in providing design, production, installation and maintenance of reliable, high-performance, high- capacity submarine cable systems.

MINNETONKA, MN (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Tonka Corporation (NYSE: TKA) updated the company's 1990 prospects to attendees of today's annual shareholders meeting.

Stephen G. Shank, chairman and chief executive officer, reiterated the company's earlier statement that, based on current trends, "We are uncertain whether second-half results will be sufficient to offset the first-half deficit." Shank indicated that there is a real possibility that Tonka will not be profitable for the full year.

Shank said the company's order position had improved "only marginally" since its earlier announcement, when net orders as of May 19 were $92 million behind the same period a year ago. As of June 3, net orders were $657 million, compared to $743 million at the same point last year. Excluding orders for Sega video games, which the company no longer distributes, orders were $651 million, compared to $703 million for the same point last year.

He said some difference in order-writing timing should be expected because of the increased importance to the 1990 sales mix of higher sales from Parker Brothers and the International Division, both of which tend to book their orders later, and because of a relatively high proportion of later-shipping new products.

Shank went on to say that Tonka had made solid progress expanding the staple segment of its business, which accounted for $420 million in sales in 1989, and that the current order position of this important segment is ahead of last year. He also stated, "A number of new lines are showing good promise, which if continued, can provide a basis for sales momentum next year." According to Shank, among the most promising are the Beetlejuice and Batman lines, the company's new doll lines, and Parker Brothers' new toys and games. He went on to emphasize that Tonka continues to focus strong marketing support behind its product lines.

In closing, Shank said, "Throughout our organization, a team of hard-working, talented and committed employees is dedicated to our mission of building value for shareholders by creating fun for kids and families throughout the world. And we will not be satisfied until we improve our performance and restore our forward momentum."

PHILADELPHIA, (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - CoreStates Financial Corp (NASDAQ: CSFN) today unveiled a new concept in electronic banking for retail customers that combines a state-of-the-art method of cashing checks with an extensive array of options to access the full range of banking services 24 hours a day.

This innovative system makes self-service banking much more useful and attractive to consumers. Called MAC ICON SERVICES, it has four components that for the first time will be made available as a network service to MAC financial institutions of all sizes.

Ten banking organizations have already signed up to participate as charter group members to MAC ICON SERVICES and will begin going on line by early next year.

"MAC ICON SERVICES is to traditional electronic banking and ATM machines what ATMs were to the teller windows that preceded them," said Richard W. Epps, senior vice president of CoreStates.

"There is a lot more to MAC ICON SERVICES than simply a new generation of ATMs," Epps continued. "What we have tried to do over the past three years of development is to look at the traditional consumer banking delivery system and see how it could be improved to effectively enhance customer relationships and be more responsive to customer needs."

More than 70 percent of all transactions performed by a traditional bank teller involve the handling of checks. MAC ICON SERVICES is designed to move these transactions away from the teller windows to the new MAC Check machines.

Other parts of MAC ICON SERVICES allow customers to perform a range of sophisticated financial transactions -- moving funds between accounts, buying certificates of deposit and reviewing C.D. portfolios, and obtaining more detailed account information than was ever available from machines.

These services, which utilize newly developed terminals manufactured in different versions by IBM and NCR, read the MICR characters on the bottom of all checks, dispense cash or coins in all denominations, allow customers to move funds among multiple accounts, make payments and purchase selected financial products.

MAC ICON SERVICES include: -- MAC Check: Allows customers full availability of funds from checks that have been registered and that they receive regularly such as payroll, government, dividend checks. After they have been entered into the system, they may then be cashed immediately or some or all of the money may be deposited to one or more customer accounts. MAC Check also allows customers to make payments and provides more detailed inquiry capabilities.

-- MAC Info: Functioning off a separate terminal, this service allows customers to track their accounts with precision, including balances and check movements, set up automated transfers and other routine maintenance functions, and perform "what if" calculations to determine if, for example they qualify for a loan. It allows financial institutions to supply detailed information on their products, such as rates, special offers and pricing. It also allows institutions to advertise their products and services and offer products such as certificates of deposit for purchase.

-- MAC Phone: Provides by telephone the easiest possible access to the same consumer conveniences as MAC Info -- access to financial account data and product information.

-- MAC Manager: A support system for financial institutions, designed to reduce costs of electronic delivery of banking services and to provide expanded customer convenience, for example, the issuance of MAC cards on the spot. Its software gives banks the ability to provide increasing levels of consumer financial information, including on-line adjustments for transactions.

The MAC ICON SERVICES system has been installed for the past year on a pilot basis in the Philadelphia National Bank branch in Newtown, Pa., where the results have been dramatic. Prior to the arrival of MAC ICON SERVICES, 5 percent of all checks were processed at machines; now 50 percent are moving through MAC Check machines. More than half of all transactions take place outside regular banking hours, with nearly 40 percent occurring on Saturday and Sunday. Opening of new accounts has doubled since the machines were installed, while account closings declined 30 percent.

PORTLAND, OR (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Fred Meyer Inc. (NASDAQ: MEYR) announced today an agreement with 10 major banks to more than double the company's revolving line of credit to $335 million.

Continental Bank led the syndication effort that attracted six banks from the United States and one each from Japan, Germany, Australia and Canada. Together, the 10 banks have a combined net worth of nearly $24 billion.

"When 10 national and international banks say they are willing to invest $335 million in Fred Meyer's future, it is a dramatic vote of confidence we deeply appreciate," Mike Don, vice president and treasurer of Fred Meyer, said.

"Fred Meyer is accelerating its growth. When combined with the other debt instruments available to the company, such as our unrated commercial paper facility with First Interstate Bank and our five-year zero-coupon notes, this expanded line of credit gives us tremendous flexibility to build new stores and remodel existing ones to meet the needs of our customers and to complete our three-year project to install IBM computer systems that will create a new technological base for the company," Don said.

Thomas R. Stevens, vice president of portfolio management for Continental Bank at its Chicago headquarters, said Continental was happy to serve as the agent bank because of how well Fred Meyer's customer-oriented business philosophy and strategic plan reflect the bank's own customer-driven strategy.

Stevens emphasized that Fred Meyer's clearly focused strategy and well thought-out expansion plan were the keys to selling the syndication in a tough credit market for retailers.

"All the banks had excellent credit committees who asked tough questions about the company's financial position and corporate strategies," Stevens said. "All were impressed by the company's unique approach to retailing, its understanding of the marketplace and its customers, and the long-term strategic steps it was taking to excel in an increasingly competitive retail environment."

Kurt Wollenberg, senior vice president of corporate banking for Security Pacific Bank Oregon, confirmed Stevens' assessment.

"Fred Meyer's new credit facility represents a sizable commitment by the financial community that reflects a strong belief in the company's strategy and energetic growth plans for the 1990s," Wollenberg said.

"It is significant that this group of major financial institutions is anchored by domestic banks with extensive knowledge of Fred Meyer's unique retail concept and management strengths gained by years of involvement with the company," he added. "They know Fred Meyer inside-out and believe in the strategic investments the company is making to position itself for the future."

The $335 million agreement provides various competitive pricing options and includes a company option to convert the unpaid balance as of Aug. 1, 1992, into term notes paid over five years. It also includes an option for Fred Meyer to add another participant for up to $15 million, which would increase the credit line to $350 million.

The participating banks are: Continental Bank, Security Pacific Bank Oregon, U.S. National Bank of Oregon, First Interstate Bank of Oregon, Seattle First National Bank, WestPac Banking Corp., NCNB National Bank, DG

Bank, Bank of Tokyo Ltd. and Bank of Nova Scotia.

Fred Meyer operates 120 stores in seven western states and employs more than 22,000 people. Most of its stores -- 91 in all -- are large, one-stop shopping stores ranging in size up to 200,000 square feet, with the balance being smaller specialty operations, such as jewelry stores in malls. Headquartered in Portland, Fred Meyer had 1989 sales of $2.28 billion and its stock is traded on the over-the-counter market of NASDAQ.

Turchi Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, announced today.

In addition, Turchi said, "The board of directors of the company has been immeasurably strengthened through the addition today of six new members, who in turn have voted to elevate Donald J. McDonald Jr., to the position of president from executive vice president, in recognition of his outstanding contributions to the company."

The board of directors of National Media declared a special 10-cent per share special cash dividend, as well as the first regular quarterly dividend of 2.5 cents per share, both dividends being payable on July 15, 1990 to shareholders of record as of the close of business on June 30, 1990. LOS ANGELES (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Unocal (NYSE: UCL) today initiated the 76 Protech Patrol, specially equipped vehicles that will provide free emergency road service to stranded motorists on Los Angeles Basin freeways. Protech Patrol is one of three environmental initiatives announced by Unocal to help improve air quality.

The service will cover major freeways in the Los Angeles area from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays. The patrol will include six vehicles, with four more to be added by Labor Day.

"Air pollution increases as cars slow down due to freeway traffic stalls," said Richard J. Stegemeier, Unocal chairman, president and chief executive officer. "If one 76 Protech Patrol vehicle reduces traffic delays by even one minute on just one major freeway, that would save nearly 5,000 commuter hours and eliminate 1,400 pounds of air pollutants."

Stegemeier went on to explain that a study by the Southern California

Association of Governments concluded that traffic congestion in the Los Angeles Basin causes more than 600,000 hours in delays each day, or six minutes per hour of travel. These delays contribute nearly 90 tons per day of air pollutants. Further, the South Coast Air Quality Management District (SCAQMD) estimates that half of the freeway congestion in Los Angeles is due to accidents, stalled vehicles and special events.

The SCAQMD estimates that mobile sources -- especially heavy-polluting vehicles made before 1975, which don't have catalytic converters -- account for more than two million tons of ozone-forming emissions every year. Mobile sources are responsible for 60 percent of the air pollution in the Los Angeles Basin, according to the California Air Resources Board.

Protech Patrol is one of three environmental initiatives introduced by Unocal in the Los Angeles Basin this year to help improve air quality. SCRAP, South Coast Recycled Auto Program, is ridding area roads of more than 7,000 older cars. Smog- Fighter offers free off-cycle smog checks and low-emission tune-ups to model 1974 and older cars.

BOSTON (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - A newly formed Hungarian investment firm has chosen New England Financial Resources (NEFR) as its U.S. representative.

Trimpex, a Kecskemet-based company representing many of Hungary's principal industries has targeted the United States as a source for investment capital needed to support the privatization of Hungarian firms changing to a free-market economy, said Robert J. Eisenberg, president of NEFR.

"These well-established companies are seeking investment capital in order to transfer ownership from government control to the private sector," Eisenberg said.

"One of our services on behalf of Trimpex will be to introduce Hungarian firms to U.S. investment and joint venture sources and to create awareness among the American financial community regarding investment opportunities available in Hungary," he said.

Eisenberg noted that NEFR's first Hungarian client is Agrikon, the nation's largest producer of agricultural machinery.

NEFR hosted a delegation of Agrikon executives in a series of private meetings with New England business and government leaders earlier this week. State Sen. John A. Brennan of Malden co-hosted the gatherings, which included an appearance by the Hungarian delegation before a joint session of the Massachusetts legislature.

Leading the Hungarian delegation was Dr. Istvan Kuczik, managing director of Agrikon, and other senior executives from the firm.

"This is the first in a series of visits to New England and the Northeast which we expect to schedule on behalf of Hungarian industries," Eisenberg said.

"We are planning another series of high-level meetings in Boston, Washington, and New York for company executives in the fall."

Eisenberg said that Hungary has progressed far ahead of other Eastern European nations in their transition from a communist-controlled to a free-market economy.

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Philadelphia-based Sussex Capital Corp. and RDS Capital Partners Inc. of Fairfax, Va., have announced the successful acquisition of Belgium Tool and Die Co. (Belvac) by BTD Holdings Inc.

BTD Holdings paid approximately $70 million for the Lynchburg, Va.- based company. Belvac manufactures machines which make two-piece aluminum and steel cans for beverages and food.

Ken Jones, president of Sussex Capital, said that the successful arrangement and closing of the transaction was due to the two merchant banks' ability to recognize and respond quickly to the seller's needs, to mobilize a network of financiers, and to provide the equity necessary to close the transaction.

"Given the market conditions today for leveraged buyouts, it is a credit to Belvac and all of the debt and equity participants that this acquisition closed," Jones said. "John Freal, managing director of RDS, had made the initial contact with the seller's advisors after a previous deal fell through. He called me, and we worked to put together an investment team and a package that satisfied everyone's requirements -- those of the buyers, sellers, and lenders. I'm genuinely impressed with Belvac and am thrilled that the purchase worked out."

Jones and Freal had worked together in the corporate finance department at Meritor Financial Group in Philadelphia. Each left in 1989 to head his current company.

The investment group includes RDS, Sussex, senior management, Heller Financial Inc. (Chicago), and TCW Capital (New York). The latter two entities also provided substantial debt financing for the acquisition.

SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Solectron Corp. (NASDAQ: SLTN), one of the nation's three largest independent providers of advanced manufacturing services to electronic original equipment manufacturers (OEMs), announced record sales and earnings for the three-and nine-month periods ended May 31, 1990.

Solectron Corp. reported net sales of $58.3 million for the third quarter of fiscal year 1990 ended May 31, 1990. This represented an increase of 93 percent when compared with net sales of $30.2 million for the comparable quarter of fiscal 1989. On a year-to-date basis, net sales of $145.0 million represented a 61 percent increase when compared with $90.1 million of net sales for the comparable period a year ago.

Income before income taxes for the three-month period ended May 31, 1990 also increased 118 percent to $3.6 million from $1.7 million for the comparable quarter of fiscal 1989. To date, income before income taxes of $9.1 million increased 88 percent from the comparable period a year ago.

Net income for the third quarter was $2.0 million, an increase of 116 percent from last year's third quarter net income of $0.9 million. Net income for the nine-month period was $5.1 million, an increase of 86 percent when compared with $2.7 million of net income for the comparable period in fiscal 1989.

Earnings per share for the third quarter ended May 31, 1990 were 32 cents, an increase of 60 percent from 20 cents for the comparable quarter one year ago. The fully weighted impact of Solectron's initial public offering which occurred on Nov. 14, 1989 was reflected for the first time in the second quarter of fiscal 1990. On a year-to-date basis, earnings per share of 89 cents increased 53 percent when compared with 58 cents for last year's comparable period.

The company's year-to-date operating margin is 6.4 percent and its return on equity stands at 25 percent, consistently outperforming industry averages.

Solectron's management cautions that the exceptional net sales growth rate of the third quarter of fiscal 1990 should not be viewed as an indication of the next few quarters' sales growth. The sales increase in the third quarter of fiscal 1990 was due primarily to the realization of a major turnkey program which Solectron had planned for over the last six to eight months.

Solectron has been awarded 23 quality awards for exceptional performance, the most recent one coming from Sun Microsystems. Other customer awards were given by companies such as Apple Computer, Conner Peripherals, Exabyte, Hewlett-Packard, IBM, Mitsubishi, and Xerox. Solectron employs approximately 2,300 people, occupies 725,000 square feet in nine buildings in Santa Clara County, and is headquartered at 2001 Fortune Drive, San Jose, CA 95131.

ATLANTA (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Contel Corp. (NYSE: CTC) today announced it will offer eligible employees in its Telephone Operations Sector a special one-time early retirement incentive as part of a previously announced restructuring.

Under the plan, a retirement "window" will be created from July 1 through July 31, during which retiring employees will receive three years toward their ages and three years toward their service dates in determining individual benefits. The program will be offered to employees age 52 and over who have at least seven years of vesting service as of Dec. 31, 1990, and are in job classifications and locations that may be affected by the restructuring of the sector. Contel said approximately 14,000 employees in the sector are covered by the company pension plan, of which approximately 900 would be eligible for the early retirement program.

The early retirement incentive is being offered as a voluntary means of reducing the sector's workforce, and to minimize involuntary workforce reductions.

Contel in April announced it would initiate a sector reorganization over a two-year period to create a more efficient, market-focused and customer-responsive organization. The reorganization is expected to reduce the sector's workforce by approximately four percent, with the majority of those reductions concentrated in staff support positions. Contel said it expects to achieve the workforce reductions largely through attrition and voluntary separation programs.

The restructuring will result in increased operating efficiencies and in reduced costs. For the next two to three years, the reduced costs will be used to offset the expenses incurred to effect the restructuring. In addition, it is estimated that pre-tax costs in the range of $15- to $25-million will be recorded in the second half of this year to reflect the impact of the restructuring. The amount ultimately recorded this year will depend largely on the number of employees who elect the early retirement option and other workforce reductions.

Contel Telephone Operations provides local exchange service and long distance access for more than 2.6 million customers in 30 states.

Contel, a company with more than $3 billion in annual revenues, provides a broad range of telecommunications products and services.

KALAMAZOO, MI (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - International Controls Corp. announced today that it intends to commence exchange offers in which it will offer holders of its 12-3/4 percent senior subordinated debentures due 2001 (AMEX: INCB), a package consisting of $250 in cash, $300 principal amount of a new issue of senior debentures and warrants to purchase six shares of common stock for each $1,000 face amount of the 12-3/4 percent debentures. The company intends to offer holders of its subordinated discount debentures due Jan. 1, 2006 (AMEX: INCA) a package consisting of $150 in cash, $300 principal amount of senior debentures and warrants to purchase six shares of common stock for each $1,000 face amount of subordinated discount debentures. Under certain circumstances to be described in the offering materials, holders of the 12-3/4 percent debentures would receive less cash and holders of the subordinated discount debentures would receive more cash.

Each offer is conditioned, among other things, upon the valid tender of 80 percent of that issue. Assuming that the holders of 80 percent of each issue of debentures accept the offers, the warrants issued would represent a claim on approximately 15 percent of the company's equity.

PaineWebber Incorporated is acting as financial advisor to the company in connection with the exchange offers and D.F. King & Co., Inc. is acting as information agent. The company expects to commence mailing of the offering documents on June 15.

The company's major businesses, metal stamping for the automotive industry and truck trailer manufacturing, are highly cyclical, and are experiencing downturns in earnings. The company is highly leveraged and seeks to improve its competitive position and withstand continuing softness in its key businesses. If the exchange offers are successful, debentureholders will receive, in addition to cash, senior debentures and warrants in a stronger company.

The company estimates that, based upon an 80 percent acceptance by the holders of each issue, the package being offered to holders of the 12-3/4 percent debentures has a value of $550 per bond and that the package being offered to holders of the subordinated discount debentures has a value of $450 per bond.

MONTERREY, MEXICO (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - CEMEX, S.A., the world's fourth largest producer of cement, today announced the successful completion of a US$100 million convertible Eurobond offering through its subsidiary, Sunbelt Enterprises. The issue, sold by Citicorp Investment Bank Limited (CIBL) to more than 90 investors, is the first Eurobond convertible to American Depositary Receipts (ADRs) completed for a Latin American company.

The high-yielding, fixed-rate Eurobond has a maximum term of 12 years and will be convertible to the ADRs of Tolmex which was formed by the merger of CEMEX's Cegusa subsidiary with Empresas Tolteca De Mexico, a company recently acquired by CEMEX from Blue Circle PLC and other investors. Tolmex represents nearly 45 percent of the sales and assets of CEMEX.

Lorenzo H. Zambrano, chief executive officer of CEMEX, stated the completion of the offering will enable CEMEX to lower its debt equity ratio by reducing its share ownership of Tolmex from the present 82 percent. "By reducing out financial leverage we are further enhancing CEMEX's solid position in the strengthening Mexican economy. Accessing sophisticated financial markets to complete the transaction will also assist in the modernization of Mexico's financial sector and help to lower the cost of capital, making the country more internationally competitive," he added.

Matias Amat, country corporate officer for Citibank Mexico, noted the CEMEX convertible Eurobond helps to channel foreign investments into Mexico and will support CEMEX on a longer-term basis through the conversion into equity. "The completion of this transaction opens new markets for Mexican companies seeking capital and further demonstrates Citibank's confidence in prime Mexican issuers such as CEMEX that have made a commitment to become global players," concluded Amat.

CEMEX, S.A. is the world's fourth largest cement producer with 1989 year-end sales of US$1.1 billion and total assets of US$2.9 billion. The company has a 63 percent market share of total cement sales in Mexico. Sunbelt Enterprises, Inc., one of CEMEX's operating companies and the issuer of the convertible Eurobond, has total assets of US$494 million and 1989 revenues of US$123 million. Tolmex, S.A., the ADR issuer, has total assets of US$1.4 billion and 1989 revenues of US$462 million.

MESA, AZ (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - McDonnell Douglas Corp. (NYSE: MD) today announced that it is transferring its military aircraft weapons carriage work and some subassembly work for the MD- 80 twin-jet from its Douglas Aircraft division in Long Beach, Calif., to its McDonnell Douglas Helicopter division.

This transfer is the latest in a series of steps McDonnell Douglas is taking to focus its Long Beach operation on development, final assembly and testing of transport aircraft. Other recent work transfers include relocating the ACES II ejection seat program to McDonnell Douglas' Florida Missile Production Center in Titusville and moving the T-45 Navy jet trainer program to its McDonnell Aircraft division in St. Louis.

The weapons carriage systems, called bomb racks, and the MD-80 subassembly work will be staffed with current employees and represent at least $24 million in annual business for the helicopter company.

Its ordnance group will manage and produce the weapons carriage product line installed on the U.S. Navy's F/A-18 Hornet, built by McDonnell Aircraft, and other military aircraft. That work, involving 40 to 50 people, will take place in existing manufacturing facilities in Mesa.

Also about 100 employees at the helicopter company's California Manufacturing Center in Culver City will produce a series of subassemblies for the MD-80.

"We've been working hard to develop a stable base of work with McDonnell Douglas components. These projects represent a good step in that direction " said Tom Gunn, president of McDonnell Douglas Helicopter.

In Mesa, the helicopter company will be responsible for design, manufacture, assembly and test of the bomb racks, Ordnance Director Rye Ryden said. The work currently represents about $20 million in annual business, including spares and equipment repair activity.

The helicopter company has also been contracted by the Navy to handle maintenance of weapons carriage equipment installed on the service's fighter aircraft, Ryden said.

"We're planning the transition of work from Long Beach to Mesa now and should be in production by the fourth quarter of 1990," Ryden said. "Most of the people needed to fill production, engineering, contracts and other administrative positions on these projects will come from within the helicopter company. Some critical skills positions will be filled by people transferring from Douglas Aircraft."

This work, Ryden said, could lead to future helicopter company business with McDonnell Aircraft in supplying weapons carriage equipment for Navy and U.S. Air Force fighter aircraft.

Under a three-year, $12 million contract, current California employees will produce subassemblies for 500 MD-80 ship sets, said Joe Maltese, California Manufacturing Group director for the helicopter company.

The subassemblies, to be installed throughout the aircraft, include small mechanical flight control items such as brackets, pulleys and cables, plus medium-sized structural sheet metal assemblies. Employees will produce an average of 260 items for each MD-80.

Initial staffing of about 32 people, all current employees, should begin within a few weeks.

By late 1990, the helicopter company also will begin fabricating detail sheet metal and machined parts for these subassemblies, boosting the total number of employees on the project to about 100, Maltese said.

"These contracts contribute to employment stability within the helicopter company and an expansion of our aerospace manufacturing capabilities," Gunn said. "That's good news for all of us."

McDonnell Douglas Helicopter builds the AH-64A Apache multi-role helicopter, a series of MD 500 commercial and military light helicopters, and an ordnance product line that includes a family of Chain Gun (R) automatic weapons. Additionally, the company's capabilities in areas such as advanced composite materials, tool fabrication and flight simulation design and training are attracting new and continuing business.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - The following statement was released today by James R. Jones, chairman of the American Stock Exchange:

The American Stock Exchange has, for a number of years, pioneered the concept of after-hours trading. As early as 1987 we established a linkage with the European Options Exchange in Amsterdam whereby the Amex's Major Market Index option could be traded there during European trading hours.

This experience provided a foundation on which the American Stock Exchange has developed a number of projects dealing with the idea of trading securities while the New York markets are closed.

We were one of the first to recognize that the world is shrinking, national borders regarding finance are dissolving, and that we are moving inexorably toward an international and global marketplace -- a condition brought about primarily by the technological revolution. We have positioned ourselves to be a major player in these global markets.

Within days, we will be at liberty to announce a major joint venture for the trading of equities and options around the world, and within a week or so, we expect to announce the details of SITUS -- an exciting project in conjunction with a major international vendor -- for the trading of unregistered securities throughout the world.

LONG BEACH, CA (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - To celebrate more than 50 years of close business ties between McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) and Swissair, senior officials of both companies flew aboard a DC-2 and a DC-3 today, planes reminiscent of the aircraft first flown by Swissair in the 1930s. The DC-2, built by Douglas Aircraft in 1935, is the oldest transport aircraft still flying today.

The flights in the vintage aircraft were part of a visit here by senior executives of the airline to update Swissair on the newest generation of McDonnell Douglas jetliners.

Swissair was one of the earliest customers of Douglas-built transport aircraft, flying DC-2s beginning in 1934. Swissair has flown most of the aircraft in the "Douglas Commercial" series and most recently was a launch customer for both the MD-80 twin-jet family and the MD-11 wide-cabin tri-jet. The airline has orders and commitments for 18 MD-11s. It operates 23 MD-80 twin-jets and has orders and other commitments for six more.

John McDonnell, chairman and chief executive officer of McDonnell Douglas, joined Robert Hood, president of the corporation's Douglas Aircraft division, in Long Beach to provide a progress report to the executive committee of the Swissair board of directors on the MD-11 tri-jet program and next generation twin-jet -- the MD-90.

McDonnell Douglas officials told Swissair that four MD-11 aircraft are currently in flight test in Yuma, Ariz. Certification of the aircraft by the Federal Aviation Administration is expected later this year, and deliveries to customers will follow shortly after that.

The MD-90 series of twin-jets is in development as a next generation aircraft to follow the company's popular MD-80 family. The MD-90 will feature the quietest and most fuel efficient engines of any jet transport in the world.

McDonnell Douglas announced the program launch of the MD-90 late in 1989. The company now has more than 200 orders and other commitments for the aircraft.

McDonnell Douglas is currently in discussions with European airlines to define a version of the advanced technology MD-90 twin-jet to satisfy their needs.

Swissair is a member of the European Quality Alliance (EQA), a group of leading airlines studying acquisition of new twin-jets for service beginning in the 1990s. The cooperative group of four airlines aims to provide close cooperation in technical, commercial and route planning areas. Also in the alliance are Austrian Airlines, Finnair and SAS.

The EQA airlines have several common characteristics, including the use of McDonnell Douglas MD-80 series aircraft for their short- to-medium range routes.

COLUMBUS, OH (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - The trustee for Cardinal Industries has asked the court to streamline one of the nation's most complex webs of interrelated bankruptcy cases by consolidating all of the assets and liabilities of the bankrupt parent company and its 33 subsidiaries. Eighteen of the Cardinal subsidiaries are now operating under individual bankruptcy proceedings.

Jay Alix, court-appointed operating trustee, said combining all of the Cardinal entities into one of the largest "substantive consolidation" estates in U.S. bankruptcy history would allow the developer of $1.8 billion in real estate holdings to present a plan of reorganization within a year.

Otherwise, he said, practical considerations would make the chances remote that a successful reorganization plan involving so many separate, interrelated bankruptcy proceedings could be achieved through consensus of all the affected creditors.

"The internal financial affairs of Cardinal and its subsidiaries are so hopelessly entangled," Alix said, "that the individual estates probably will be consumed by the costs of determining which Cardinal entity 'owns' which assets, the obligation on liabilities, the correct status of intercompany accounts, which are significantly out of balance and subject to dispute, and the appropriateness of the methods by which transactions were recorded."

He said the consolidation is the only way to ensure equitable treatment of all creditors by combining all of the assets of the various Cardinal entities into one fund from which all creditor claims would be satisfied.

The motion filed with U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Barbara Sellers' court in Columbus did not seek the consolidation of any of the 855 limited partnerships in which Cardinal or any of its subsidiaries is a general or limited partner. About 160 of the partnerships are operating under Chapter 11 protection from creditors.

Substantive consolidations are relatively infrequent in bankruptcy cases because the two or more involved debtor entities usually must show that they had presented themselves as a single, integrated entity, and were viewed as such by creditors. Alternatively, the court can find that the consolidation is necessary because untangling the debtor entities' affairs would consume substantial assets of the estates, and that consolidation would be in the best interests of all creditors. Cardinal, Alix said, meets both tests.

At its peak in the mid-1980s, Cardinal had revenues of more than $300 million a year and was the nation's largest manufacturer of modular housing and second-largest residential builder and apartment developer.

IRVINE, CA (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Mission Power Engineering Company yesterday terminated its contract for the engineering and construction of three geothermal power generating plants in the Coso and China Lake areas of California owned and operated by California Energy Company of San Francisco and its partners. Mission Power has begun demobilization of the plant sites, according to Jack Adrian, its president and chief executive officer.

The termination of the contracts followed Mission Power's filing of a lawsuit on June 5, 1990 against California Energy and its partners in the project, asking more than $79 million under Mission Power's contract for the three plants and five others in the same area. Mission Power is a wholly owned subsidiary of SCEcorp (NYSE: SCE) and has been the contractor for the eight power plants involved in the more than $300 million project.

"Mission Power filed the complaint because California Energy made changes in the scope of work and caused serious delays, and has refused to pay for the additional costs," Adrian said. California Energy has not paid Mission Power since January 1990, he said.

Mission Power is seeking more than $79 million in the complaint for breach of contract filed in Inyo County Superior Court, plus interest and damages for alleged fraud and misrepresentation by California Energy Company.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Assets of the nation's 504 money market mutual funds increased $988.6 million to $382.14 billion for the week ended Wednesday, June 13, the Investment Company Institute reported today.

The 160 institutional funds decreased by $455.0 million to $91.59 billion; the 239 general purpose funds increased $1.01 billion to $131.32 billion; and the 105 broker-dealer funds were up $432.5 million to $159.23 billion.

"Last week's swings in stock prices had no discernible effect on money market fund assets," said Dr. Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist at the Institute. "And, with interest rates holding steady," he added, "asset growth came mostly from internal buildup rather than from new inflows."

The number of mutual funds were revised through the previous week ending June 6, (6/06), to reflect that two broker dealer funds merged with two general purpose funds, and to include two new broker-dealer funds. The figures also reflect one institutional fund that was reclassified to general purpose. The reported decrease of $804.8 million was revised to a decrease of $385.1 million (6/06).

The Institute reports the assets of money market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week and makes this data available to the public on a weekly basis. The Institute also reports monthly on three broad categories of funds. They are (1) short-term funds which include limited maturity municipal bond funds, (2) money market funds, and (3) all funds other than short-term funds -- such as stock, income, corporate bond and municipal bond funds.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - The Greater New York Savings Bank (NASDAQ: GRTR) announced today that its board of directors has adopted a shareholder rights plan designed to deter coercive or unfair takeover tactics and to prevent an acquiror from gaining control of the bank without offering a fair price to all of its shareholders.

Under the plan, preferred stock purchase rights will be distributed as a dividend at the rate of one right for each share of the Greater common stock held as of the close of business on June 25, 1990. The rights will expire on June 25, 2000.

Each right will entitle holders of the Greater common stock to buy one unit of preferred stock consisting of one one-hundredth of a share of a new series of junior participating preferred stock at an exercise price of $24. The rights will be exercisable only if a person: becomes an "integrated shareholder" as defined in Section 912 of the New York Business Corporation Law (i.e., individually or with its affiliates or associates acquires beneficial ownership of 20 percent or more of the Greater's common stock other than in connection with a firm commitment underwriting) or announces a tender or exchange offer upon consummation of which such person would acquire beneficial ownership of 20 percent or more of the bank's common stock.

If any person acquires 20 percent ownership of the Greater's common stock and becomes an interested shareholder other than pursuant to an offer for all shares which the independent directors of the Greater determine is fair to and otherwise in the best interests of the bank and its shareholders, each right not owned by such person or related parties will enable its holder to purchase, at the right's then current exercise price, shares of the bank's common stock (or, in certain circumstances as determined by the board, a combination of cash, property, common stock or other securities) having a value of twice the right's exercise price. In addition, if, during the time that there exists an interested shareholder, the Greater is involved in a merger or other business combination transaction with another person in which its shares of common stock are changed or converted, or sells 50 percent or more of its assets, earning power or cash flow to another person, each right that has not previously been exercised will entitle its holder to purchase, at the right's then current exercise price, shares of common stock of such other person having a value of twice the right's exercise price.

The Greater's board of directors generally will be entitled to redeem the rights at 1 cent per right at any time until the 10th day following the public announcement that any person has become an interested shareholder.

The Greater New York Savings Bank is an FDIC-insured, New York- chartered stock savings bank with assets of $3.0 billion, deposits of $2.2 billion and total stockholders' equity of $213 million, or 7.03 percent of total assets, at March 31, 1990. RAMSEY, NJ (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Responding to allegations made today by Honeywell Inc. (NYSE: HON) in a Section 337 complaint with the International Trade Commission (ITC), Minolta issued the following statement:

These are the same old charges by Honeywell that have been the subject of litigation for more than three years. As we have argued in federal court -- the proper forum for this dispute -- we believe the Honeywell patent claims in question are invalid and unenforceable.

The original allegations in this case were baseless. Repeating them in a new forum does not make them more accurate.

We believe that Honeywell's charges ignore the long history of autofocus camera development -- including significant breakthroughs by Minolta. The development of autofocus cameras dates back to the 1960s, with pioneering efforts by Minolta, Leitz, Agfa, Eastman Kodak and Polaroid, among others.

It is clear that Honeywell is trying to move this patent dispute into the political arena because they are unhappy with their case in federal court. Honeywell, which does not make or sell cameras, is asking the U.S. government to prevent Minolta -- and perhaps every other major camera manufacturer in the world -- from selling cameras in the United States.

In addition, by filing this complaint with the ITC, Honeywell has violated an agreement signed in 1988 in which both parties stipulated that the U.S. District Court in New Jersey would be the "exclusive forum" for resolving this dispute. We today asked the federal court to uphold this agreement and order Honeywell to withdraw its complaint.

PITTSBURGH (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Consolidated Natural Gas Company (NYSE: CNG) said today it received approval from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) for the final phase of a major project to provide new service to utilities in the U.S. Northeast.

Under plans approved by the FERC, the company's interstate pipeline unit, CNG Transmission Corporation, is authorized to construct underground gas storage facilities to provide 38 million cubic feet a day (Mmcf/d) of firm gas storage service to six retail gas distributors in the Northeast beginning in 1991, and an additional 41 Mmcf/d for four of them beginning in 1992. The project will also provide 20 Mmcf/d of storage service for Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation in 1992. CNG Transmission plans to spend $48 million to implement these new services.

Last year, the FERC approved earlier phases of the project that furnish up to 315 Mmcf/d of wintertime gas sales and firm storage service to a group of utilities primarily in New York and New Jersey known as the Associated PennEast Customers, or APEC.

The six companies to be served in the final phase include Colonial Gas Company, Long Island Lighting Company, Elizabethtown Gas Company, New Jersey Natural Gas Company, Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation, and Penn Fuel Gas, Inc.

ROCKAWAY, NJ (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - Osicom Technologies Inc. (NASDAQ: OSIC) losses for the year ended Jan. 31, 1990, totaled $5.95 million, or $1.91 a share, versus $2.97 million, or 96 cents a share, in the year ago period.

"The fiscal 1990 losses are the culmination of a broad business transition program to phase out of unprofitable products and businesses and strengthen our position in higher margin personal computer systems," said Parvinder S. Chadha, Osicom's CEO.

"A difficult, challenging period is over," he added, "and we are very encouraged about the future."

The decision to downsize and to exit low margin product lines, such as certain disk drives and other PC components, caused fiscal year 1990 revenue to drop to $83.9 million from $108 million a year ago, a strategic downsizing to position the company for sales of higher margin products for fiscal year 1991, the company said.

The company also said United Jersey Bank extended the deadline for a $3 million paydown of its revolving credit line to June 29, 1990, but the bank gave no assurance that the waiver would be extended. The company is in default of certain financial covenants. The bank, without obligation on its part, is amenable to considering the company's application for waivers.

Osicom officials said the company's ability to continue in the normal course of business is dependent upon it obtaining profitable operations, obtaining alternate financing to replace current debt, maintenance of trade debt, and the bank's forbearance not to recall the loan. Meanwhile, the company is negotiating with several sources for additional financing.

For the current year, Osicom said it expects personal computer systems it manufactures for others and its own labels to account for more than 40 percent of total sales, producing significantly higher gross profits. PC systems accounted for only 15 percent of fiscal year 1990 sales, with most of the growth in this category occurring in the fourth quarter.

Gross margins for fiscal year 1990 were 7.4 percent versus 8.2 percent in fiscal 1989. Among the material one-time items that impacted fiscal year 1990's margins were an increase in inventory reserves and write- downs. Although SG&A for the year dropped to $10.4 million from $11.2 million in fiscal year 1989, the real extent of the decrease was offset by charges related to the restructuring. The resized company currently operates at significantly lower overhead.

Officials said the company expects to post an operating profit for the first quarter of its current year. They also said sales for the second quarter, which ends July 31 and is traditionally a weak period for the industry, are seasonally healthy.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) PR NEWSWIRE - At 7 p.m. EDT today, Fred D. Finke, director for Special Supervision, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), declared The National City Bank of Denver, Denver insolvent. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) was appointed as receiver.

The bank's failure is largely attributed to inadequate lending practices of previous bank management. The depressed local economy made it difficult for new management to overcome the bank's problems.

Current management entered into an agreement with the OCC in mid- 1985 to address weaknesses and obtain new capital. A partial recapitalization was effected in 1989. However, losses evident in the bank's loan portfolio and on repossessed real estate exceeded available capital funds, resulting in today's insolvency.

The National City Bank of Denver received a national bank charter on July 1, 1927. On April 30, 1990, it had total assets of approximately $65 million.

The FDIC is expected to release additional information later today.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The House Agriculture Committee, after upgrading farm environmental programs, approved a massive farm bill early Thursday that would give farmers some freedom in deciding what to grow and create a marketing loan to combat a slump in soybean production.

The bill would succeed the five-year farm policy law that expires this year. Committee members made a dozen final changes to get the bill as close as possible to House spending targets for the coming five years.

With the changes, the price tag is nearly $55 billion for commodity support programs, about $1.5 billion higher than the target due mostly to a disputed estimate for the dairy program.

The farm bill ranges from commodity support programs to export promotion, overseas food aid and the food stamp program. Half of the Agriculture Department's budget each year goes to domestic feeding programs.

The environmental programs, expected to be a key point when the committee asks for votes from urban congressmen, were the final major section to be adopted. Most other provisions were approved before Memorial Day.

The committee toughened the ''swampbuster'' rule, created in 1985 to protect wetlands, and approved two new programs, one to buy easements to protect sensitive land and the other to help defray the cost for farmers who change their operations to avoid the risk of contaminating groundwater.

Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, and other members emphasized the steps farmers would be obligated to take to prevent erosion and to protect water quality.

''I want the American people to understand all money in this farm bill is not all subsidies to the producer. That's how they like to characterize it '' said Rep. Ron Marlene, R-Mont.

The Senate Agriculture Committee has been stalled for a month in a disagreement over crop support programs, which often are considered the core of the farm bill.

Budget pressures forced the House committee to abandon ambitious plans to index crop target prices to offset rising production costs and to set up a generous soybean marketing loan.

Instead, the panel was forced to freeze target prices for wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice at their current levels for the next five years.

However, it changed the formula for crop loans, so they would be calculated at 85 percent of average prices, which would mean a slight increase in rates.

The committee voted to create a marketing loan for soybeans and other oilseed crops with the soybean rate initially set at $5.25 a bushel, or about 75 cents higher than the current loan. The rate could be increased in later years but the committee tried to keep it low so it would stay below market prices and cost the government nothing.

Even at a curtailed level, proponents said the soybean marketing loan was a step to encourage farmers to grow more soybeans. U.S. acreage has fallen by 10 million acres in the past decade. Some analysts say soybean prices have been unable to compete with support payments available on corn and other crops.

The administration, using different price estimates than Congress, calculate the soybean marketing loan could cost $3.5 billion over five years.

A farmer with a marketing loan can sell the crop at the usually lower world price and pocket the difference between the selling price and the loan rate.

The ''planting flexibility'' program approved by the committee would give farmers the option of looking for money-making alternatives to their current mix of crops. Farmers could put up to 25 percent of the land now devoted to wheat, feed grains, cotton, rice and oilseed crops into the program. Crop loans would be available on the ''flex'' acres but not subsidy payments.

Planting flexiblity is intended to relieve complaints that farm program rules are so rigid farmers are locked into planting the same crop year after year in order to maintain eligibility for crop support payments.

The administration unsuccessfully proposed a full-fledged flexibility plan.

The environmental section of the bill was worked out during two weeks of meetings between committee leaders, farm groups and environmentalists. The final version reversed a subcommittee vote to weaken swampbuster, which has been the most controversial of the conservation programs created in 1985.

Under swampbuster, farmers risk the loss of all benefits if they drain a wetland and plant crops on it.

Committee leaders crafted a plan that calls for a more precise determination of wetlands and which allows for graduated penalties, rather than the single, ''drop dead'' penalty now available. First-time violators could lose $750 to $10,000 in farm payments and a requirement to restore the land.

The plan also makes it a violation to drain a wetland, rather than the current situation of drainage having to be coupled with planting of a crop.

On water quality, the package urges farmers in environmentally sensitive areas to seek government help in drawing up a plan to protect water supplies. Farmers could get up to $3,500 a year for adopting practices that preserve water quality and $1,500 a year to preserve wetlands or improve wildlife habitat. The bill sets a goal of enrolling 20 million acres.

In addition, the package would allow an additional 10 million acres to be enrolled in the long-term Conservation Reserve for a total of 45 million acres.

The package also would set a goal of acquiring easements on up to 2.5 million acres to protect water quality or preserve wetlands.

In Marshall County in Kansas, ''numerous'' tornadoes were sighted around the town of Marysville. Another tornado was reported east of Des Moines, Iowa. There were no immediate reports of damage, authorities said.

A fast-moving storm system that spawned at least 11 tornadoes in Illinois moved out of the state by early Thursday.

A severe storm Wednesday blew through the Rockford area and Chicago's northwestern suburbs, tearing the roofs off buildings, flipping over planes, blowing out windows and leaving thousands without power, officials said.

As many as 13,000 residences were without power in the Rockford area.

An upper-level low pressure system pressed into New Mexico, where isolated showers sprinkled the southeast corner of the state. Scattered thunderstorms also moved into Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

Fair and humid weather covered most of the South Thursday, with isolated thundershowers in Florida and Mississippi. Temperatures early Thursday ranged from 65 in Jacksonville, Fla., to 69 in Knoxville, Tenn., and 74 in Atlanta.

MENLO PARK, CA (JUNE 14) UPI - A strong earthquake struck the Philippines Thursday and caused damage on an island south of Manila, the U.S. Geological Survey reported.

The USGS said that its Golden, Colo., scientists measured the temblor at 6.9 on the Richter scale. They said its epicenter was 200 miles south of Manila near Panay Island.

The quake occurred at 3:41 p.m. Philippines time and was felt in varying degrees from Manila to the southern island of Mindanao.

''The earthquake was so strong the church steeple being constructed was dancing,'' Ilo Ilo police Lt. Joel Garingulo said by telephone. He said there had been no damage reports so far in the city, which was being lashed by a heavy rain.

Chemical foam back-fired aboard a blazing oil tanker in the Gulf of Mexico last night. The foam began feeding the flames on the Mega Borg... so firefighters quit using the chemical that normally retards fire. Firefighters have resumed spraying the tanker with water. The Coast Guard says that, despite the setback, the fire is still under control.

Federal officials are changing the location of the annual release of endangered sea turtles because of the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico. Two-thousand Kemp's ridley turtles will be released about 100 to 150 miles east of the spill... rather in the general area of the tanker fire.

A waterway between New Jersey and Staten Island is closed today... for the second time in a week... because of a spill. A leaking barge spilled 12-hundred gallons of gasoline into the Arthur Kill last night. Officials say they will re-open the waterway to ships when the fuel dissipates. It's expected to take several hours.

The Senate has voted to reduce logging and eliminate a federal subsidy for the timber industry in America's largest national forest... the Tongass in Alaska. Conservation groups prefer a stronger bill the House approved 11 months ago. A Senate-House conference committee will try to work out the differences.

New York City officials have put the finishing touches on proposed legislation to close major loopholes in the city's law imposing sanctions

MOSCOW (JUNE 14) UPI - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and his West German counterpart, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, will meet Monday for their second round of talks in a week on German unification, the official Tass news agency said Thursday.

The two foreign ministers will meet in Munster, West Germany, a week after a similar meeting on the ''external aspects'' of German unification in the Byelorussian city of Brest.

Shevardnadze and Genscher reported no breakthroughs on the key issue of united Germany's membership in NATO Western military alliance during six hours of discussions at Brest, but said they were confident of progress at later talks.

The Munster meeting is scheduled four days before the next round of the so-called two-plus-four talks involving the two Germanys and the four World War II victors - the United States, the Soviet Union, France and Britain.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 14) UPI - President Corazon Aquino's popularity rating has dropped to a record low 48 percent and more Filipinos are becoming increasingly pessimistic about the quality of life under her administration, an independent survey said Thursday.

The number of Filipinos who wants to retain key U.S. military bases in the Philippines increased by a point to 41 percent from last year, the survey by the Jesuit-run Ateneo de Manila University said.

The fifth poll by the respected university since 1988 covered 1,200 respondents nationwide. It was conducted in March - three months after the Dec. 1-9 coup attempt in which 119 people were killed and more than 500 were wounded.

Forty-eight percent of those surveyed said they were satisfied with Aquino's performance, down from 76 percent in February 1988 when the first Ateneo survey was conducted two years after she swept into power in a civilian-backed military revolt.

Only 21 percent believed the quality of life in the next 12 months will be better, a decrease from the 30 percent a year ago.

The Rev. Joaquin Bernas, Ateneo President, said ''the overall picture is one of pessimism'' when respondents were asked about their government.

Ninety-four percent of those surveyed said they should pray to improve their lives. Only 1 percent said they would lodge petitions with the government, the poll showed.

Asked what should happen to two strategic military bases in the Philippines, 41 percent said the facilities should be retained indefinitely. The approval rating a year ago was 40 percent.

However, the survey said the ratio of Filipinos who believed the bases should be removed increased from 18 percent in February 1989 to 29 percent in March 1990. About 30 percent of the respondents were undecided.

The number of Filipinos who have become aware of the presence of the facilities also increased from 64 percent in February 1989 to 77 percent this year.

The Philippines hosts Clark Air Base and subic Bay Naval Base, Washington's largest overseas facilities, and four smaller installations under a 47-year-old treaty that expires in 1991. The two govrnments are negotiating a renewal of the lease.

Eighty two percent of the respondents said last December's coup attempt - the sixth against Aquino - was ''wrong.''

Forty-two percent approved of Aquino's decision to seek U.S. air cover to quell the uprising, while 28 percent expressed disapproval.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 14) UPI - The Philippines agreed Thursday to grant temporary asylum to 255 Vietnamese rescued by U.S. ships after the U.N. High Commission for Refugees pledged to resettle them in three years, Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus said.

Manglapus told reporters arrangements were being made to remove the Vietnamese from ships docked at the U.S.-run Subic Bay Naval Base, ending a two-week impasse.

He said the Vietnamese would be temporarily housed at the refugee center on the island of Palawan, southwest of Manila.

Manglapus said UNHCR representative Sri Wijeretne met with him and gave assurances the refugee camps in the Philippines ''will be cleared in three years.''

First asylum countries in Asia have complained the ''open-ended'' operation of refugee camps was straining their resources.

The salvage ship USS Beaufort plucked 24 refugees from Vietnam May 24 and an additional 77 two days later en route to Subic, 50 miles north of Manila. The 101 refugees were transferred to the USS White Plains May 31.

Another boatload of 154 Vietnamese rescued last week arrived Wednesday aboard the assault ship USS Peleliu at Subic.

The Philippines previously granted diplomatic clearance swiftly to the landing of boat people picked up by U.S. vessels in the South China Sea, but reviewed its policy after first asylum countries protested at a UNHCR workshop in Manila last month U.S. opposition to the mandatory repatriation of boat people.

BEIJING (JUNE 14) UPI - Just 100 days away from China's first Asian Games, the government stepped up its propaganda blitz Thursday, exhorting harried construction workers to labor harder and apathetic citizens to rally behind the high-stakes event.

''Successfully host the Asian Games and win glory for the Chinese people - 100 days to go,'' read the headline of a front-page editorial in the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily.

The quadrennial festival, opening Sept. 27, is the first major international sporting event held in China. Officials consider it a crucial test of China's global prestige, especially after Beijing's crushing of nationwide pro-democracy protests a year ago.

Workers given time off from their jobs have been festooning major avenues leading to the Asian Games complex with brightly colored flags and posters encouraging workers to ''add patriotic spirit'' and ''step on the gas'' in completing preparations for the games.

Thousands of workers have been dispatched to work on unfinished projects citywide, including the widening of key streets, luxury hotel construction and whitewashing or rebuilding walls around the capital's ramshackle and often-crumbling neighborhoods.

Beijing residents have complained of being awakened many mornings by loudspeakers blaring the official Asian Games song and patriotic speeches imploring them to pitch in and make the games a success.

Chinese television has been filled with breathless news items and star-studded specials extolling the public virtues of hosting the Asian Games.

Chinese Olympic Committee Chairman He Zhenliang said the noisy propaganda campaign was justified even if some people were grousing.

''We want to draw bigger attention to the people,'' he told reporters at the Beijing airport, where he was meeting an arriving Taiwan sports delegation. ''It's only natural to have some people getting tired of hearing about it,'' he said with a smile.

Sports Minister Wu Shaozu, in an interview with the official Xinhua news agency, said construction of stadiums and training grounds was completed in May and efforts now are focused on training support staff, scheduling competitions and coordinating departments.

''We must plan everything carefully and make thorough checks on every detail to ensure a smooth games, 100 days before the opening ceremony,'' Wu said.

Nevertheless, the spanking new Asian Games complex in a northern Beijing suburb appears anything but ready for the 7,000 athletes, coaches and officials and tens of thousands of international visitors expected to converge there in September.

The sports complex rises from a dusty, debris-strewn plain, where hundreds of construction and landscape workers scurry or lounge about under searing late-spring sun.

Service workers at several just-opened international-class hotels and restaurants gather for crash lessons in hotel etiquette and English conversation, even as huge packs of Chinese tourists gawk through the ostentatious lobbies.

But because China's leadership is taking no chances on the success of the Asian Games, ''ordinary Chinese'' without special permits will be barred from the entire complex as of Aug. 1.

Adding to popular resentment, the government has told residents of other cities they are not welcome in Beijing during the games and has stopped selling rail and air tickets to the capital for those dates.

Trains that normally pass through Beijing will be rerouted through other cities during the games to prevent unauthorized stopovers, a government official disclosed privately.

Police and soldiers are being trained to suppress any dissent and have equipped with expensive imported crowd-control gear, the official said.

China's normally miserly Communist government is sparing little expense for the Asian Games. One government official complained privately that the $530 million official budget represents only a small fraction of actual spending.

Not included, for example, are the $320 million loan that financed housing for visiting athletes and the state-owned four-star Intercontinental Hotel or the huge outlays for Beijing's massive facelift.

''China's leaders are so irresponsible,'' the disgruntled official said. ''They never think of the consequences. They just do what they like. If this was America, their wastefulness would be exposed and they'd be forced from office.''

BEIJING (JUNE 14) UPI - A senior Soviet official, concluding four days of talks in Beijing, predicted Thursday an initial compromise would be reached ''very soon'' on a political settlement for Cambodia but cautioned that disagreement remained on details.

''Many countries have been active in the process, and I think we should reach agreement as soon as possible,'' said Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Igor Rogachev. ''The time has come. Conditions are ripe.''

Rogachev, the Soviet Union's chief envoy on Cambodia, spoke to reporters at the Beijing airport before returning to Moscow after four days of talks with Chinese officials, including Foreign Minister Qian Qichen.

China is the key military backer of the three-faction resistance fighting an 11-year-old guerrilla war against the Vietnam-sponsored Cambodian government. The Soviet Union is the chief underwriter of Vietnam, which occupied Cambodia for a decade until last year.

Peace efforts have snagged largely on the resistance coalition's demands that the communist Khmer Rouge, its strongest military faction, be included in a transition government that would follow a cease-fire. Hanoi and Phnom Penh have rejected any Khmer Rouge role.

But Rogachev said a compromise was near on a so-called Supreme National Council, including the Khmer Rouge, that would help run Cambodia during the transition period until elections are held, coupled with United Nations administration of the country.

Recent negotiations have focused on an Australian proposal that the U.N. administer Cambodia before elections. Rogachev warned, however, that disagreement remained on the plan's details.

''I think we shall very soon witness the establishment of the Supreme National Council, with all Cambodian parties,'' Rogachev said.

''The problem is what functions will be delegated to the council, how will we divide the functions between the council and the U.N. administration,'' he added.

The council is seen as a way to include the Khmer Rouge while still addressing concerns the group not return to power in Cambodia. The Khmer Rouge was ousted from Phnom Penh by the 1978 Vietnamese invasion after a four-year reign of terror.

Despite the apparent failure of a cease-fire agreement after talks last week in Tokyo between Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the resistance leader, Rogachev said he remained optimistic due to the latest talks between China and Vietnam.

Assistant Chinese Foreign Minister Xu Dunxin left Hanoi Thursday after a six-day visit, the first by a ranking Chinese official in years to patch up their poor relations. Xu met with Vietnamese officials on bilateral ties and Cambodia.

China's official Xinhua news agency reported only that Xu ''had an unofficial exchange of views'' with a Vietnamese deputy foreign minister on a political settlement for Cambodia, but foreign diplomats have cited the visit itself as a sign of progress.

''I think we have already crossed the middle of the river,'' Rogachev said. ''Of course, some different opinions still exist.''

He said the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, would meet again on Cambodia next month in Paris with the four Cambodian factions present. The permanent U.N. council members are the United States the Soviet Union, China, France and Britain.

Rogachev, who arrived in Beijing Sunday, said he also briefed Chinese officials on the Washington summit between President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, and described Chinese reaction as ''positive.''

He also said there would be ''new impetus'' to Soviet-Chinese talks on easing tension along the two nation's border, adding a Chinese delegation would travel to Moscow next month to continue those negotiations.

BEIJING (JUNE 14) UPI - The Chinese army and the city of Beijing have opened a special training base for university students, saying their growing military indoctrination program now can accommodate 5,000 students a year, the state-run media reported Thursday.

The first three-week session, which began Tuesday, includes 1,000 members of the 1989 freshman class at Beijing's prestigious People's University, the second Beijing college targeted for such training, the official Guangming Daily said.

The special training purportedly aims to instill in college students a sense of military discipline while sharpening their knowledge of Communist Party ideology.

Military training of China's 2 million university and college students, and particularly first-year students, has been stepped up in the year since the army crushed the student-led pro-democracy movement last June.

With the addition of the new training base, the location of which was not disclosed, 60 percent of the capital's first-year collegians - about 5,000 a year - can be trained, Guangming Daily said.

The 1989 freshman class at China's flagship Beijing University was taken to a military base west of the capital for most of the academic year for special military indoctrination. The college was at the vanguard of last year's student-led demonstrations.

As of 1985, only four of Beijing's many colleges and universities had established a military training curriculum, the newspaper said.

CONCORD, NH (JUNE 14) UPI - Prosecutors conducted a bogus investigation in their attempt to win a fur-smuggling conviction against a physician married to a prominent Bush administration official, a defense attorney said.

Attorney W. Michael Dunn gave his closing arguments Wednesday at the trial of Constantine ''Gus'' Hampers of Dublin, N.H., and Weston, Mass. Hampers faces 53 years in prison and a $2.5 million fine if convicted on 13 charges of smuggling jaguar, ocelot and mountain lion skins into the United States.

''(Prosecutors) were protecting their investigation'' by bringing Hampers to trial on unsubstantiated charges, Dunn said in U.S. District Court during a rambling two-hour closing argument as five stuffed cats glared at jurors with open maws in the courtroom.

Jurors were scheduled to begin deliberations Thursday.

Prosecutor Suzanne Hayden countered Dunn's charge by saying the investigation proved Hampers knowingly broke Mexican and American import and export laws when he had the pelts brought into the United States from Mexico.

Hampers and Edward B. Hager of Lyndeborough, N.H., hunted the cats on two $10,000 safaris to Mexico in March 1985 and April 1986.

They then had a professional hunter, Tony Rivera, bring the pelts from Mexico to Las Vegas and took the pelts to a Colorado taxidermist, James Bensley, to have them stuffed.

Prosecutors said the imports and some of the kills were illegal and both men knew it.

''Ted Hager was told he could shoot those cats but he couldn't bring them into the country,'' Hayden said.

Hager, who ran unsuccessfully for the Republican Senate nomination in 1980 pleaded guilty in late May to one count of knowingly importing pelts. He was put on one year probation and fined $75,000.

Hampers also knew he was breaking the law, Hayden said.

''This is a detailed man but he doesn't even check to see if the animal he kills is allowed in the United States?'' Hayden said. ''He intended to commit the crime and he intended not to get caught.''

Defense attorneys do not dispute that Hampers broke laws. They dispute that he knew about it, which prosecutors must prove. Hampers' attorney maintains he did not know he was breaking any laws because he relied on professional hunters and safari organizers to get the necessary permits.

''He never saw a permit in his life,'' Dunn said.

Hampers is married to Joyce Hampers, assistant secretary for economic development in the Commerce Department. She has been in the courtroom throughout the trial.

Hampers is a former Harvard University professor who worked to improve the dialysis machine used by kidney patients.

His words were... ''When you get serious about peace, call.''

Baker indicated... and State Department officials confirmed... he is on the brink of dropping his mediation effort unless he receives appropriate responses from Israel.

Baker for the first time blamed Israel for the breakdown in Middle East peace negotiations. At a hearing of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Baker also said the absence of a peace process means the danger of war in the Middle East is as high as it was in 1967 before the Arab-Israeli war.

Baker said a minor point led the Israelis to break off the mediation that he had been directing.

The secretary of state also said the Bush administration is still considering breaking off the talks it has held with the Palestine Liberation Organization since 1988. He said the P-L-O has to make clear its policy of renouncing terrorism.

After more than 70 years of communism... the Soviet Parliament has approved the principle of a transition to a regulated market economy.

The resolution approving a move toward a modified market system... ordered the government to develop a specific reform program by September.

One Soviet economic minister said the new package was part of what he called ''the biggest changes in the entire history of the state.''

However, the parliament postponed until today a vote on a measure to triple bread prices. Bread in the Soviet Union is so cheap at 40 cents that a loaf that farmers feed it to their cattle. In all, subsidies on meat, milk and bread cost the Soviet government at least 120-BILLION dollars annually.

Last month's initial announcements of the planned price hikes for bread and bread products set off panic buying across the country. Moscow then restricted purchases of products to residents of the capital and the Moscow region.

The last Soviet attempt to introduce a market-style economy was the so-called New Economic Policy of 1921-28. It was cancelled by Josef Stalin.

But this year Old Glory is on everyone's mind.

This week the Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that burning the American flag is a constitutionally protected right under the First Amendment guaranteeing free speech.

President Bush is expected to use the holiday to push for a Constitutional Amendment prohibiting desecration of the flag... and Republicans on Capitol Hill also plan to add their support.

NOT everyone supports the Bush proposal. Groups such as the American Bar Association plan to fight the amendment. They warn that allowing new limits on free speech would set a dangerous precedent.

The suggested amendment took its first steps yesterday when a House panel voted 5-3 along party lines to recommend the amendment's defeat in the full Judiciary Committee.

Flag Day was established in 1916... and, ever since, Americans have used June 14th to celebrate the birth of the Stars and Stripes, which was approved by the Continental Congress on this date in 1777.

MIAMI (JUNE 14) UPI - A powerful bomb exploded early Thursday at the Cuban Museum of Arts and Culture, causing extensive damage to the front of the building in what authorities said was an act of political terrorism.

The museum, which has been at the center of a political controversy within Miami's large Cuban community, was rocked by the explosion shortly before 1:30 a.m., said police spokesman Angelo Bitsis.

Osvaldo Monzon, the museum's executive director, said the blast damaged the front of the building and three works of art inside, valued at $10,000.

''There was no one inside at the time,'' he said.

Bitsis said the bomb blasted a small crater in the sidewalk in front of the building, about 1 foot in diameter and 2 inches deep.

''The FBI has classified this as a political terrorist act,'' he said.

Monzon said the FBI evacuated nearby homes following the blast and established a four-block perimeter around the building, as agents searched for clues.

Monzon said a bomb had exploded outside the museum in 1988.

''This is much more extensive. The FBI described it as a high density bomb. The other was a projectile,'' he said.

''At this point, I have absolutely no idea why anyone would want to cause such destruction,'' he said. ''I think the community is in a tense situation right now, when very important subjects are being discussed,'' including the possibility of a dialogue between exiles and the Cuban government.

''I believe the museum is being targeted because it took the role of a museum seriously and refused to censor art,'' Monzon said. ''The museum is a cultural institution. It has no political stand. It does have a very strong stand that art should not be censored on the basis of a political ideology.''

Miami's Cuban community has been rocked by periodic explosions for a number of years. Most of those bombings have been linked to political disputes.

The museum touched off a controversy in 1988 when it auctioned off a number of paintings by Cuban artists. A group of museum directors resigned at the time, charging that some of the artists had not renounced all ties with Cuban dictator Fidel Castro.

The museum was rocked by an explosion several weeks later, Monzon said.

The disgruntled directors later formed a group called the Cuban Museum Rescue Committee, and since have sought to oust the current management, which is considered more moderate and pragmatic.

In December, the group convinced the Miami City Council to vote to evict the museum, which occupies a city-owned building, but the council later backed down after learning it did not have legal grounds to proceed.

The museum currently is displaying works by artists who left Cuba in the 1980 boatlift from Mariel. Monzon said the exhibit has not been controversial.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS (JUNE 14) UPI - Thomas Cole's ''The Garden of Eden,'' a masterpiece of American painting thought lost for almost 160 years, has been acquired by the Amon Carter Museum, officials announced Wednesday.

''Under terms of the acquisition, the museum cannot reveal the name of the previous owners nor terms of the transaction,'' said William J. Harkins, Amon Carter's public affairs coordinator.

The 38 1/2-by-52 3/4-inch painting is scheduled to be seen by the public for the first time since 1831 when the museum places it on display Friday.

Harkins said the family that had quietly owned ''The Garden of Eden'' for generations ''contacted the Amon Carter with their offer because of the high reputation of the museum's American collection.''

Cole, who was born in 1801 and died in 1848, was one of the founders of the first consciously American landscape schools of painting, the Hudson River School, which identified the nation's unspoiled mountains and rivers with strong spiritual values.

Cole completed ''The Garden of Eden'' in early 1829 and Bank of New York President Charles Wilkes bought it that year, reportedly for what was then a substantial price of $400.

The painting dropped from sight in 1831, although it remained known through Cole's preliminary paintings, descriptions by his contemporaries and an engraving by James Smillie that served as the frontispiece to a 1831 edition of the Bible.

Cole was quite familiar with the New England landscape. The background mountain of ''The Garden of Eden'' appears to be Mount Chocorua in New Hampshire, with palm trees planted among the native oaks and hardwoods. The work also contains detailed images of deer, elephants, swans, butterflies and even small Adam and Eve figures with their arms raised toward the rising sun.

Cole scholar Ellwood C. Parry III said, ''The rediscovery of this major painting illuminates Thomas Cole's main enterprise in the later 1820s - that is, the attempt to raise landscape to the level of history painting wherein the artist could retell important stories for the moral edification of mankind.''

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 14) UPI - The widespread European practice of breweries owning pubs and taverns through "tying" arrangements was given new life Thursday by European Community competition officials.

The arrangements have made "Bass" and "John Courage" signs commonplace over the doors of British pubs selling only those brands, and similar conditions exist throughout northern Europe.

"No general change is required in Community rules," said the EC executive Commission, which in 1983 granted such tying arrangements a block exemption from EC competition rules through 1997.

The EC said, however, it would "evaluate whether further measures are needed" in Great Britain, where 62 percent of all beer sales are through the tied-house system, compared to only 35 percent in Belgium and 25 percent in West Germany. The EC will first judge the effect of new British rules limiting breweries to 2,000 owned-and-operated pubs.

The Commission noted a "proliferation" of small- and medium-sized breweries in countries with tying arrangements. In contrast, countries with "open" systems are dominated by one or two mammoth breweries - such as Budweiser in the United States, Guinness in Ireland, and Carlsberg in Denmark. "It is paradoxical because you would expect new competition to be excluded in countries with close tying arrangements," said an EC spokesman.

The EC Commission also concluded that national law, rather than EC rules, should apply to tying arrangements with small breweries, and said it would examine the growing trend toward exclusive marketing agreements between major breweries in different countries.

The Brewers Society in London, an industry trade group, said it was relieved the tying arrangements survived, but reserved further comment until it studied the decision by Sir Leon Brittan, the EC competition commissioner. When the probe was announced in March 1989, brewery stocks dipped on the London Stock Exchange.

Beer is big business in Europe, generating a trade surplus equal to $727 million for the 12 EC countries in 1988. Exports from the EC account for 95 percent of all world trade in beer, but only four percent of all beer consumed in the Community has crossed a national border.

The tied-house system exists only in Britain, Belgium, Germany, France, Holland, and Luxembourg. Brewers in those countries say consumer brand loyalty and "static" demand, rather than tying arrangements, are preventing market penetration of new brands. "Given these facts, there is not enough evidence to justify (a change) at this time," the EC Commission concluded.

RANGOON, BURMA (JUNE 14) UPI - A youth-based political party Thursday demanded the release of opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi from house arrest, saying her leadership was necessary to tackle Burma's many problems.

Ba Tin Swe, president the Patriotic Youths League, said the massive popular support given to Aung San Suu Kyi's National League for Democracy in the May 27 elections must be treated as a ''lawfully expressed mandate of the entire people'' for her to lead the country back to democracy after 28 years of military domination.

''We believe that only she and she alone can tackle the problem of ensuring a speedy and peaceful transfer of power to the people and of forming a firm government,'' he said.

He said only Aung San Suu Kyi, the charismatic daughter of Burma's independence hero Gen. Aung San, could settle the problems of ''students, youths, monks still held in detention, of student-escapees at border regions, and of restoring peace to the country (by ending a civil war with ethnic minorities).''

''We fully believe that these problems can be solved only by her, working hand in hand with experienced political leaders, and student and ethnic monority leaders,'' he said.

Aung San Suu Kyi, 45, has been under house arrest since July 20 following a series of political speeches and rallies that the military said amounted to acts of confrontation with the military junta which calls itself the State Law and Order Restoration Council.

The one-year house-arrest, ordered by the military under the law for the protection of the state from saboteurs, will expire on July 19, but can be extended for another year if the junta has reason to suspect she will continue in her ''confrontational tactics.''

The Youths League, a registered political party that fielded only three candidates in the elections, is the first political party to demand the release of Aung San Suu Kyi.

Even her own party has not yet done so directly.

''If I were the (junta), I would release Aung San Suu Kyi before anyone has asked for it, said Kyi Maung, the ranking NLD leader.

He said the question of her release will be taken up when the NLD eventually begins negotiations with the government on the transfer of power.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Wholesale prices nationwide edged up 0.3 percent in May on higher food costs after three consecutive monthly declines, the Labor Department reported Thursday. The increase was generally in line with forecasts by private economists.

"We are neither veering toward recession or in a situation where inflation is accelerating rapidly," said Ron Schreidman, vice president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors.

Wholesale food prices surged 0.6 percent last month, offsetting a one percent decline in wholesale energy prices, according to the monthly report compiled by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

For the first five months of the year, wholesale prices were up four percent at an annual rate, a government spokesman said. The government's Producer Price Index for May finished at 117.7 with 100 equal to $100 in 1982.

"The basic picture is inflation is still there, but at a much subdued rate

" said Robert Dederick, chief economist at Northern Trust in Chicago. "Basically inflation at the producer level is becoming less of a problem."

Dederick said the Federal Reserve Board's campaign to limit economic growth, by keeping interest rates high, "is having its intended effect on reducing inflation at the producer level." But "there's little evidence of it holding down inflation at the consumer level," the economist indicated.

Although wholesale prices for foods dropped 0.6 percent in April and March the May increase was expected by analysts. "Price increases accelerated for fish, dairy products, pasta, and processed turkeys," the Labor Department said.

Pork and chicken prices were up, egg and fresh fruit prices were down, and wholesale price increases slowed for beef, baked goods, coffee, and rice, the department said.

On the energy front, gasoline prices fell 2.1 percent, home heating oil was off by 6.2 percent but natural gas prices increased 0.9 percent, the government report said. May wholesale prices also increased for tobacco and footwear, but dropped for alcohol and cars.

The Labor Department said May's 0.3 percent overall increase follows declines of 0.3 percent in April, 0.2 percent in March and 0.1 percent in February. In January, wholesale prices soared 1.9 percent after December's cold snap.

Not counting the volatile food and energy categories, wholesale prices were up 0.2 percent in May, the same as in April, the department said. The report also said May wholesale prices for crude goods and intermediate goods fell 0.1 percent.

NASHVILLE, TN (JUNE 14) UPI - Tennessee flexed its economic muscle in 1989 by leading the South in creation of jobs and trailing only Texas in manufacturing investment, the state reported Thursday. "We are sustaining our economic momentum through new capital investments in Tennessee operations and new jobs for our citizens," Gov. Ned McWherter said.

More than 28,500 jobs were created in Tennessee last year, the most in the state in 16 years and the most in the 17 states composing the Southeastern Industrial Development Council.

BEIJING (JUNE 14) UPI - A crackdown on armies of gold prospectors and improvements in transportation have yielded a spurt in gold output, easing official worries about China's ability to meet looming foreign debt obligations, the state-run press said Thursday.

China's gold production shot up a record 36.3 percent in the first five months of 1990 over the same period in 1989, the official English-language China Daily reported.

Authorities expect the industry will produce 6.8 percent more gold this year than in 1989, a State Gold Admnistration official told the newspaper. The yearly growth nevertheless will not keep pace with the gold industry's recent record of ten percent annual increases, the official said.

The newspaper said revenues from the increased gold production will go far to allay official concerns that China may lack sufficient foreign exchange to meet a mounting schedule of foreign debt repayments expected to peak at $10 billion in 1992.

China's debt to foreign lenders stands at about $41.3 billion and nervous central government authorities have sharply curbed outlays of foreign exchange to avert a cash crunch when the loan payments come due.

The Gold Administration official attributed some of the spurt in gold production to key improvements in transportation, assuring more timely shipments of fuel and ore and more reliable supplies of electricity.

But he also praised the effect of a ban on most prospecting by huge numbers of private miners, who had been competing with state-run mines in China's gold provinces of Shandong, Henan, and Heilongjiang.

"The industry had been threatened by destructive digging by tens of thousands of private miners who had damaged at least 100 gold mines, causing the country to lose tens of thousands of ounces of gold every year " the daily quoted the official as saying.

Strict new rules ousted operators of private collective mines from areas where state-run mines are operating, the official said. The gold-mining industry is investing about $234 million to boost output this year, up slightly from the $223 million spent last year. Nine new mines are scheduled to begin operations this year.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 14) UPI - The European Community's executive Commission proposed Thursday to establish a customs union with East Germany pending that country's inclusion in the 12-nation bloc.

The step ''represents one of the first concrete proofs of the Community's committment to the process of German unification,'' said Christiane Scrivener, commissioner for fiscal matters and customs unions.

The proposal, to be approved by the council of ministers, provides for ''the establishment of a de facto customs union between the European Community and the German Democratic Republic in the period preceding unification between the German Federal Republic and the GDR,'' a Commission statement said.

A treaty concluded recently by the two Germanys provides for establishing monetary union on July 1, and progressive East German integration into West Germany's economic and social system, leading to formal unification.

Such unification automatically entails inclusion of East Germany into the Community's territory.

Under the customs union system, the European Community and East Germany would refrain from applying customs duties or quantitative restrictions on their trade exchanges.

''To enable all Community member states to participate in the economic construction of the GDR, it is important that goods from the whole European Community can have access at equal conditions to that country,'' the Commission statement said.

Up to now, the border between West and East Germany also was the Community's external frontier, a situation bound to disappear upon German unification. East Germany's outer border will then become the Community's external frontier.

The Commission said that would imply East Germany applying European Community customs rules in its trade exchanges with non-European Community states, such as the Community's common customs tariffs for imports from non-member countries.

The Commission said establishment of a customs union would not affect agreements East Germany has concluded with non-European Community states, such as obligations to export some goods to other Comecon countries or to import from them.

East Germany, however, will have to guarantee that European Community customs rules toward these countries are not bypassed - for example, that customs duties are levied on imports according to the common European Community tariffs.

The Commission at the same time made a similar proposal for trade in farm and fisheries products between East Germany and the European Community during the interim period. East Germany should no longer collect levies on farm imports from the Community nor grant export subsidies for exports to European Community countries, and the Community will do the same.

East Germany will have to introduce the mechanisms used by the European Community in its common agricultural policy, such as its guaranteed prices for farm products, market regulating systems and levies on imports from non-member states.

A spokesman said East German authorities had indicated they were ready to introduce immediately the European Community's common agricultural policy rules.

During the interim period, East Germany must ensure that farm imports from non-European Community states do not end up in other European Community countries and make sure it does not apply to them measures deviating from Community rules, the spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - American business inventories increased 0.1 percent in April as total sales fell 1.1 percent during the month, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The amount of goods stocked in warehouses during April rose to $794.5 billion after $793.7 billion in March and $794 billion in February, according to the report compiled by the department's Census Bureau.

An increase in inventories suggests businesses are failing to keep in step with customer demand, and the monthly sales figures indicate buyers were being conservative with their hard-earned money.

But the overall 0.1 percent increase in business inventories in April was expected by many private economists after months of rather steady declines in goods stockpiles.

"Businesses have held net inventory accumulation to zero over the last six months, well below the 0.6 percent average monthly increase that prevailed prior to last autumn," analysts said at Fuji Securities in Chicago.

Manufacturers' inventories increased 0.1 percent in April, while the inventories of retail businesses climbed 0.3 percent and wholesale inventories dipped 0.2 percent, the government said.

The Commerce Department also said that total April sales stood at $533 billion after rising to $538.9 billion in March from $535.9 billion in February, while the time it took to clear inventories edged up during April.

Manufacturers' sales fell 1.2 percnt in April, while sales at retailers were off 0.9 percent during the month and wholesales repored a one percent decline in sales, the government said. All the statistics were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - A supplement intended to prevent copper deficiency in beef cattle is being recalled due to the deaths of 240 cattle and calves, the Food and Drug Administration announced Thursday.

FDA officials also warned cattle producers to immediately stop giving the supplement, called Bovi-Cu, to their livestock.

Since October, the agency has received reports of 240 cattle deaths attributed to copper toxicity following injections of Bovi-Cu and reports continue to come in.

The developer of Bovi-Cu, Veterinary Research and Development Inc. of Truckee, Calif., has agreed to the recall, the FDA said. The product is manufactured by Anthony Products of Arcadia, Calif., and bears that label.

Since the non-prescription veterinary supplement was approved in April 1989, about 3,723 100-milligram vials have been shipped to distributors in California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oregon and Texas, the FDA said.

Cattle producers should return unused vials of Bovi-Cu to their places of purchase, the FDA said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - U.S. Trade Representative Carla A. Hills Thursday said she would not retaliate against India's "unreasonable" insurance and investment policies.

Hills indicated she has determined India's practices on foreign investment and the activities of foreign insurance companies in its national market "are unreasonable and burden or restrict U.S. commerce."

She noted, nevertheless, that "retaliation is inappropriate at this time given the ongoing negotiations on services and investments in the Uruguay Round of global trade talks."

The Uruguay Round of the Geneva-based General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the global organization that seeks to lift barriers to trade, is discussing how to liberalize foreign investments policies, world trade, textiles, agricultural products and services, and intellectual property protection. GATT also is trying to end export quotas and subsidies. The organization has a December deadline to reach an agreement.

Hills said if the Uruguay Round does not succeed in resolving the U.S. conflicts with India, "a post-Uruguay Round review will determine whether action under Section 301 of U.S. trade law is warranted."

The so-called "Super 301" allows the U.S. administration to engage in direct negotiations with a country to overcome commercial or investment conflicts. Lack of U.S. success can lead to retaliation, such as the imposition of punitive tariffs.

Hills' office said that India on May 31 announced measures to reduce the government's role in approving foreign investments under certain circumstances and exempt those investments from the requirements stipulating use of local materials or export of a portion of production.

The government of India has said that it will not negotiate trade issues with the United States under threats of retaliation. Many U.S. insurance companies have seen themselves barred from the Indian market due to the country's restrictive laws on foreign investment.

STRASBOURG, FRANCE (JUNE 14) UPI - The European Parliament, in a major victory for black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, easily adopted a resolution Thursday urging that full economic sanctions be maintained against South Africa.

The 177-47 vote with five abstentions came one day after Mandela told the Parliament that even a partial lifting of sanctions would be unacceptable to his country's black majority.

European Parliament resolutions express the opinion of the legislative body but do not have the power of law. The issue of maintaining sanctions against the Pretoria government will be decided at a summit of the 12-member European Economic Community in Dublin at the end of June.

''It would be ill timed for the European Community to abandon its policy of sanctions against apartheid before an agreement to install a new constitutional order in South Africa is reached,'' the resolution said.

The resolution acknowledged that progress had been made in race relations in South Africa and expressed its support for negotiations sponsored by the United Nations leading to a one-man, one-vote constitutional system.

Although the text was easily approved, many moderate deputies said they would have preferred a more flexible policy to encourage South African President Frederk de Klerk in his efforts to abolish apartheid.

In an emotional speech before the Parliament Wednesday, Mandela repeated his call for maintaining full sanctions.

''It is not yet the moment (to lift sanctions) because police repression is still part of the reality of our daily lives,'' he said.

''We could not accept even a partial symbolic lifting for sports, for example,'' Mandela added.

SEATTLE (JUNE 14) UPI - Olympia Broadcasting Corp., owner of eight radio stations across the country, has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy status, seeking shelter from creditors while reorganizing its finances.

The Seattle-based company listed assets of $21.9 million and liabilities of $38 million.

Its liabilities include about $6 million of secured debt and about $23.4 million in subordinated unsecured debentures due Nov. 1, 1996.

The company said the filing does not include Olympia Broadcast Networks, its radio networks subsidiary, or any of the subsidiaries that own its radio braodcasting stations.

Company executives said in a prepared statement the purpose of the filing is to permit an orderly restructuring of its debt.

''I have no more information that I can give you at this time,'' said Vice President of Finance Mitchell I. Hymowitz.

Olympia Broadcasting is a publicly held group broadcaster that owns eight radio stations in Kansas City, Mo.; Fresno, Calif.; and Spokane, Anchorage and Fairbanks, Alaska.

Through its Olympia Broadcasting Networks subsidiary, the company produces sports, entertainment and information radio network programs distributed to more than 1,700 radio stations.

The company is seeking offers for the purchase of its radio broadcasting stations. On June 8, it signed an agreement to sell radio station KRZR-FM in Fresno for $1.5 million.

The company lost $2 million for the quarter ended Mar. 31 on revenue of $3.5 million.

Olympia ran into trouble making interest payments while embroiled in a dispute with three companies over radio station sales last year.

Commonwealth Broadcasting, of San Diego, accused Olympia of misrepresenting the financial status of a radio station it had purchased. Bingham Broadcasting of Alaska, which is based in Seattle, filed suit against Olympia, charging it was owed $1.48 million from the 1985 purchase of two radio stations. A Texas firm then backed out of another deal.

GALVESTON, TX (JUNE 14) UPI - The efforts to avoid a major oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico from the disabled tanker Mega Borg is creating a huge bill for the company ultimately found liable for the disaster.

''It probably will approach a million pretty quickly, but I don't think we're there yet,'' said Jim O'Brien, owner of O'Brien Oil Pollution Services Inc., or OOPS, a Gretna, La., spill consulting firm.

''At least within another day or so it wil certainly be there, if it's not there now.''

O'Brien said he was hired by the owners of the 38 million gallons of light crude carried by the Norwegian tanker rocked by explosions last weekend.

The Coast Guard estimates 3 million gallons of the crude has spilled into the Gulf, although most of that has evaporated or was burned off in a huge fire that followed the explosions.

Only a fraction of the estimated 12,000 to 40,000 gallons of crude remaining in the water had been picked up by skimmers by Thursday.

The oil is owned by Elf Trading Inc., a Houston-based branch of the French oil company Elf Aquitaine.

Elf contracted O'Brien to work with their own specialists in containing the spill. But the company also has said it does not believe it has any liability for the accident or the spill.

O'Brien, who said he has worked on every major oil spill in the Western Hemisphere in the last decade, has marshalled forces to contain oil that spills from the stricken tanker 57 miles southeast of Galveston.

''We've probably got eight or 10 different companies out there,'' he said, adding up to 75 people are involved in oil skimming operations and another 40-50 crewmen are operating the skimming vessels.

The count does not include any subcontractors hired by Smit American Salvage Inc., the firm hired by the Mega Borg's owners to fight the fire and salvage the vessel.

OOPS has brought in oil-containment and cleanup equipment from throughout the Gulf Coast, San Francisco, Santa Barbara and Long Beach, Calif., and additional equipment is expected from the Northeast.

O'Brien said he could not predict how much the salvage and spill response eventually will cost. In fact, he said, he does not know how much of the cargo owners' money he has spent since Saturday.

''There are mobilization charges that you don't become aware of or you ater in the spill,'' he said. ''There's scientific data collection and many other things.''

Which company pays for what likely will be worked out later, he said.

''It's all a matter of legal language, legal discussion, legal negotiations,'' he said. ''They're (Elf) not necessarily responsible. They've elected to say that they're willing to do the spill response.''

(JUNE 14) UPI - The Commerce Department says American business inventories gained one-tenth of one percent during April as total sales fell one-point-one percent for the month. The government says the amount of goods stockpiled in warehouses in April rose to 794 and one-half dollars. An increase in inventories can be a sign businesses are failing to keep in step with customer demand. The monthly sales figure may show buyers are being conservative with their cash.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - A report that the price of cocaine is up sharply shows that anti-drug efforts in this country and Latin America are having a ''real impact,'' drug policy chief William Bennett said Thursday.

''We are beginning to have some very positive effect on the flow of cocaine ... some real impact is occurring,'' Bennett said following a report in The New York Times.

The paper reported that for the first time in 10 years the wholesale price of cocaine is rising sharply in New York and other American cities. The price has jumped by more than 40 percent since December in New York City and Los Angeles, the report said.

Bennett, at a news conference with House Republicans to announce a new crime bill, said he could not vouch for the figures cited by the Times because he did not know what they were counting.

''What you look for are trends,'' he said, calling the report encouraging.

Bennett cautioned that ''no one should be lulled into thinking this is the end. We have a long summer ahead of us.''

He predicted additional violence and crime in communities where cocaine supplies are reduced. ''There will be the same number of dogs fighting over a smaller number of bones.''

Bennett said the anti-drug strategy is ''having some impact out there in America. The thing, I believe, is starting to turn our way.''

''We can help this scourge end on schedule or maybe even ahead of schedule. We've got a long way to go, but we're headed in the right direction. ... What we're doing is actually having some effect. ... We're putting some pressure on drug traffickers.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The Supreme Court upheld Thursday a $1.3 million verdict against Texaco Inc. for price discrimination in a case that could force major changes in the product distribution practices of businesses everywhere.

In an unanimous ruling by Justice John Paul Stevens, the court affirmed a ruling by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the jury verdict against the oil giant. The court rejected Texaco's arguments that it did not discriminate in price nor injure competition.

Stevens said that to accept Texaco's arguments would "create a blanket exemption for all functional discounts. Indeed, carried to its logical conclusion, it would exempt all price differentials except those given to competing purchasers."

At issue in the case was whether manufacturers such as Texaco can sell their product to wholesalers at a lower price than to retailers if such pricing results in less retail competition.

A federal jury in Washington state found Texaco guilty of price discrimination for selling gas to 11 Spokane retailers at higher prices than to two independent wholesalers, who in turn sold the gas to other retailers who competed with the Texaco stations.

A federal law known as the Robinson-Patman Act generally prohibits the sale of like goods to different purchasers at a different price, but allows manufacturers to offer discounts to wholesalers to compensate them for the distributional services they perform.

In this case, the jury concluded that the wholesale discount was illegal because it did not merely reflect the wholesaler's distribution costs, but was passed on to other retailers whose clientele was the same as the Texaco retailers.

The case began in 1976 when Ricky Hasbrouck, owner of Rick's Texaco in Spokane, Wash., filed suit along with ten other station owners accusing Texaco of price discrimination. The suit alleged that from 1972 until 1981 Texaco sold gas at lower prices to John Dompier Oil Co. and Gull Oil Co., both which supplied and operated a chain of retail stations in Spokane.

During a three-week trial, the Texaco station owners presented testimony that they had lost sales and profits as a result of the competition from Dompier and Gull. A jury agreed and awarded them $449,900, which is automatically tripled by law. The verdict was affirmed by the 9th Circuit in March.

Appealing to the high court, Texaco argued that the verdict "puts in question the normal pricing practices of countless businesses across the country and jeopardizes the continued role of wholesalers in the American economy."

"In calling for suppliers to sell at different prices within the wholesale level of trade based upon each wholesaler's costs, the decision departs from established precedent, from practicality and from congressional intent," Texaco said.

Lawyers for the 11 Texaco dealers who brought the suit opposed the appeal. They argued that Dompier and Gull Oil were not wholesalers, but retailers in disguise.

"Although they bought under 'distributor' contracts, the evidence was virtually overwhelming that (the two wholesalers) competed directly with plaintiffs in retail sales," they said.

The National Association of Manufacturers sided with Texaco in the case, telling the court that the lower court ruling, if allowed to stand, will "deter if not make impossible the use of independent local businesses as distributors."

GENEVA (JUNE 14) UPI - Up to three million Soviet migrant workers could soon be seeking temporary jobs in the West, partly because of expected high unemployment at home, Soviet Labor Minister Vladimir Cherbakov said Thursday.

Cherbakov said the Soviet Union's move to a free market economy in the Soviet Union will inevitably lead to many workers losing their jobs and Moscow would like to see some of them secure employment in Western countries.

He said a law giving Soviet citizens "the freedom to leave and to return" will become law probably in September and between two million to three million workers should take advantage of the new right to travel.

Speaking at a news conference while attending the annual assembly of the International Labor Organization, Cherbakov said the Soviet Union is "well aware" of the West's own unemployment problems.

But he said Soviet workers are apt to fill either low-paying jobs that westerners do not want or skilled jobs that demand their high level of training. He said he has already consulted with officials from the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, and West Germany, who "seemed surprised."

Cherbakov stressed that the Soviets would only be looking for temporary jobs in the West. He said they would take positions based on "a concrete offer" and would not be "simply looking for work anywhere." He said the plan would probably require international agreements and suggested an East-West meeting of labor ministers to discuss the question.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The Supreme Court Thursday upheld a law that allows hospitals and other health care providers to sue state officials for reimbursement of medical care at ''reasonable and adequate'' costs.

In a 5-4 ruling, the high court said health care providers have a right to force individual states to comply with a law requiring adequate reimbursement of such services.

The court rejected arguments from the state of Virginia, which said lawsuits by health care providers to force adequate reimbursement strips individual states of their 11th Amendment right to immunity from such action.

The court also dismissed Virginia's contention that because the law gives a state flexibility to adopt any reimbursement rates it finds reasonable and adequate, the obligation is too ''vague and amorphous'' to be enforced.

The Virginia Hospital Association filed suit in 1983, three years after Congress passed the Boren Amendment to the Medicaid Act. The amendment requires states to reimburse health care providers at ''reasonable and adequate'' rates to meet the costs of ''efficiently and economically operated facilities.''

The VHA, a non-profit corporation composed of public and private hospitals in the state, alleged that Virginia's reimbursement plan violated the Medicaid Act because its reimbursment rates were not reasonable and adequate.

The Supreme Court upheld the lower court ruling, saying that because the law ''gives states substantial discretion in choosing methods of calculating rates does not render the Boren Amendment uneforceable.''

Chief Justice William Rehnquist, in his dissent joined by Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy, said, ''Whenever a provider prevails in such an action, the ... state will be enjoined to implement a system of rates other than the rates determined in accordance with methods and standards developed by the state.

''The court orders entered in such actions therefore will require the states to adopt reimbursment rate systems different from those Congress expressly required them to adopt.''

Lawyers for 46 states filed friend-of-the-court briefs supporting Virginia's arguments, while health care associations and advocates for the aging filed in support of the VHA.

ATLANTA (JUNE 14) UPI - A second AIDS patient Thursday underwent a controversial blood-heating treatment amid skepticism about the procedure's validity.

The AIDS patient, identified only as a 38-year-old man named Tony from Chicago, began the two-hour procedure Thursday morning at Atlanta Hospital officials said.

''The choice seemed rather simple to me. I had no other options available '' the Chicago patient said during an interview broadcast Wednesday on the Cable News Network. ''This provides a lot of hope for me.''

Meanwhile, Georgia health officials said they planned to revoke the hospital's license because of numerous violations, including several patient deaths, unrelated to the AIDS treatment.

A state health official said it is unlikely the hospital will be able to make necessary changes to keep the facility from being closed next month because of dozens of violations involving at least 20 patients. Eight of those patients died, although some were in advanced stages of cancer. It was unclear whether any of the eight suffered from AIDS.

The controversial AIDS procedure is called hyperthermia therapy and has been studied as an experimental treatment for cancer.

With the patient under general anesthesia, the therapy circulates the blood through an apparatus similar to a dialysis machine and heats it from the normal 98.6 to 115 degrees. The blood is then funneled back into the patient's body.

Drs. Kenneth Alonso and William Logan performed the procedure the first time Feb. 20 on Carl Crawford, 33, to treat him for Kaposi's sarcoma, an AIDS-related cancer. Crawford reportedly has been free of the AIDS virus since the procedure and he said his cancer has ''virtually disappeared.''

When the procedure was performed on Crawford, the heated blood passing back into his body caused his temperature to rise to 108 degrees, Alonso said. Crawford's brain was protected by a cooling system during the procedure, he said.

''As a scientist, I have to be skeptical until we see more cases in the literature,'' said Dr. Harold Katner, chief of infectious diseases at Atlanta's Mercer University School of Medicine. ''But we want to be hopeful. I pray that what is being done is working because right now we have no potential cure.''

After Crawford was treated, Mathilde Krim, a virologist and co-founder of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, said she was encouraged by the results, but believed the virus was only suppressed, not eliminated.

Crawford, who was first diagnosed as having AIDS in October 1989, tested negative for the AIDS virus a week after the hypothermia therapy and his blood remains AIDS-free three months later, the doctors said.

''His sarcoma shrunk and as a byproduct, the HIV (AIDS virus) viral culture has been negative for three months,'' Alonso had said.

But Alonso stressed it was too early to fully evaluate the effectiveness of the therapy. Tests of Crawford's spinal fluid and a lack of AIDS symptoms that commonly afflict the brain, such as dementia, indicated the virus was not lurking in brain tissue, he said. But no tests have been conducted to determine if the virus remains in Crawford's bone marrow, the foundation of the body's immune system, he said.

During Wednesday's CNN report, Logan told Tony: ''I have a lot of confidence that things are going to go very well.''

''I'm starting to pick up that confidence. We'll see what happens,'' the patient responded.

''I know we have to discuss the possible complications but I think we're going to be real pleased with it,'' Logan said.

''We want to know if the patients can tolerate this procedure with the minimal risk,'' Logan later told CNN. ''Following that then we'd like to know of course what course the Kaposi's sarcoma takes. Whether we are able to change the course of that with this particular treatment.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - American business inventories increased 0.1 percent in April as total sales fell 1.1 percent during the month, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The amount of goods stockpiled in warehouses in April rose to $794.5 billion after dipping to $793.7 billion in March from $794 billion in February, according to the monthly report compiled by the department's Census Bureau.

An increase in inventories suggests businesses are failing to keep in step with customer demand, and the monthly sales figures indicate buyers were being conservative with their hard-earned money.

But the overall 0.1 percent increase in business inventories in April was expected by many private economists after months of rather steady declines in the reserves.

"It appears companies are doing a fairly good job keeping inventories under control in light of the weakening economy," said Lynn Reaser, senior economist at First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles.

"The exception seems to be at the retail level," Reaser said. "It may indicate some further problems at the retail level. Sales still need to pickup to prevent more serious difficulty."

The Commerce Department said total April sales stood at $533 billion after rising to $538.9 billion in March from $535.9 billion in February, while the time it took to clear inventories edged up during April. Manufacturers' sales fell 1.2 percent in April, while sales at retailers were off 0.9 percent and wholesalers reported a one percent decline in sales.

"I imagine this situation will prompt some greater discounting at the retail level and may force a slowing in orders for wholesalers and manufacturers," Reaser said.

Manufacturers' inventories increased 0.1 percent in April, while the inventories of retail businesses climbed 0.3 percent and wholesale inventories dipped 0.2 percent, the government said.

"Businesses have held net inventory accumulation to zero over the last six months, well below the 0.6 percent average monthly increase that prevailed prior to last autumn," analysts said at Fuji Securities in Chicago. The statistics were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (JUNE 14) UPI - Latest results from Bulgaria's first free elections in 44 years showed Thursday former communists were poised to secure a majority in the national legislature, amid protests from opposition groups claiming the polls were rigged.

Barring a spectacular upset in a run-off contest Sunday for 81 remaining seats of the 400-member Grand National Assembly, Bulgaria will become the first Eastern European country to legitimize an existing communist government in a democratic election.

Although international observers found only minor irregularities during the initial round of voting last Sunday, the fairness of the polls was being hotly disputed by the opposition Union of Democratic Forces, whose supporters had taken to the streets in protest.

Several hundred demonstrators on Wednesday staged sit-down protests through central Sofia, paralyzing traffic. Student protesters at the capital's university occupied the main buildings, but there were no reports of violence and police did not intervene.

Final election results Thursday combining the two rounds of voting for 200 seats won by direct election and 200 others selected by proportional representation showed the Bulgarian Socialist Party possessed 172 seats.

The Central Election Commission announced the Union of Democratic Forces had won 107 seats, the Agrarian Union 16, the Movement for Rights and Freedoms 21, and three to others.

The ruling party dropped the name ''communist'' in April and recast itself as a Social Democratic party in an effort to distance itself from 44 years of totalitarianism.

Liberal Communists took the reigns of government and implemented sweeping political and economic reforms after hardline dictator Todor Zhivkov was eased out of power in late 1990.

Observers expect the Socialists to win the 22 seats required to gain a majority in the legislature during this Sunday's voting for the 81 seats left undecided.

The 200 proportional seats were allocated by the commission on the basis of how many votes each party received in the direct voting. It gave 97 seats to the Socialists, 75 to the Union of Democratic Forces, 16 to the Agrarian Union, and 12 to the Movement for Rights and Freedoms.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (JUNE 14) UPI - The newly appointed governor of strife-torn Kashmir said Thursday India could not ignore secessionist violence but suggested ''applying the healing touch'' to regain the confidence of the people.

Gov. Girish Saxena, appointed by New Delhi three weeks ago to take over the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir, said he sensed a change in the mood in the region where Moslem militants are fighting for independence.

''We have an understanding of the Kashmiri ethos - what are their real urges, what are their real aspirations, what makes them tick,'' he said in an interview in his hillside office. As he spoke, gunfire echoed across the valley from a nearby firing range.

''We feel that we can restore an empathy with them,'' he said. ''It is only a question of applying the healing touch.''

Saxena replaced former Gov. Jagmohan who was blamed by the opposition and civil libertarians for adopting overly harsh measures to control the insurgency. He ordered indefinite curfews and house-to-house searches that resulted in harassment and abuse of women and older people.

Saxena's remarks came amid reports that two Kashmiri Hindus had been slain overnight, one of them the branch manager for Jammu and Kashmir Bank. Saxena blamed the killings on the Hizb ul Mujahideen, one of the organizations fighting for independence.

Government-run radio said five explosions occurred at separate locations in the Kashmir Valley, injuring the driver of an army jeep and at least three other people.

Many Hindus fled the city after a simmering 2-year-old independence movement flared into a full-fledged grass-roots uprising following a clash between demonstrators and authorities in mid-January. At least 35 people were killed in the clash.

Kashmiri Moslems are demanding independence, saying their region has been discriminated against by successive Hindu-dominated administrations in New Delhi. They also claim the Indian government reneged on a promise to hold a plebiscite to allow Kashmiri self-determination.

The situation in Srinagar, the state's summer capital, remained tense Thursday with paramilitary troops stationed at 50-yard intervals along major commercial streets and sandbag bunkers erected at major intersections.

Paramilitary forces also occupied the hotels and guest houses that lined Lake Dal, which once attracted thousands of tourists to the city. Sandbag bunkers had been erected on some of the hotel balconies.

A curfew remained in force on the old city for the third consecutive day and shops throughout Srinagar were closed as merchants observed a ''civil curfew'' called by Moslem militant organizations.

About 40 of the 500 striking lawyers in the district met Thursday in a tree-lined courtyard adjacent to the state courthouse to protest the lack of legal options available in the state, which is now under governor's rule.

''Self-determination, our inherent rights. We want plebiscite,'' they chanted.

In the interview at his office overlooking the Kashmir Valley, Saxena said India would never agree to give up the state, either to Pakistan, which also claims it, or to independence-minded militants.

''There has been no change in policy insofar as ... our absolute refusal to accept that Kashmir is going to go out of India,'' he said. ''It is not going to happen. Kashmir is part of India.''

(JUNE 14) UPI - President Bush led an early morning flag-raising ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Thursday to mark Flag Day, but the 213th birthday of Old Glory was also punctuated by an emotional and sometimes bitter national debate over the importance of the Stars and Stripes.

For the first time since Americans began celebrating the creation of the flag, the spotlight of Flag Day fell not only on the banner and its meaning, but also on whether Congress and the states should take the major step of amending the Constitution to protect the flag from desecration.

Bush, who has led the drive for the amendment and has been criticized for using the flag as a political weapon against Democrats, quietly and solemnly honored the flag at the black granite Vietnam Veterans' Memorial.

Arriving at 6:35 a.m. EDT, the president, uniformed Marines and National Park Service rangers replaced the flag flying at the memorial with one Bush carried to the event.

But the president, who last year used the Iwo Jima monument as a backdrop when he began his push for the flag amendment, did not mention the constitutional change during his Thursday stop.

Instead, he quietly toured the memorial and viewed the names of 58,156 Americans who died in the Vietnam War.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters that Bush ''thought this was the appropriate way to observe Flag Day.'' Another aide said, ''The White House flag was his (Bush's) gift on flag day.''

But actions were more animated elsewhere in the nation and on Capitol Hill where lawmakers are locked in a fight over whether Bush's suggested constitutional change would be too much of a limit on free speech guarantees.

In Maitland, Fla., John Butler Brook, pastor of the North Side Church of Christ, flew a large flag in the upside down distress position to signify the danger he believed was facing the flag because of two Supreme Court rulings that flag burning was protected free speech. ''The flag is a symbol of all we hold dear,'' he said.

In Philadelphia, a Flag Day ceremony was held at the home of Betsy Ross, who, according to legend, created the first flag.

On Capitol Hill, the rhetoric was hot.

Rep. Lane Evans, D-Ill., who enlisted in the Marine Corps at the age of 17 during the height of the Vietnam War, said the flag ''represents the freedoms embodied in the Bill of Rights. But chip away at the Bill of Rights and we chip away at those freedoms. I detest those who burn the flag ... (but) we should not protect the flag by burning the Constitution.''

''Too much blood, toil, sweat and love ... have been woven into that fabric over two centuries of history to allow delinquents and rabble-rousers'' to denigrate the flag, countered Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky. ''It's not a matter of politics. It's a matter of national honor. We need a constitutional amendment to protect our flag.''

The American Bar Association also scheduled a news conference to stress its opposition to the president's amendment.

Flag Day began officially in 1916. June 14 was chosen to honor the flag because it was on that date in 1777 that the Continental Congress approved the flag for the nation.

It was only a week after Flag Day of 1989 that the Supreme Court touched off a storm of protest with a 5-4 ruling that said burning the flag was protected by First Amendment free speech guarantees.

Since then, the often bitter debate cooled, only to be revived again Monday with another 5-4 Supreme Court ruling that threw out a flag protection law designed to reverse the court's 1989 decision.

Congress immediately dove into a fresh fight over the issue. Bush's suggested constitutional change took its first halting steps Wednesday when a House subcommittee, on a 5-3 party-line vote, sent it to the full Judiciary Committee, but recommended that it be defeated.

The full committee is expected next week to send the 20-word amendment to the full House.

By itself, the amendment would not outlaw flag desecration, but would allow Congress and the states to pass laws outlawing the practice. It states: ''The Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States.''

The amendment, if ratified, would be the first to limit the Bill of Rights in nearly 200 years. It would be the 27th amendment to the Constitution and the first since 18-year-olds got the vote in 1971.

But passing an amendment is extraordinarily difficult, since it requires approval by two-thirds of both the House and Senate and three-quarters of the states.

The vote in the House is expected to be extremely close. Last year the Senate rejected the amendment, 51-48 - some 15 votes shy of the two-thirds needed.

Dominating the debate on Capitol Hill has been politics and the fear of many Democrats that if they do not support the flag amendment they may be attacked by Republicans for being unpatriotic.

Bush has said the issue should not be political, but that has been met with scoffs from Democrats who remember his repeated attacks on Michael Dukakis over the Pledge of Allegiance during the 1988 presidential campaign.

As a way to provide themselves some political cover, the House subcommittee Wednesday passed, 6-2, a resolution condemning flag burning and reaffirming the basic freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Mort Walker, creator of the ''Beetle Bailey'' comic strip, which was once banned from the Army's newspaper, received an award from the Army Thursday and joked the Pentagon had finally found something: ''its sense of humor.''

''This plaque proves that as hard as it is to find anything in the Pentagon, they finally found their sense of humor,'' said Walker, presented with the Army's civilian patriotic service award for his 40 years of work.

His comic strip, distributed by King Features Syndicate, appears in more than 1,800 newspapers worldwide, including the Army's overseas newspaper, Stars and Stripes.

Walker's comic characters, which poke fun at the Army and its bureaucracy, include the slothful Pvt. Bailey, the bullying Sgt. Snorkle and the out-of-touch Gen. Halftrack, among others.

Started in 1950, the comic strip was banned in 1954 from the Pacific edition of Stars and Stripes because of the way it portrayed officers and the bureacratic maze in Army life - still a sensitive subject today.

''There's a deep contrast between - hopefully - between what's portrayed in Beetle Bailey and what's in the Army today,'' Brig. Gen. William McClain said in presenting the award to Walker.

''It's often said that if you can't laugh at yourself, there's something intrinsically wrong with you. I think that what Beetle Bailey has done for those of us in uniform and in the Army, we're able to laugh at ourselves.

''You've entertained. Sometimes we haven't always liked it and you know that,'' McClain said to Walker, referring to the Stars and Stripes ban.

Walker, 67, who was drafted into the Army during World War II and served in a variety of positions, joked: ''I can't believe I'm actually here - sort of a dream of General Halftrack's and mine, to hear from the Pentagon.''

He said he had never before heard from the Pentagon during his 40 years of work, which included drawing posters for commissaries, war bond promotions and handicapped veterans.

''The closest I ever got to being endorsed by the Pentagon was when they put some of my comic strips into a booklet titled, 'How Not to Do Things ''' Walker said.

''I suppose it's probably my fault for making a little fun of them,'' he added. ''So this is quite a grand moment for me and General Halftrack - the phone finally rang.''

The award was presented to Walker on the U.S. Army's 215th birthday.

Referring to the controversy over the Supreme Court's decision permitting the burning of the American flag, Walker, a Connecticut resident, volunteered: ''If they won't let me burn my leaves, I don't see why you can burn the flag.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Budget cuts for Medicare oversight has resulted in payments for unnecessary cataract surgeries and other services and huge profits for the only company making a renal-failure drug, government watchdog officials told a House panel Thursday.

''The theme for today's hearing is wise pennies and foolish pounds,'' said Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif., chairman of the House Ways and Means health subcommittee.

The Reagan administration ''saved millions in Medicare administration at the cost of billions of dollars spent on unnecessary services,'' Stark said.

Officials of the General Accounting Office, the Department of Health and Human Services' inspector general's office and the Office of Technology Assessment testified that budget cuts have made the Medicare program vulnerable to waste, abuse and mismanagement.

''Largely because of funding shortfalls ... our information suggests that there has been a serious deterioration in the Medicare contractors' ability to ensure the accuracy of program payments,'' GAO's Janet Shikles said.

Generally, only cost reports of the largest hospitals are being audited, she said.

''As a result, billions of dollars in costs claimed by smaller providers ... are never audited,'' she said.

Deputy Health Inspector General Michael Mangano said a recent study found cataract surgery performed by high-volume providers on Medicare beneficiaries was twice as likely to be clinically unnecessary, twice as likely to be of poor quality and more likely to be of questionable quality.

''We cannot rule out chance,'' Mangano said. ''However, we believe that a more intensive review of cataract surgeries performed by high-volume performers would be prudent.''

But Philip Hessburg, president of the American Society of Cataract and Refractive Surgery, said high-volume practices of at least 1,000 procedures annually are the exception, not the norm.

''There has been far more rhetoric than fact communicated on this subject '' he said.

Another area of concern was the drug epogen, known as EPO, made solely by Amgen Inc. of Thousand Oaks, Calif. It is used to treat anemia associated with chronic renal failure. Medicare provides coverage to 93 percent of all patients with the disease.

''The current method of paying dialysis centers per EPO treatment provides a financial incentive for providers to use as few units of EPO as possible and even skimp on use, because (for using less than) 10,000 units, they receive the same revenue regardless of the dose administered,'' said Roger Herdman of the Office of Technology Assessment.

He said claims processed from November 1989 through April 1990 indicated patients used an average of 2,700 units per treatment.

Stark said Amgen, which declined to testify, will receive more than $100 million in 1990 from Medicare.

''There are two kinds of people who won't testify,'' Stark said. ''Those whose profits are unconscionable and those whose profits are so poor that they are embarrassed. I suspect it's the former in this case.''

In a letter to Stark, Amgen Chief Executive Officer Gordon Binder said

EPO's price reflected the cost of research and development, expected future expenses and ''the need to include in the price of a new drug a reasonable return to the manufacturers' investors.''

Mangano suggested payment should be based on actual number of EPO units dispensed.

Mardee Hagen, president of the National Renal Administrators Association, said that may be the way to go ''at some point in the future. ... However, we do not believe the time has come for such a change.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The Supreme Court Thursday upheld a ruling that the Environmental Protection Agency could take action to enforce pollution standards against a General Motors plant in Framingham, Mass., even though updated standards had been proposed.

The high court held that the Clean Air Act allows the EPA to enforce pollution standards whenever violation of a state plan occurs despite whether the state submitted a proposed revision to pollution control laws.

In a unanimous ruling, the court rejected arguments from lawyers for General Motors Corp., whose Framingham, Mass., painting operations plant was the subject of a government lawsuit in 1987.

GM contended that the EPA was barred from enforcing a state implementation plan because the agency failed to act on a state pollution control proposal within the required four months.

The court, however, ruled that the EPA's failure to meet the deadline did not barr the agency from enforcing the existing state implementation program. It did say that GM could sue to compel the EPA to reduce or eliminate penalties during any period in which ''unreasonable delay results in prejudice.''

GM brought the case after the EPA forced it to comply with existing Massachussetts standards even though the state took steps to revise its clean air law and granted GM a reprieve on meeting air quality standards.

The EPA did not act on the state revisions by the required deadline of four months and then sought penalties against GM for failing to comply with the original law.

The trial court found that EPA's failure to act on the revised regulations barred the agency from seeking penalties from GM. The 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that decision and the Supreme Court affirmed.

The case emerged after Massachusetts gave GM an extra two years - from 1985 to 1987 - to comply with revised pollution standards for automobile painting operations.

The reprieve was granted so GM could continue using its old painting facility until it built a new $200 million facility that would meet the more strict environmental standards.

GM shut down the old painting operations plant a month before the 1987 deadline, but the EPA sought penalties and an injunction against GM for failing to meet the standards set out in the 1985 regulations.

GM argued the EPA's refusal to act on the revised regulations within the required time, as well as its decision to enforce the outdated regulations ''interferes with the state's right'' to select the regulatory methods it wants to use to meet federal environmental standards.

The court ruled that the Clean Air Act ''plainly states'' that EPA may bring an action for penalties or injunctive relief whenever violations of state implementation plans (SIP) occur.

''There can be little or no doubt that the existing SIP remains the applicable implementation plan even after the state has submitted a proposed revision,'' Justice Harry Blackmun said in delivering the opinion.

''There is nothing in the statute that limits the EPA's authority to enforce the ... plan solely to those cases where EPA has not unreasonably delayed action on a proposed SIP revision.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - T. Boone Pickens will nearly halve his 13.6 percent investment in Edisto Resources Corp. under a series of stock purchase agreements outlined Thursday in documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Mesa L.P., which is controlled by Pickens, filed an amended Schedule 13D with the SEC saying that eight firms have agreed to buy a total of 867,000 shares from Mesa on or before August 15.

Mesa, which will still own about one million Edisto shares, will sell 567,000 shares at $16.875 a share, to the following firms, a number of which are from the United Kingdom: Scottish Amicable Investment Managers Ltd., which will take 100,000 shares; ARCO Investment Management Company, which will buy 162,000 shares; Cramer, Rosenthal, McGlynn Inc., which plans to buy 150,000 shares; and John Govett & Co. Ltd., Capstone Financial Services Inc., Robert Fleming Nominees Ltd., and Ivory & Sime PLC, each of which will buy less than 100,000 shares.

In addition, the Massachusetts Financial Services Co. plans to buy 300,000 shares for $16.625 a share. Mesa will receive about $14.5 million from the sales. Mesa at one point owned about one third of Edisto's common stock outstanding, but sold 1.4 million shares approximately one month ago.

"We have been working with Edisto for several months to reduce our stake to a position that (is) comfortable for both parties," said Steve Gardner, a consultant to Mesa.

The Dallas office of the brokerage firm Rauscher Pierce Refses Inc., helped structure the deals with Mesa and Edisto, a Dallas-based oil and gas exploration company.

The purchase agreements are subject to the shares having been registered for sale under the Securities Exchange Act of 1933 and applicable state blue sky laws, although the buyers have the right to waive this requirement.

A Schedule 13D must be filed with the SEC by investors who have acquired more than five percent of a company's outstanding stock. The filing includes information on the size of the purchase and the investor's intent in acquiring the stock.

BY TOM HARVEY - UPI

LIMA, PERU (JUNE 14) UPI - Alberto Fujimori has been elected president at a critical moment in Peruvian history, but neither his countrymen nor Peru's foreign creditors know much about him, his beliefs or his plans to address a myriad of crises.

With an estimated $20 billion foreign debt, four-digit inflation eating away workers' wages and the Shining Path guerrillas a daily threat, the nation's self-confidence is nearly gone.

Peru and its bankers await a clue from Fujimori on how he proposes to deal with those problems, but especially how he will tame inflation that ran up to 2,775 percent last year.

If his election campaign is any clue, more trouble could be ahead for this already troubled land.

The moment is ''very fragile, very fragile,'' said Fernando Rospigliosi, a sociologist and political observer.

Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants and a political unknown just six months ago, won not with specific proposals but by sowing fear in the largely poor electorate that his opponent's economic ''shock'' plan to halt inflation would deepen their crisis.

He successfully painted conservative candidate Mario Vargas Llosa into a corner with charges he represented big business, the oligarchy and the white establishment.

Now Fujimori is president-elect and inflation gains momentum daily. He has yet to offer his own workable solutions.

''There is growing worry among big, medium and small business circles (wanting) to know what will be the policies of Mr. Fujimori to detain inflation,'' the newspaper El Comercio said Wednesday.

''If the days go by and Peruvians, worried and nervous, do not have an adequate answer, the desperation and lack of confidence are going to take hold.''

What is worrying many Peruvians is that Fujimori - whose campaign pieced together support from Protestant evangelists and small businessmen - won the election not on his own merits but on the perceived faults of others.

Many believe he won because he was a new, though unknown, alternative to Vargas Llosa and the traditional political parties that have lost all confidence of the Peruvian voters.

His second-place finish in the April 8 first-round vote was a shock. Just two weeks before, he barely showed up in the polls.

''For me personally, it was a surprise,'' said Carlos Garcia, the second vice president on the Fujimori ticket.

Garcia admitted the party did not have a formulated plan of action ready before the first-round vote because many party leaders did not expect to win.

Immediately after the vote, Fujimori began forming teams to prepare a plan of action. So far, nothing more than generalities has emerged.

What he has promised is no ''shock.'' That is a slow approach to trying to tame inflation. He has said no public sector employees will be fired as part of an effort to curb government spending that is fueling the inflation.

How then will he tame that monster, inflation, that has brought near chaos to more than one Latin American nation? Peru waits, as do the bankers, governments and international lending organizations to whom he must go for help.

He takes office July 28. Rospigliosi said Fujimori may have two months of grace before the cycle starts again: the people lose confidence, the dollar rises, inflation spirals.

Peru cannot take another five years of the same. Without a strong, confident, leader running the country, chaos could be imminent.

So far Fujimori has done little to inspire the confidence that he is that leader.

DETROIT (JUNE 14) UPI - An off-duty police officer, who admits she was too nervous to think, leaped a 4-foot gate, stuck out both hands and made a clean catch of a 10-month-old baby falling from a second-story ledge.

''A week ago I almost delivered a baby,'' Officer Kimberly Lee said Wednesday. ''And I've caught a couple of burglars, but I never caught a baby before.''

The child, Onika McClendon, was unhurt. Lee said she made the catch before the infant smashed headfirst into concrete.

Lee said she was at home Tuesday night when her nephew, Mike Lee, 11, told her a baby had been heard crying for about an hour in a flat a block west of her home.

Lee drove to the house, pounded on the door, but got no answer. She didn't see a baby, so she went across the street and called police from a neighbor's house.

Then a lady hollered, '''The baby's on the porch!''' said Lee. ''I saw the baby's legs dangling off the side.'' She ran toward the house as Onika tottered on the back porch, about 15 feet above the concrete.

Lee fiddled briefly with the gate to the yard, then vaulted it.

''By the time I got (over) the fence, the baby was tumbling down,'' she said. ''I put my arms out and here she came, like a heavy package dropping on my hands.''

Onika was ''just a little frightened,'' and didn't whimper until she was apparently scared by strangers as Lee carried her across the street.

''I held onto her - I didn't want to give her to anybody,'' Lee said.

Other police officers arrived to awaken the girl's father, Tyrone McClendon, 26, who told them she must have toddled out onto the porch while he and the girl's 3-year-old sister slept.

''I never would have been able to forgive myself'' if Onika had been hurt, McClendon said.

Lee, who has a 10-month-old son herself, said: ''That's my job, to save lives, and that's what I did.''

CHARLOTTE, NC (JUNE 14) UPI - Bear, honored as the nation's top police dog for efforts to capture two gun-wielding suspects, is no dummy - he turned tail and ran from an assailant who shot him.

Bear, an 8-year-old German shepherd, was honored Wednesday with a plaque from the U.S. Police Canine Association, which chose him the best of 30 animals in a top dog competition. He is fearless, but his trainer says he's far from stupid.

Officer Terry Davis and Bear were part of a police tactical team that tracked down an assailant, Bert Kerns Jr., who shot a Huntersville police officer during a routine traffic stop in May 1988.

All night Bear and his human partners waited outside a Huntersville house for Kerns to come out. At daybreak, the tactical commander decided Bear should rush the house and disarm Kerns.

But as Bear raced through the front door of the house, Kerns shot at him, grazing his scalp.

That's when Bear turned tail and ran - back out the same door, yelping all the way.

But the dog managed to distract Kerns so while Davis rushed his partner to a veterinarian, other officers charged inside and Kerns quickly surrendered.

Four days later, the 83-pound Bear returned to his job with the Mecklenburg Police Department and six months after that, he became a hero again.

This time he disarmed a gunman who had fired three shots at officers.

Davis said Bear, one of six county canine officers, makes a good partner but likely will retire in a year or two to a doghouse at Lake Norman.

''My wife, Beth, will be happy to have Bear staying at home instead of going off with me,'' Davis said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Presidential chief of staff John Sununu will travel to Moscow to advise Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on White House operations, a White House spokesman said Thursday.

Press secretary Marlin Fitzwater confirmed a report in The Wall Street Journal that Sununu, former governor of New Hampshire, had accepted an invitation to visit Moscow at some future point to lend his organizational expertise to the Kremlin leadership as it moves from a communist-controlled government to democracy.

''No date has been set,'' Fitzwater said. ''They'd like him to come to the Soviet Union and take a look at their place.''

At the behest of Gorbachev, Sununu's counterpart, Mikhail Shkabardnya, spent a few days earlier this week being briefed on White House operations and how Sununu and the senior staff perform their duties. The invitation to Sununu emanated from that visit.

In an interview with the Journal, Sununu said he plans to help the Soviet leader ''figure out how to make his newly created office'' of the presidency work.

Sununu said he will advise Soviet officials on matters ranging from the daily routine, including how to handle millions of pieces of mail, to substantive issues like policy development.

The Soviet Legislature established the new post of the presidency last March and elected Gorbachev with broad powers to fill the job.

''They are structuring a new office, the office of the presidency,'' Sununu said. ''It is a brand new function, in which a presidency will be responsive to all the things that follow from political reform, a more democratic structure with more responsibilities to its citizens.''

Sununu called the Washington-Kremlin arrangement ''amazing,'' saying: ''Never in my wildest dreams a year ago would I have ever told you that this kind of openness on all parts'' would exist.

During the U.S.-Soviet summit in Washington, Gorbachev and his top aides plied White House officials with questions on the mechanics of how the White House works.

Afterward, the Journal said, presidential staffers began getting feelers from the Soviets that they would like to emulate the White House system.

Sununu said he would probably not make the trip until the Soviets have time to begin to put their new ideas into action.

He said it could be a two-way street and he might get some ideas from his Moscow counterparts. ''I'll borrow a good idea from anybody,'' he told the Journal.

LONDON (JUNE 14) UPI - Stock prices closed slightly lower in moderate trading Thursday on the London International stock exchange amid some profit taking following two days of strong advances.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which registered gains totaling 56.6 points in the previous two sessions, closed off 2.4 points at 2,403.0, well below its midday peak of 2,430. The index rose by 34.7 points Wednesday.

The narrower top 30 industrial average slipped 4.6 points to 1,928.6.

Volume amounted to around 554 million shares, compared with the 611 million shares that changed hands Wednesday.

Stocks opened higher as the market continued to be encouraged by hopes of early British entry into the European Monetary System's exchange-rate mechanism and by the possibility of eventual cuts in local interest rates.

Analysts said prices eased late in the session on profit taking and in advance of Friday's report on Britain's retail price index and several U.S. ecomonic reports.

A slippery opening on Wall Street also dampened market sentiment.

On the economic front, the British Department of Employment reported unemployment rose to a seasonally adjusted 5.7 percent of the work force.

The number of unemployed in Britain increased by 4,400 from April but was off21,000 from May 1989, the report said. The results compare with market expectations of unemployment rising by 9,500 from the previous month but declining by 22,000 from a year earlier.

In a separate report, the department said Britain's average underlying rate of earnings growth for April was unchanged for the fourth consecutive month at 9.5 percent, compared with a 9.1 percent gain a year earlier. Without seasonal adjustment, average earnings eased 0.3 percent in April from March but were up 9.1 percent from April 1989.

Market forecasters had widely expected the underlying rate of earnings to rise to 9.75 percent in April.

Stores and building shares were supported by hopes that Britain eventuallytieing the pound to the EMS exchange-rate mechanism would lead to an early cut in interest rates.

The exchange-rate mechanism allows European governments to maintain the value of their currencies by trading them within relatively set bands.

Worries about property loan interest payments depressed prices of stocks in the banking and properties sectors. Midland Bank fell 14 cents to $4.80 while Helical Bar lost 36 cents to $3.47.

Some brewery stocks eased while markets awaited a European Community report on the industry. Whitbread lost 15 cents to $6.07.

Bass shrugged off the sector trend, gaining 12 cents to $17.48 amid expectations it would be able to sell pubs.

Elsewhere in Europe, banks, financial markets, businesses and government offices were closed in West Germany for the Corpus Christi holiday. Trading will resume Friday.

LONDON (JUNE 14) UPI - Yet another rumor on when Britain will fully join the European Monetary System sent sterling soaring this week but analysts warned markets may tire of the government's flirtation if a date is not set soon.

"The whole thing is snowballing to such an extent that if come autumn there is still no sign of us going in, and if the economy is still in bad shape, there is a real danger that sterling will fall sharply," said Gwynn Hacche, an economist at James Capel Co.

The pound and London share prices have continued to rise since the Financial Times newspaper said Tuesday the government was preparing to commit to the exchange rate mechanism as early as September or October, as long as the pound is strong on foreign exchange markets.

Downing Street officials denied the report as "pure speculation," but the markets ignored the denial and other potential dampeners, and the pound shot up nearly two cents against the dollar.

The exchange rate mechanism, or ERM, allows European Community members to maintain the value of their currencies relative to other EC units, and offers conditions favorable to lower inflation and interest rates.

The pound hit 90.7 on its trade weighted index Wednesday. The last time it reached that point was in October, analysts said, adding a strong pound is helping to put pressure on inflation.

ERM hopes also swept the Financial Times Stock Exchange-100 share index through the 2400-point barrier to close at 2405.4 points, up 34.7 points, for the first time in six months.

The Financial Times report is the third time in the past month that comments issued or leaked by Downing Street and the Treasury have stirred up the ERM frenzy. The first hints came in May when Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major indicated to the Wall Street Journal that the government was softening its opposition to ERM entry.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has long opposed fully joining the EMS because she feared Britain would lose some of its sovereignty and she believed some European partners were not playing fair.

Her resistance, bolstered by her former part-time economic adviser Sir Alan Walters, caused the abrupt resignation of pro-EMS Chancellor Nigel Lawson. Walters also resigned in the dispute, which rocked markets and sharply weakened the pound last October.

With EMS speculation rampant, the market remained bouyant despite what otherwise might have been a significant development Tuesday - Thatcher disclosed in the House of Commons that she still meets with Walters, but only as a "family friend."

It later emerged, however, that government officials were usually present at Thatcher's talks with Walters, indicating the prime minister still lends an ear to his advise on economic policy.

Analysts warned that if the government and the Treasury are using the ERM as a tool to manipulate the flagging economy for political ends, it could be playing a dangerous game.

British inflation is among the highest in Europe at 9.4 percent, interest rates of 15 percent are squeezing industry and homeowners, and unemployment rose for the first time in four years in April.

"If the pound doesn't go into the exchange rate mechanism before the end of the year, the government could be shooting itself in the foot," said Jeremy Hawkins, an economist with the Bank of America. "People could get wary of waiting and sell the pound."

Full entry into the EMS, with its promise of a more stable pound, would allow Thatcher's government to bring down domestic interest rates while maintaining the value of the pound on foreign exchange markets. It could also help tame inflation.

Since Thatcher is committed to calling a general election by mid-1992, she could be playing with the date of full EMS entry to help the ruling Conservative Party win votes, analysts said. Until then, however, a bad set of economic indicators could crush the euphoria, weaken the pound and sidetrack plans for entry, analysts said.

"Unfavorable economic statistics will render the pound vulnerable to speculative attack, despite the present euphoria over the prospect of U.K. participation in the ERM," said Paul Chertkow, chief currency strategist at Citibank in London.

George Magnus, currency economist at Warburg Securities, also is cautious about the pound's exuberance. "It's the sort of party where you want to be near the exit," he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The U.S. Constitution could be a model for the protection of minority rights under black majority rule in South Africa, President F.W. De Klerk said in an interview published Thursday.

In an interview with the Washington Times, De Klerk denied his government was trying to preserve white power and privilege as South Africa moves towards ending minority white rule - a process he emphasized was ''irrevocable'' and ''irreversible.''

''Time is of the essence,'' he said. ''When we say white domination must go, we mean it.''

''I know that there has been a misunderstanding as to this and an erroneous interpretation that somehow or other we want to maintain white privilege, white domination,'' De Klerk said after outlining possible methods of protecting minorities. ''Simply not true.''

''I love doing what I'm doing under great pressure. I'm doing what I know is right,'' De Klerk said of his reform program. ''My party has come to the conclusion that there is no other road. The sooner we travel this road together, the better for all of us. But we're in a hurry.''

In response to a question of whether he envisioned a black becoming president of South Africa after his reforms are completed, De Klerk said, ''Full participation of all South Africans at all levels means what it says.''

But, citing President James Madison's Federalist Papers, he said he wanted to drastically reduce the powers of the presidency and establish a system of checks and balances against the abuse of power.

''We will be looking for a solution in the direction of a bill of rights like yours, checks and balances to avoid too much power in any one institution, a non-racial society,'' De Klerk said.

Warning that forces on the extreme right and extreme left threatened his moderate cause, De Klerk said the racial reforms he has already implemented were enough for the United States and other nations to end economic sanctions against his government.

''The time has come for fundamental re-evaluation leading to encouragement (of his reform program), not with a pat on the back, but by lifting sanctions,'' he said.

''When the (African National Congress) argues that nothing has changed, they are flying in the face of facts,'' De Klerk said of the ANC's plea that international sanctions be maintained. ''My government is not dragging its feet on a single issue.''

''True, certain things have not changed but most of them we have agreed will change as a result of negotiations,'' he said, adding that ''the ball is now in the ANC's court.''

De Klerk praised ANC leader Nelson Mandela - currently on a tour of Europe before beginning a two-week visit to the United States June 20 - as ''a man of integrity, honest and interesting, a worthy interlocutor.''

MEXICO CITY (JUNE 14) UPI - Cuban authorities, who recently jammed U.S.-sponsored TV Marti telecasts, have now neutralized transmissions of Radio Marti broadcasts to most of the Caribbean island, the official Cuban news agency said Thursday.

In a dispatch monitored in Mexico City, the news agency Prensa Latina quoted the official Cuban Comunist Party newspaper, Granma, as saying that jamming of the anti-Cuban Radio Marti transmissions began May 7 from the Cuban capital of Havana.

''The transmissions of Radio Marti station, which the North American administration sponsors since 1985, are not being heard in principal cities of the Island,'' Prensa Latina said.

Radio Marti, set up in 1985 by the U.S. Information Agency to broadcast Cuban news into Cuba, has a wide audience in the Caribbean island nation of President Fidel Castro who has been resisting democratic reforms that have swept Eastern Europe.

A Radio Marti spokeswoman in Washington said intermittent jamming of some programming to Cuba began on April 17, and since May 17 the broadcasts have been jammed 24 hours a day.

The Cuban government considers Radio Marti broadcasts as a violation of its sovereignty, but it had made no efforts to jam radio transmission during the past five years.

On March 27, the U.S. government began test transmissions of a U.S. propaganda television station, known as TV Marti, to Cuba. Cuban authorities immediately started jamming TV Marti telecasts, which are beamed toward the Caribbean island nation from a tethered baloon in the Florida Keys.

The Cuban newspaper report said that the signals of Radio Marti have been annulled in more than 70 highly populated municipalities of Cuba, with exceptions of Sancti Spiritus, Bayamo and Guantanamo, Prensa Latina reported.

''Granma says that Cuban specialists continue to work to achieve the total neutralization of Radio Marti in a short period throughout the country,'' Prensa Latina reported.

The dispatch said that the Cuban jamming ''measure safeguards Cuban sovereignty and constitutes an adequate response to flagarant vioation of radio electric space of the Caribbean island.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The Resolution Trust Corp., the federal agency that shuts failed thrifts and sells their assets to pay depositors, is running short of cash and will need more than Congress authorized by the end of the year, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said Thursday.

"It is now clear that the amounts projected and authorized for the RTC in FIRREA will fall short of what is required," Brady told the House Banking Committee. FIRREA is the sweeping legislation passed by Congress last year that overhauled the failed S&L industry.

"If the RTC cannot raise additional working capital and the cost of acquiring assets exceeds the amount generated from sales, it cannot proceed with resolutions," said Brady, who also serves as chairman of the RTC's oversight board.

In telling the committee of the RTC's cash problems, Brady also said no one seems to know who much the thrift rescue will eventually cost taxpayers.

The deterioration of the nation's savings and loan industry, called by many in Congress the worst financial debacle since the Depression, is expected to cost taxpayers between $325 billion and $500 billion.

Brady said the $50 billion originally authorized for the agency, which was intended to last until August 1992, could run out by the end of the year or early next year if the RTC faces "an aggressive schedule of case resolutions." "If progress occurs at a slower pace that we would hope, RTC resources will last longer," he said.

Brady told the panel it is difficult to "pin a single number" on the amount the RTC will need to handle failed institutions. His testimony came one day after the Congressional Budget Office said that as many as 1,700 thrifts may eventually fail, two-thirds more than previously thought.

"At this point in time, the number of institutions which the RTC will have to resolve is simply unknowable," Brady said. "Yet this number drives the cost estimate."

Brady attributed the need for new money, in part, to depressed real estate prices. Real estate makes up the majority of assets held by failed thrifts that the RTC is trying to sell.

He stressed that this money is not being used to bail out individual thrifts, their owners or the savings industry overall. The money is used to pay depositors protected by federal deposit insurance.

Brady said the additional financing for the Bush administration's thrift rescue effort likely will come from Treasury funds. The Federal Home Loan Bank System, he said, does not have the capacity to back more borrowing from the Resolution Funding Corp., the agency created to finance the resuce attempt.

"No matter how the funds are provided, it will not change the cost of resolving the savings and loan crisis," Brady said. He also suggested that Congress could elect to provide additional resources to the RTC, an idea that rankled some members of the panel.

"How can you expect Congress to vote more money when there is not a lot of confidence in how this savings and loan crisis has been handled," Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y. told Brady.

Brady also said the RTC's need for additional capital should be considered in the current budget discussions between the administration and congressional leadership.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (JUNE 14) UPI - Opposition leaders enraged because police beat anti-communist demonstrators demanded Thursday the resignation of the interior minister of Serbia's communist regime and the prosecution of the officers responsible.

Kosta Cavoski, a Serbian Democratic Party leader, said five nationalist opposition groups in Serbia, largest of Yugoslavia's six republics, would shortly announce steps they intend to take to back up their demands.

He also said that the parties had fulfilled a vow to boycott the second round of negotiations Thursday with the ruling communists on reforms permitting multi-party elections in Serbia. The first round of talks was held last week.

Cavoski's comments came during a packed news conference by opposition leaders at Belgrade's House of Youth a day after they sponsored the largest rally ever held to demand an end to 45 years of communist rule in Serbia and the scheduling of polls for the republic's assembly.

Several hours after Wednesday's gathering, police charged and beat dozens of protesters who had gathered in front of the headquarters of state-run Belgrade television, blocking a major roadway and demanding the resignation of the station manager for what they said was his pro-communist bias.

''Nobody from the police asked us to disperse. We were calm and peaceful and planned just to go home when the police came from a side street, charging at us,'' said Democratic Party secretary Djurdje Ninkovic. ''We demand that all those responsible for beating the protesters be punished and that the Serbian interior minister resigns.''

The minister, Radmilo Bogdanovic, is in charge of the republic's police force.

Cavoski said two protesters suffered serious injuries. There was no immediate official or independent confirmation of the statement.

Opposition leaders Dragoljub Micunovic and Borislav Pekic were bruised by truncheon blows, said Cavoski.

Serbia is the only republic in the loose federation that has not yet set a date for free elections. The 10 million Serbs are the largest ethnic group in Yugoslavia.

Serbian communists staged polls in November under the existing single-party system that served to strengthen their grip on power. They have agreed to hold multi-party elections after implementing a new constitution, which could take up to two years.

Their failure to set a date for the contests or legalize other parties has fueled charges that they are trying to buy time in a bid to retain power.

Serbia's Communist Party announced Thursday that it would hold on July 12 a special congress at to formally merge with an allied socialist organization. This is seen as a cosmetic move to change its name and image to stem ebbing support ahead of the planned assembly polls.

The federal government plans multi-party elections later this year in what should be the country's first free national polls since the communists took power at the end of World War II in 1945.

Slovenia and Croatia, Yugoslavia's most liberal republics, held their first free elections in April and now have non-communist parliaments and governments.

(JUNE 14) UPI - The White House denounces the government-inspired political violence in Romania, saying the nation's leaders are NOT behaving ''in a democratic fashion.'' Police stormed a square in Bucharest yesterday to oust anti-government protesters, resulting in a day of clashes that the official Rompres news agency says left four demonstrators dead. In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater today condemned the violence ''in the strongest terms.''

The Soviet Parliament today rejected a plan to allow steep price increases as part of a set of economic reforms. The Supreme Soviet voted 319-33 to order the Council of Ministers to come up with a new plan acceptable to the governments of the 15 Soviet republics. The vote on the price plan comes one day after the Parliament approved a resolution supporting the principle of a transition to a regulated market economy.

The Supreme Court today gave the nod to sobriety checkpoint programs aimed at nabbing drunken drivers. In a 6-3 ruling, the high court said the stops do NOT violate constitutional bans against UNreasonable search and seizure. The case focused on a Michigan checkpoint program. In upholding its constitutionality, Chief Justice William Rehnquist says that the ''measure of the intrusion on motorists stopped briefly at sobriety checkpoints is slight.''

A major victory for black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela . The European parliament in Strasbourg, France, today adopted a resolution urging that full economic sanctions be maintained against South Africa. The 177-47 vote comes one day after Mandela told the Parliament that even a partial lifting of sanctions would be UNacceptable to his country's black majority. European Parliament resolutions express the opinion of the legislative body but DON'T have the force of law.

The Reverend Jesse Jackson said that Barry had decided to ''focus on healing himself, curing his family and healing the city.'' Barry announced last night he would NOT seek a fourth term. But the embattled mayor stopped short of resigning the office he has held since the 1970's. He is standing trial on drug and perjury charges.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The best way for Congress to fit the farm bill into budget guidelines is to reduce crop subsidy rates and limit the acres eligible for farm payments, Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said Thursday.

The advice was the most explicit statement yet from Yeutter on the cost of the new farm policy law being written this year. Earlier this week, he warned that freezing crop target prices would not be enough to satisfy budget demands.

A target price freeze is the route taken in the farm bill approved early Thursday by the House Agriculture Committee. The administration has estimated the bill calls for spending several billion dollars more than alloted by the House in its budget resolution or in the White House's proposed budget.

''A freeze in target prices would likely require a reduction in (acreage) payment bases of at least 25 percent,'' Yeutter wrote. ''If target prices were reduced at the trend rate of the 1985 (farm law), the adjustment in payment bases would be less than that.

''Our view is that a rational outcome would involve a continuation of the target price trends established under the 1985 act, coupled with whatever adjustment in payment bases will be required by the budget agreement that is ultimately reached (by Congress and the White House).''

Under the 1985 law, target prices and loan rates have been progressively reduced with the goal of regaining foreign markets for U.S. products.

As it stands now, the House committee bill would spend nearly $55 billion over five years on commodity support programs. That is roughly equal to what would be spurrent law.

Democrats on the Senate Agriculture Committee decried Yeutter's advice, expressed in his second letter of the week to the panel. Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the warning of large cuts in the government support system ''is a very clear message for American agriculture.''

Sens. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., and Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said Yeutter's approach would drive down farm income and force thousands of farmers out of business. Conrad said the committee should act to ''prevent this from becoming a farm liquidation bill.''

Midwestern Democrats have suggested higher target prices and loan rates as a way to protect farm income. Opponents, such as Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., say those steps would jeopardize U.S. farm exports, which provide a market for about one-fifth of agricultural production.

The Senate committee, split for a month over which direction to go on crop supports, began work Thursday on so-called planting flexibility - giving farmers more freedom to decide which crops to grow. Proponents say it would let farmers look for money-making alternatives to their current mix of crops.

Panel members defeated, 12-5, a proposal by Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.,

to allow ''flexibility'' on up to 25 percent of the land now devoted to wheat, feed grains, cotton, rice and oilseeds, such as soybeans. It would have allowed farmers to receive crop support payments on the ''flex'' acres as if the original crop still was being grown.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - The OPEC cartel has reduced oil production thus far in June but is still a long way from a limit agreed on last month to ease the world crude glut and support higher oil prices, an informed source said Thursday.

"June is currently running between 23 million and 23.5 million barrels a day," said the U.S. source, who closely monitors exports of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries for a major oil company.

The source, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified, said his company estimated final OPEC May output at 23.6 million barrels a day. He also cautioned that "early shipments don't necessarily indicate how you're going to end up the month, but OPEC appears to be tightening up." Oil prices moved up Thursday on an unconfirmed report that OPEC had cut its June output so far to 22.9 million barrels a day.

At an early May emergency meeting held in the face of a global glut of crude and declining prices, OPEC agreed to cut daily output by 1.4 million barrels to 22 million barrels through July.

One problem is that "April output was close to 24.2 million barrels a day " rather than the 23.4 million barrels OPEC was using as a base for its reduction, the source said.

Although it has curbed production by more than 700,000 barrels, the cartel is still a long way from its 22 million-barrels-a-day goal, the source said. OPEC controls more than a third of the world's crude oil output and supports higher prices by limiting members' exports.

The problem has been that some members, especially Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, have produced way over their quotas. Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer and the world's largest crude exporter, then raised its production by nearly 600,000 barrels a day to maintain its 24.4 percent share of cartel output.

The oil company source said Kuwait appeared to have curtailed its output in June by another 200,000 barrels and "is about where they should be" in terms of its OPEC quota of 1.5 million barrels a day.

The UAE, which had been producing at a 2.1 million-barrels-a-day rate, has reduced its output somewhat, the source said. But it's not clear that the UAE has met its reduction target of 200,000 barrels a day promised at last month's OPEC meeting, he said. Mena Saeed Otaiba, the UAE's oil minister, Tuesday said his nation had reduced output by 200,000 barrels to 1.9 million barrels daily since May.

Even with the promised cutback, UAE output would far exceed its OPEC quota. The UAE refused to accept a quota at the last regular meeting of OPEC oil ministers in November. They left its limit at 1.09 million barrels a day, close to the UAE's June 1989 quota of 1.04 million barrels. The November meeting also set the current overall OPEC ceiling of 22 million barrels a day.

As it did last month, Saudi Arabia has cut out excess production and is currently pumping its OPEC limit of 5.4 million barrels a day, the source said. In a move apparently aimed at forcing the UAE and Kuwait to cut back, Saudi Arabia last week began discounting crude deliveries to some areas.

Cristina Haus, a New York consultant who closely follows OPEC, said Iran last week "had a very bad week," producing only 2.1 million barrels a day - one million barrels below its quota.

She said this reduction was only temporary and projected that Iran's daily output for June would average 2.85 million barrels, vs. 3.15 million barrels in May. Haus also forecast that Kuwaiti production in June would average 1.8 million barrels a day.

MOSCOW (JUNE 14) UPI - The head of a new union billed as representing Soviet peasants is a collective farm boss considered so conservative he was accused last month by President Mikhail Gorbachev of wanting to roll back perestroika.

Vasily Starodubtsev, elected Wednesday to head the U.S.S.R. Peasants Union after all other candidates withdrew, reaffirmed his support for the existing system of collective and state farms in an interview with the Selskaya Zhizn (Rural Life) newspaper Thursday.

"I highly respect the collective forms of managing agricultural production: collective and state farms," said Starodubtsev. "I am deeply convinced that they are only beginning to awaken from lethargy. They have a future."

Although Starodubtsev added he regards "all other forms with understanding and respect," his strong support of the idea of collective farm system originally forced on Soviet peasants by Josef Stalin in 1929 drew criticism from Gorbachev last month.

"According to him perestroika is all mistakes and faults," Gorbachev said after Starodubtsev spoke at a meeting of those who hold leases on state land. "What Starodubtsev wants is a return backwards. ... You want to return us to the old administrative commanding system."

As part of Gorbachev's reform program, on Feb. 28 Parliament passed a land law that allows peasants to leave collective farms and set up private homesteads for the first time since Stalin's brutal collectivization.

While the law does not allow private property in the sense that the land may be bought and sold and it did not abolish state and collective farms, it did strike at one of the basic principles of the Soviet socialist system - that all "means of production" be collectively owned.

Collective and state farms account for nearly all agriculture in the Soviet Union. On a state farm peasants work for a set salary and have little or no control. The workers on collective farms theoretically control production and share in profits, but in reality all agriculture has been centrally controlled since collectivization.

Despite an opinion poll earlier this year that showed nearly half the peasants supported the change to private cultivation, most of the delegates to this week's founding meeting of the Peasants Union seemed to disapprove of Gorbachev's call for a new system of property rights and production.

"The position of Starodubtsev, shared by most of the congress ... is different: Give us more investments. We favor all forms of farming but priority must be given to collective and state farms," the official Izvestia newspaper said Thursday.

Although there was no breakdown of the 2,000 delegate's positions, many of those attending the founding Peasants Union congress were managers of collective farms or other officials.

Starodubtsev has been chairman of a large collective in the Tula region about 100 miles south of Moscow since 1963. He is also chairman of the Russian Agrarian Union that groups collective farmers, a Soviet People's Deputy and a member of the Communist Party, Selskaya Zhizn said.

There were originally nine candidates for the position of chairman of the Peasants Union, including Politburo arch-conservative Yegor Ligachev, but they all withdrew from the election.

Ligachev told the congress he is a steadfast proponent of public property and "can account for failures in agriculture by the fact party bodies have reduced their influence in the economy," Izvestia said.

He had no explanation for why Soviet agriculture did so poorly for the 60 years it was under strict central control. A net exporter of grain before the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, the Soviet Union must now import about 42 million tons of grain and corn a year.

The new land law passed in February allows peasants - estimated to account for at least one-third of the 290 million people in the Soviet Union - to lease land from local government bodies and pass it on to their descendants, but it forbids them to sell it, mortgage it or give it away as a gift.

Boris Yeltsin, the populist recently elected president of the Russian republic, was one of the few speakers at the Peasants Union congress supporting a radical move to private farming.

"The basis of development of the agrarian sector is a peasant-owner who will be the owner of not only means of production (equipment) but the land as well," Yeltsin said. "His right to choose a form of farming must be guaranteed (and) party organizations must not interfere in the productive activities."

FREETOWN, SIERRA LEONE (JUNE 14) UPI - The Liberian government proposed a mutual withdrawal plan Thursday for its own troops and rebel forces as a first step to establishing a cease-fire, sources close to the negotiations said.

Under the proposal, an international peacekeeping force would be sent to Liberia and negotiations would begin on both a cease-fire and an end to the 6-month old conflict, the sources said.

The plan would require that government troops withdraw to an area around the capital of Monrovia while rebel forces would retreat to northern Nimba county.

It was the first sign that concrete bargaining was taking place after three days of talks at the U.S. Embassy in Freetown between the government of President Samuel Doe and the National Patriotic Front loyal to rebel chief Charles Taylor.

The rebels said they were studying the idea of a mutual troop withdrawal and were not expected to respond until later Thursday or Friday.

Analysts familiar with the military situation in Liberia said it was far from certain the rebels, who are just 35 miles from the capital and control much of the countryside, would accept the proposal.

Since the start of the talks Tuesday the guerrillas have insisted that Doe and his government resign as a condition for any ceasefire. Government negotiators have categorically rejected the demand.

''Doe has lost the war and he is just trying to stall so he can try and use the defense force he has established near his home town to attack us from the rear, but he knows he has lost the war,'' one rebel negotiator said.

Earlier the United States was reported to be trying to arrange a peaceful transfer of power by giving the rebels a list of government and military officials it would like to see remain in place should Doe resign or be overthrown.

The United States may also be behind a promise made by the rebels at the peace talks Tuesday to hold free elections before the end of the year if theycome to power, Liberia experts said.

Taylor, a former Doe Cabinet minister who crossed the border into Liberia from the Ivory Coast last December, had previously promised to hold elections but had refused to set a specific date.

Liberia, founded in 1847 by former American slaves whose descendants dominated the West African country's politics until Doe came to power in a bloody 1980 coup, is strategically important to the United States because Washington maintains an extensive network of transmitting stations there.

Between 1980 and 1985 the Reagan Administration gave Liberia over $500 million, more aid than to any other African country received per capita. Aid was suspended last year when arrears on loan repayments reached $7 million.

Earlier Thursday the two sides called for an end to the random killing of civilians.

''Both sides strongly condemn the killing, harassment and destruction of property of innocent, unarmed civilians as such acts will not benefit either side, since there can be no winners in this fracticidal war,'' a joint statement by the Liberian government and guerrilla negotiators said.

Violence against civilians has stepped up in recent weeks as the rebels pushed closer to Monrovia, with decapitated and tortured corpses appearing on beaches, empty lots and road sides in and around the capital.

On Wednesday four soldiers charged with the murder of a civilian mayor and two other men went on trial as the government stepped up efforts to stem the tribal related killings.

Most of the violence has involved four of Liberia's multiple ethnic groups. Doe's Krahn tribe, along with its ally the Mandingos, are believed to have confronted the Gio and Mano tribes, from which the rebels have recruited many of their supporters.

TRENTON, NJ (JUNE 14) UPI - Exxon Corp. agreed Thursday to spend as much as $35 million to bring its Bayway Refinery into compliance with state air pollution laws, the state Department of Environmental Protection said.

The agreement requires Exxon to cut air pollution levels at the Linden plant by roughly half by Oct. 1, to the state maximum of 30 pounds of particulates per hour from current levels of 45 to 70 pounds per hour. If pollution levels are not lowered by that date, Exxon has agreed to upgrade anti-pollution equipment at a cost of $25 million to $35 million.

If smokestack tests fail to find the refinery in compliance with pollution laws, the company will face fines of $25,000 a day, or a total of about $20 million. The company would face another $5 million fine if it fails the smokestack tests and also fails to install the equipment.

"This agreement marks a new enforcement policy for the DEP, one which makes compliance with pollution laws good business," Gov. Jim Florio said. "It also marks a new commitment by Exxon to live in harmony with New Jersey's environment," he said. Company officials could not be reached for comment.

Bayway, the largest oil refinery on the East Coast, was in the news earlier this year when an underwater pipeline running between the refinery and another Exxon facility burst Jan. 1. The rupture dumped 567,000 gallons of oil into the Arthur Kill, a shipping channel that separates New York and New Jersey.

The air pollution spewed out by the plant at rates twice the state standard include mineral-laden dusts, sulfuric acid and sulfates, according to the DEP. The pollutants affect visibility and can cause respiratory irritation or illness.

The agreement was set in a consent order that was the third signed by Exxon in the past two years promising to reduce air pollution. The company failed to comply with the previous two orders and paid fines totaling $145,000, but Environmental Protection Commissioner Judith Yaskin said the far higher penalties in the new order should ensure compliance.

The Bayway Refinery employs 1,700 people and produces 4.2 million gallons of gasoline and 200,000 gallons of fuel oil a day.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 14) UPI - The opposition Social Democratic Party will give its parliamentary backing needed for ratification of a key treaty on economic union with East Germany, party leaders said Thursday.

Emerging from a crisis meeting of the Social Democratic leadership, ranking member Oskar Lafontaine admitted the party ''faces a dilemma'' because many members remained critical of the document.

Lafontaine, the Social Democratic candidate to challenge Chancellor Helmut Kohl in December elections, said he remained strongly opposed to the introduction on July 1 of the West German mark in East Germany - a key component of the treaty for economic, currency and social union.

But he said that preparations for the currency switch in East Germany were so far advanced that it was now too late to stop the process.

''In such a situation in which the subjects of the economic decision have fully prepared themselves for the introduction of the Deutsche mark, it would not be possible to reverse the entire process,'' he told a news conference in Bonn.

He made it clear that opposition Social Democratic members of the legislature will support the draft treaty at it third reading in Parliament this month, ensuring the document receives the two-thirds backing needed for ratification.

In a communique issued Thursday, the Social Democratic leadership said it remained critical of the treaty and the rapid timetable for its introduction.

The statement said the party's willingness to support the document in Parliament ''does not mean support of the Federal Chancellor's methods, of the completely insufficient preparation of the economic union or of the state treaty in its entirety.''

Lafontaine warned the rapid introduction of the West German currency in East Germany will have serious consequences for the former Communist state including massive unemployment.

In recent weeks, the Social Democrats have been at odds over the treaty with the West and East German governments as well as within itself.

Both German governments gave their full backing to the draft document which they signed last month.

Many members of the Social Democratic Party have been annoyed with Lafontaine's sharp criticism of the treaty and with his earlier call not to support it. Political observers believe that Lafontaine agreed to back down from his tough stance after party officials suggested he may become the leader of an all-German Social Democratic Party when the parties merge this year.

A tough, charismatic politician, Lafontaine was recently chosen to challenge Kohl in Dec. 2 elections.

LEXINGTON, KY (JUNE 14) UPI - Bernadette Locke doesn't consider herself a pioneer even though she made college sports history by becoming the first woman ever to join a men's Division I basketball coaching staff.

Locke, formerly an assistant women's coach at Georgia, her alma mater, put a notation in the history book Wednesday when head Coach Rick Pitino named her as an assistant.

''I don't want to be a big deal,'' said Locke, a native of Philadelphia, Pa., ''I'm just one of the other coaches, and I don't want to be treated any more or less.

''I'm a coach. I don't want them to see me just as the lady,'' said Locke, 31, who was a guard on Georgia's women's team in 1981.

Pitino said Locke's job will be the same as other assistant coaches on the squad - on-court coaching, scouting and recruiting. Her special assignment will be in the team's career-placement program.

Locke said she was shocked when she received the offer to work on Pitino's coaching staff.

''It threw me,'' she said of the call from Kentucky. ''I hope this will open some doors (for women). If it does, that's great.''

The Wildcats currently are on two years' probation for NCAA recruiting violations under the regime of former coach Eddie Sutton.

Pitino said Locke is a full-fledged assistant coach, fitting into his realigned staff that includes associate coach Orlando ''Tubby'' Smith, assistant coach-recruiting coordinator Herb Sendek and assistant coach Bill Donovan.

Locke fills a spot vacated when associate coach Ralph Willard took the head coaching job at Western Kentucky University.

''She will be involved in all phases of the game,'' Pitino said. ''She will share in all of the coaching responsibilities.''

However, Locke will have an additional duty that Pitino called a bit unique.

''We need to do more for athletes beyond graduation,'' he said. ''We would like to see them go on to situations where they can be happy and successful. We would like to introduce our players as freshmen to areas in which they may develop a liking and interest.''

Pitino said he wants his new assistant to have lunch once or twice a week with people from major corporations in the general area and around Kentucky.

''We want her to help open some doors after graduation for our players,'' he said.

Pitino said Locke's recruiting will be limited to on-campus work. NCAA rules permit the head coach and two aides to do off-campus recruiting. Smith and Sendek will assist Pitino in that department.

''I've coached for six years and with any player it takes time to gain confidence in any new coach,'' Locke said. ''But once you convince them you're going to teach them the best you know how, and once they realize you care and you know the game, I think it will be all right.''

KUWAIT (JUNE 14) UPI - King Fahd of Saudi Arabia said Thursday he hoped to improve his country's troubled relations with Moslem foe Iran.

''With Iran in particular, we have not rejected the principle of improving the atmosphere with them (the Iranians), but we want to eliminate all reasons for the current dispute,'' state-run Riyadh Radio, monitored in Kuwait, quoted Fahd as saying. The remarks were originally published in the Saudi daily Okaz.

The dispute he referred to took place four years ago in Islam's holy city of Mecca, when some 400 mostly Iranian pilgrims died in bloody clashes with security forces.

The Saudis accused the Iranians of staging political demonstrations at the annual Moslem hajj pilgrimage, and broke ties with Tehran a year later.

Fahd offered his olive branch two weeks before the Hajj was scheduled to begin. Iran is boycotting the event for the third consecutive year to protest Saudi-imposed quota restrictions.

''The kingdom's position is to support any genuine effort that would save this nation (Iran) from a lot of suffering and rifts,'' Fahd said.

Oman has in the past mediated between Saudi Arabia and Iran, but Riyadh has refused to accept Iranian conditions for a flood of some 150,000 Iranian pilgrims per year, for fear their presence might spark violence in Islam's holiest shrines.

SAGINAW, MI (JUNE 14) UPI - Three children died early Thursday in a fire at their home on what would have been their last day of classes at elementary school.

The victims were 11-year-old Nicole, 9-year-old Laronda and 7-year-old Isaac Rollie. Another child, Ryan, 13, and his parents, Cynthia and Willie Rollie, were hospitalized.

Fire Chief Richard Hoffman said the cause of the fire was under investigation, and he did not know if there was a working smoke detector in the house when the fire broke out about 5 a.m.

The children were students at Merrill Park Elementary School.

DALLAS (JUNE 14) UPI - Former Budget Director James C. Miller III said Thursday the budget summit between the White House and Congress is likely to result in more spending restraint and a number of revenue measures which both sides will deny constitute a tax increase.

Noting he is not a "fan of budget summits," Miller, who served as director of the Office of Management and Budget in the Reagan administration, said in his opinion the budget deficit should be reduced by controlling spending and not by raising taxes.

Speaking at an economic and tax policy seminar sponsored by the Washington D.C.-based Tax Foundation, Miller said, "What is likely to come out of the summit is, first, a realization that the deficit problem is not as grave as recent reports have made it out to be. Congress will agree with President Bush not to put the thrift bailout "on-budget."

"Second, more spending restraint will be found, especially in defense. Third, there will be a potpourri of revenue measures, the totality of which both sides will deny constitute a tax increase."

Miller said the package will include a larger-than-expected cut in the capital gains tax which will increase revenue in the short run. There will be assorted "loop closings," changes to enable the Internal Revenue Service to collect more taxes, and perhaps the elimination of the personal income tax "bubble" which would raise the marginal tax rate to 33 percent for high income earners.

Miller said all such measures may be needed to meet the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law's target of $64 billion for the next fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. Current estimates of the deficit are running in excess of $120 billion.

Miller said he expects the economic expansion, now in its eighth year, to continue because the leading indicators remain reasonably firm. But because of the Federal Reserve's preoccupation with inflation, money growth will be less than needed to maintain the economy at its full potential.

Interest rates will remain stable in the short-term and lower in the long-term, he said. Total employment will continue to set records every month and unemployment rates will stay low. Miller said the trade deficit will continue to fall which in turn will help ease the pressure on protectionist measures.

Among the trouble spots, Miller listed the slower growth rate, declining corporate profits, lower gross private domestic investment, lower residential and non-residential investment and flat industrial production. "Yet, despite these problems, I believe that 1990 will be a good, though not great, year for the U.S. economy," he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney extended a freeze Thursday on $7 billion worth of new military construction projects and was expected to make a decision next week on canceling a ''substantial number'' of projects.

The freeze had been scheduled to expire Friday.

''The secretary has extended the current freeze on military construction projects through Nov. 15 and is continuing to study a list of projects which he will recommend to Congress for rescission,'' Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said.

Cheney first imposed the freeze Jan. 24, citing planned U.S. force changes and budget constraints. He extended it April 30 and directed Deputy Defense Secretary Donald Atwood to study for possible cancellation a list of 207 projects, worth $1.2 billion, that had been approved by Congress.

Cheney on Wednesday received Atwood's list of targeted projects - ''a somewhat smaller number than'' 207 - and requested more information on some of the sites before making a final decision on canceling the projects Williams said.

''I would expect a decision this next week,'' Williams said, adding that Congress will have to approve the cancellations recommended by Cheney.

''The secretary believes that funding should be canceled for a substantial number of military construction projects,'' Williams said. ''I don't have a number for you.''

The programs identified for possible elimination would affect a wide sweep of bases in the United States - mostly dining facilities, child-care centers, housing improvements, warehouses and weapons ranges - and foreign bases likely to be closed or consolidated because of expected U.S. troop reductions in Europe.

Included on the original list were four of the six locations identified by the Navy as strategic home ports: Ingleside, Texas; Mobile, Ala.; Pascagoula, Miss.; and Staten Island, N.Y. Work at Staten Island is nearly complete.

Another major item on the original list was $110 million for a large rocket test facility at Arnold, Tenn., the some state of Democratic Sen. Jim Sasser, the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

An item on the original list that is likely to be cut is $56,000 for the installation of fireplaces in the senior officers' quarters at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Cardinal John O'Connor warned Catholic politicians Thursday they risk excommunication if they continue to support abortion rights.

''Where Catholics are perceived not only as treating church teaching on abortion with contempt, but helping to multiply abortions by advocating legislation supporting abortion, or by making public funds available for abortion, bishops may decide that ... such Catholics must be warned that they are at risk of excommunication,'' O'Connor's statement said.

Writing in the archdiocesan newspaper Catholic New York, O'Connor said if such actions persist, ''bishops may consider excommunication the only option.''

New York has a number of nationally prominent Catholic politicians who support legal abortion, including Gov. Mario Cuomo, who immediately termed O'Connor's statement ''upsetting ... disconcerting.''

''The church leadership, led by the cardinal, the college of cardinals and the pope - we defer to them, respect them and let them speak for certain authority,'' said Cuomo, who personally opposes abortion.

''But I'm a layman and I speak for myself. It's about people having the choice in our democracy and the freedom to have the choice.

''I have not changed my mind, nor will I,'' Cuomo said.

An excommunicated Catholic is cut off from the sacraments of the church with the exception of penance, which gives him a chance to confess his sins and reconcile with the church. A woman who has an abortion is automatically considered excommunicated.

O'Connor said Catholic politicians cannot separate their faith from their policies.

''It must be remembered that we're not talking about a public officeholder demanding that Americans go to mass on Sunday or not eat meat on Friday,'' he said.

''We are talking about an individual who bases his decision not simply on the desires of the majority, but on what he or she believes is right and just.''

O'Connor's warning came just days after the archdiocese rescinded an invitation to Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., a Catholic, to speak at a Catholic high school commencement because of his support for legal abortion.

The cardinal said that kind off action served as a warning and ''to help reduce scandal.'' Rangel said the cardinal's statement would not ''sidetrack'' him.

''I think this type of language is intemperate, mean-spirited and in contempt of Christian and Catholic belief,'' Rangel said. ''Intimidating and threatening people is not the sensitive and churchly thing to do.''

The warning also drew immediate fire from Catholics for a Free Choice, an independent group of Catholics that supports abortion rights.

''We find this extremely disturbing,'' said Frances Kissling, president of the group.

''We had hoped that the example of Archibishop Rembert Weakland would mark some change in the bishop's attack on politicians by O'Connor and the pro-life committee of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.''

In the reference to Weakland, Kissling drew attention to a statement by Weakland in mid-March suggesting a Catholic could, in conscience, support legal abortion.

O'Connor's statement stressed that he was speaking in his capacity as archbishop of New York and not in his role as chairman of the bishops' committee for anti-abortion activities.

Another Catholic congressman, Rep. Jose Serrano, D-N.Y., said O'Connor's statement ''just saddens you to the point where you wonder where it is we're headed as a Catholic church.''

Rep. Susan Molinari, D-N.Y., said the statement would not change her mind. ''It deepens the sadness that you feel to think that they have raised the stakes so high,'' she said.

After reading O'Connor's statement, Cuomo said he found it ''difficult'' even to discuss the issue of excommunication.

''I don't like to hear it,'' he said. ''This is something very fundamental to our family. We cling to our Roman Catholicism as consolation and as a source of strength. It's profoundly disconcerting, but I'm not going to change my mind.''

KUWAIT (JUNE 14) UPI - Iraq rejected an Iranian warning Thursday that it would deploy submarines at the mouth of the Gulf to prevent Iraqi war and civilian ships from using the strategic waterway, saying it had the right to free navigation.

State-run Tehran Radio on Wednesday quoted the commander of the Iranian navy as saying Iran would deploy submarines to stop Iraqi vessels sailing through the Strait of Hormuz.

''If the (Iranian) statement proves to be correct, then it will be expressing a very serious stance because it is declaring an intention to violate the (Aug. 1988) cease-fire,'' Iraq's official INA news agency quoted a navy statement as saying.

''Such an Iranian statement is nothing but playing with serious issues in an irresponsible way,'' the statement added. ''Iraq has the right to free navigation throughout the Strait of Hormuz and international waters for military and civilian purposes, just like Iran and other regional states.

''Iraq will not allow any party to limit that right.''

Iran and Iraq have recently made moves toward signing a comprehensive peace treaty to end their 8-year-long war. But the two sides remain divided on issues such as free navigation in the Gulf and the status of the Shatt al Arab waterway in the northern Gulf.

There have been no serious violations of the two-year-old U.N.-brokered ceasefire along the Iran-Iraq border, although both sides continue to hold some 100,000 prisoners of war.

(JUNE 14) UPI - Romania's President Ion Iliescu spoke to a cheering crowd of supporters in Bucharest today following clashes between police and anti-government protesters that left four demonstrators dead. He told the crowd- many of them miners who helped put down the rebellion- that the violence was ''inspired by right-wing forces.'' Bucharest is quieter today but the situation is still tense. The official news agency Rompres says the army is keeping tight control of the state television station.

The White House says President Bush agrees with Secretary of State Baker's stand on Israel's role in the Middle East peace process. In an appearance yesterday before a House panel, Baker blamed the Israeli government for the breakdown in the peace talks, and gave out the White House phone number and said when Israel is ''serious about peace, call.'' White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says ''the parties of the region have to want peace to have it happen.''

The Soviet Labor Minister says up to three-Million Soviet migrant workers could soon hunt for temporary jobs in the West because of high UNemployment in their homeland. At a news conference in Geneva, Switzerland, the Moscow official says the Soviet Union's move to a free market economy could mean fewer jobs. He told reporters Moscow would like to see UNemployed Soviets find temporary work in the West.

The Bush administration opposes the funding levels in a four and one-half BILLION-dollar package of grants to state and local services to combat AIDS. The package covers a five-year period. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater stopped short of threatening a presidential veto of the measure that won House approval yesterday. It gives emergency funds to cities hardest hit by the AIDS epidemic. The Senate passed a similar bill last month.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The Supreme Court, boosting local efforts to combat drunken driving, Thursday upheld 6-3 the constitutionality of sobriety checkpoints.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist, ruling in a Michigan case, balanced the goals of the widely used tactic against the impact on motorists of police checks and concluded the stops do not violate the Constitution's ban against unreasonable search and seizure.

Rehnquist noted the ''magnitude of the drunken driving problem'' and said that reports of ''death and mutilation on the nation's roads are legion.''

''Conversely, the weight bearing on the other scale - the measure of the intrusion on motorists stopped briefly at sobriety checkpoints - is slight '' he wrote.

Rehnquist also said there is little concern that the stops will ''generate fear and surprise'' among motorists.

''The 'fear and surprise' to be considered are not the natural fear of one who has been drinking over the prospect of being stopped at a sobriety checkpoint, but, rather, the fear and surprise engendered in law-abiding motorists by the nature of the stop,'' he said.

Rehnquist was joined in his ruling by Justices Byron White, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy.

In dissent, Justice William Brennan, joined by Justice Thurgood Marshall, disagreed that the intrusion was minimal.

''I do not dispute the immense social cost caused by drunken drivers, nor do I slight the government's efforts to prevent such a tragic loss,'' he wrote. ''Indeed, I would hazard a guess that today's opinion will be received favorably by a majority of our society, who would willingly suffer the minimal intrusion of a sobriety checkpoint stop in order to prevent drunken driving.''

He added, however, that ''consensus that a particular law enforcement technique serves a laudable purpose has never been the touchstone of constitutional analysis.''

Justice John Paul Stevens also wrote a dissent:

''Unfortunately, the court is transfixed by the wrong symbol - the illusory prospect of punishing countless intoxicated mortorists - when it should keep its eyes on the road plainly marked by the Constitution.''

Michigan Attorney General Frank Kelley said he is pleased with the U.S. Surpreme Court's ruling to uphold his state's right to operate sobriety checklanes on its roads and highways.

''I welcome this decision by the United States Supreme Court which allows Michigan to take strong steps to protect the public from drunken drivers '' he said. ''Unfortunately, public education is not enough; sometimes strong enforcement measures provide the only effective answer.''

Howard Simon, executive director of the Michigan chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said the ruling doesn't mean the ''case is over.'' He said a lower court order was based on the Michigan Constitution, which could be used as a basis to continue fighting sobriety checklanes in Michigan.

Micky Sadoff, national president of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, called the ruling a ''great victory'' and said ''we must begin to assure that every community will make checkpoins a key element of an all-out campaign to finally rid our roads of the menace posed by drinking drivers.''

The drunken driving case concerned the constitutionality of Michigan's sobriety checkpoint program. At issue was whether the checkpoints violate a motorist's Fourth Amendment protections against unreasonable search and seizure.

In their appeal to the high court, lawyers for Michigan State Police said lower court decisions across the nation vary on the constitutionality of checkpoints and urged the Supreme Court to resolve the issue.

Drawing comparisons to high court decisions last term that upheld drug testing for designated federal employees, state police contend the public threat posed by drunken drivers outweighs the ''minimal intrusiveness'' of the sobriety checkpoints.

In May 1986, several Michigan legislators filed suit after the Michigan State Police set up its first sobriety checkpoint operation near Saginaw.

Under an agreement between the police and the lawmakers, the checkpoint was operated for just a few hours on May 17 and 18 before it was shut down and the issue was thrown into the Wayne County Circuit Court.

The circuit court struck down the law, finding that the checks were unconstitutional, and the Michigan Court of Appeals and the Michigan Supreme Court refused to reverse that decision.

CHICAGO (JUNE 14) UPI - Aggressive selling based on weather conditions pressured grain and soybean futures Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Grain prices were lower and soybeans were sharply lower at the close.

Forecasters predicted favorable weather in much of the Corn Belt for several days. The National Weather Service 30-day outlook called for normal to above-normal rainfall and normal temperatures which would benefit crops during the early part of the growing season.

Soybeans were sharply lower, but recovered some of the losses during the closing minutes. Sharp losses in soybean oil and meal contributed to the weakness in soybeans.

The lack of export sales kept oil and meal prices on the defensive.

Corn rallied from session lows but was moderately lower at the final bell. Liquidation was evident in corn, at least in part on reports a private crop analyst has predicted farmers will plant nearly 74 million acres of corn. That is higher than the trade looks for in the Agriculture Department acreage report to be released June 28.

Wheat traded lower in line with losses on the rest of the floor, but rallied from the lows on short-covering.

Country movement was light.

At the close, corn was off 1 1/2 to 3 1/4, soybeans down 13 1/2 to 15 1/4, wheat off 3/4 to 2 and oats down 2 3/4 to 5 cents.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The United States wants clear commitments from Tokyo it will increase its internal investments enough to reduce the "high and unsustainable" U.S. trade deficit with Japan within three to five years, senior administration officials said Thursday.

Japan does not need a huge surplus in its balance of payments in order to finance the capital requirements of other nations, said two senior administration officials who asked not to be identified.

The statement was a response to recent Tokyo claims it needs large surpluses in its foreign accounts in order to finance the U.S. fiscal deficit as well as the investment requirements of Eastern European and other capital-hungry nations. Japan's trade surplus with the United States is $45 billion.

The officials briefed reporters on the eve of State Secretary James Baker's meeting with Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama in San Francisco to discuss the Structural Impediments Initiative, a year-old negotiation to dismantle structural economic barriers to trade and investments between the two countries.

Senior Japanese officials warned Wednesday in Tokyo that they will not make any additional concessions to Washington. U.S. and Japanese negotiators issued an interim report in April on the SII, listing Japanese and U.S. commitments to lower barriers to goods and investments.

The senior administration officials said the Bush administration is "concerned" Japan has a reluctant view toward the SII negotiations by "not moving beyond" the agreements contained in the interim report.

The report was criticized in Japan as implying that the Washington wants, among other things, Japan to reduce its savings rate, one of the world's highest, in order to increase Japanese domestic demand and absorb more imports.

The officials said that the Bush administration has stated "clear and unequivocally" that it does not want Japan to reduce its savings rate. Also, the negotiations are not intended to aim at completely eliminating the Japanese balance of payments surplus.

What Washington wants is a reduction of the "high and unsustainable" imbalances between the two countries through higher Japanese investments in infrastructure, which would also bolster domestic demand and absorb part of Japan's surplus savings, the officials said.

Besides, the officials claimed, "no surplus whatsoever is needed" for a country to export capital. And nations such as those of Eastern Europe would be well advised to create the conditions to retain their savings and invest them domestically, they added.

The United States wants Japan to increase its spending on infrastructure to nine percent from 6.7 percent, with clear and specific commitments, in order to switch resources from exports to investments, the officials said.

Japan's response - a lack of clear commitments that would allow it to average such investments over ten years without starting them immediately, thus allowing the country to rake in huge trade surpluses for years to come - is unacceptable, the officials said. Both countries should move in such a way as to reduce their trade and financial imbalances "in three to five years," they said.

They added another snag in SII is the Japanese refusal to define how Tokyo is going to increase its penalties for unfair business practices, which U.S. companies blame for their lack of access to the Japanese market.

BY GAYLE YOUNG - UPI

(JUNE 14) UPI - To burn an Iranian flag is to desecrate the name of Allah and the punishment would be along the lines faced by Salman Rushdie, while in Italy it's legal to burn a flag but against the law to insult a head of state.

If the United States were to adopt a constitutional amendment banning the desecration of the Stars and Stripes, it would be joining company with a number of countries from the Soviet Union to South Africa that have similar laws, according to an informal poll conducted Thursday by United Press International correspondents around the world.

But there are many other nations that have no laws against burning the flag, and other countries with laws on the books that don't enforce them.

''There is no offense to damaging it in any way,'' a Home Office official in London said of Great Britain's distinctive red, white and blue Union Jack. The same goes for Australia's modified Union Jack, according to officials there.

Japan also has no law against desecrating its white and red flag that depicts the rising sun, although when a flag was burned recently in Okinawa the suspect was charged with destroying public property.

In other countries, flag burners face more serious consequences.

A number of fundamentalists in Iran have burned American flags to protest the United States, but dissidents who oppose the ruling clerics have never been known to burn Iran's green and orange flag, which contain's the name of God, or Allah. To do so would be blasphemy, the same charge leveled against Rushdie when he was sentenced to death by assassination for his novel ''Satanic Verses.''

Libya doesn't have a law against burning its simple all-green flag, or laws against anyhing for that matter.

''The problem with Libya is that there are no written laws or lawyers but the so called popular committee would immediately sentence to death anyone found guilty of burning the Libyan flag,'' said one source well connected with the North African country.

The Soviet Union and most East European countries have laws that require two to four year prison sentences for flag desecration, although authorities in East Europe turned a blind eye when pro-democracy demonstrators cut the communist symbol out of national flags waved during protests.

In East Germany, few people would dream of desecrating their flag these days - it's much too valuable. Souvenir hunters have been snatching up the banners, which will become obsolete when the East rejoins West Germany. Large East German flags are being sold for up to $100 each by Berlin street vendors who also peddle pieces of the Berlin wall.

In India, burning a flag would violate the National Prevention of Insults to National Honour Act of 1971, a law that is so strict that a person can in theory be sentenced to three years in jail for speaking contemptuously of the country's green, white and orange flag.

China also could deal harshly with flag burners under a law banning counter-revolutionary incitement, which carries a minimum of five years in prison for those deemed to be ringleaders.

South Koreans can be sentenced up to 10 years in prison if they ''damage, remove or disgrace'' the Korean flag and can also face jail for desecrating the flag of a foreign country. However, anti-American protesters who've burned the Stars and Stripes in recent protests have gotten off with warnings.

Burning the South African flag or commiting ''any other act calculated to hold it in contempt'' is illegal in the country under a 1983 constitutional act that calls for a $3,700 fine and a five year prison term.

Argentinians face one to four years in prison if they ''publicly insult the flag, the national coat of arms or the national anthem.''

And finally, Kenya has no specific law against desecrating its black, brown and green flag that bears a shield and spears.

But it is definately illegal to rip up any Kenyan currency in Kenya, because every bill carrries a portrait of President Daniel Arap Moi.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Three Puerto Rican nationalists who spent decades in jail for a 1954 shooting attack on members of Congress will share the stage with Nelson Mandela at a Harlem rally next week, an official said Thursday.

A fourth nationalist, convicted of the 1950 attempted assassination of President Harry Truman, was invited but is too ill to attend, said Jaime Estades, Latin Affairs Coordinator for the Nelson Mandela Welcome Committee.

''It's a gesture of solidarity is what it is,'' Estades said. ''They're the longest-serving political prisoners in the Western hemisphere.''

Mandela, leader of the long-banned African National Congress, was released in February after spending 27 years in prison for anti-apartheid activities.

The three Puerto Ricans, Lolita Lebron, Rafael Cancel Miranda, and Irving Flores Rodriguez, spent 25 years in prison for the attack on the U.S. House of Representatives that left five congressmen wounded.

They said they had done it to back demands for Puerto Rican independence.

Estades said Lebron, Miranda and Rodriguez would attend a reception for former political prisoners with Mandela, and also share the stage at a Harlem rally.

But Jim Bell, the welcome committee's New York coordinator, said seating plans had not yet been drawn up for the Harlem rally, and there was no way to predict who would accompany Mandela on the stage.

Tebogo Mafole, the African National Congress representative to the United Nations, also said he had not heard of the participation by the Puerto Ricans.

''This shouldn't alarm anybody,'' Estades said. ''Mandela is an ex-political prisoner who's coming out of jail and he's going to meet with other political prisoners.''

A fourth man who took part in the attack on Congress, Andres Figueroa Cordero, was also sentenced to prison, but was released when he fell gravely ill with cancer, and died shortly afterward.

The three others were released from prison when President Jimmy Carter granted their freedom in 1979.

Also invited was 28-year prisoner Oscar Collazo, who with a companion, Griselio Torresola, stormed the steps of Blair House in 1950 in an an attempt to assassinate Truman.

Torresola and a presidential guard were slain in the attack, but Truman, who was staying in Blair House while the White House was being renovated and witnessed the attack from an upstairs window, was unharmed.

Collazo recently suffered a heart attack and was too ill to attend, Estades said.

Collazo, who said in court that he was attempting to ''start a revolution in this country and win independence for Puerto Rico,'' was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. Truman commuted the sentence to life in prison a year later, and he was later pardoned by Carter.

Congress is now considering a bill that would schedule a plebiscite in Puerto Rico for the summer of 1991 on whether the island should become a state, enhance its commonwealth status, or become independent.

MOSCOW (JUNE 14) UPI - Parliament rejected a plan Thursday to triple bread prices in a major setback for President Mikhail Gorbachev's market reforms and ordered the government to submit a new proposal acceptable to the 15 Soviet republics.

In a vote on another aspect of economic reform plans, the Parliament approved a law for a common tax rate of 45 percent for most state-owned businesses as well as the fledgling private and cooperative enterprises.

On the controversial bread price plan, however, the Supreme Soviet ended two days of fierce debate by voting 319 to 33 against letting the government raise prices on Aug. 1. There were 12 abstentions.

The legislators ordered the the Council of Ministers to submit a new proposal in September when the fall session of the Supreme Soviet opens. Showing their new-found strength, they insisted the revised plan be acceptable to the governments of the 15 republics.

The government had thrown its full weight into the battle trying to pursuade the legislators that bread prices were ridiculously low and did not reflect the true costs of producing bread products.

In appearances before the Supreme Soviet, Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov had argued increased prices could cut down on the waste of bread and save scarce foreign currency spent on importing 42 million tons a year of grain.

Ryzhkov also said that with a budget deficit estimated at $144 billion for 1990, the country can no longer afford subsidies that keep bread prices low.

The government wanted permission to triple bread prices that currently are so low at 40 cents a loaf that farmers feed bread to their cattle. In all, subsidies on food cost the government at least $160 billion annually.

The legislators rejected both the economic arguments and promises that those on fixed incomes would receive compensation for the increases starting on July 15, two weeks before the price hikes were to begin.

''It is a defeat for the government and also for the Supreme Soviet,'' said legislator Alexander Kraiko. ''Parliaments cannot shrink from difficult, unpopular decisions.''

The votes on the price plan came a day after the Parliament approved a resolution supporting the principle of a transition to a regulated market economy.

The resolution passed Wednesday authorized Gorbachev to speed up market reform by issuing decrees after July 1 implementing temporarily already-passed laws on property, lease arrangements, and local political and economic autonomy.

Approval of the seven-point resolution Wednesday appeared to provide the go-ahead for a break with more than 60 years of a centrally planned economy, but deputies balked at allowing the price rises the government says must be among the first steps toward a market system.

The plan for price hikes brought strong opposition and sparked panic buying, and deputies demanded that local Parliaments in each of the republics approve either the price increases or the level of compensation for the increases.

The Belorussian and Ukrainian republics had already declared that they would refuse to participate in the governement plan.

The opposition forced Supreme Soviet Chairman Anatoly Lukyanov to postpone a planned vote on the measure Wednesday, but the government was unable to get approval for the plan despite the one-day delay.

Many economists and populists such as Russian Republic President Boris Yeltsin criticized the government plan as price gouging that would preserve the old system while bringing a free market no closer.

The last Soviet attempt to introduce a market-style economy was the so-called New Economic Policy of 1921-28, when retail trade was unregulated and farmers were free to sell grain and their produce at whatever prices they wished. The state maintained control of heavy industry, transportation and energy.

The NEP's mixed economy was ended in 1928 by Josef Stalin, who established a fully centrally planned economy, with the Gosplan central planning agency setting targets for five-year plans and other agencies dictating prices and regulating supplies to producers.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 14) UPI - Jewish residents called for revenge after a woman believed to be a Palestinian stabbed an 11-year-old Israeli boy in the back Thursday in a Jerusalem neighborhood and fled toward a nearby Arab area.

The attack occurred in the Armon Hanatziv neighborhood on the southern edge of Jerusalem while the boy was standing at a bus stop, witnesses said. With the knife in his back, the Israeli youth, identified as Idan Mizrachi, was transported to Hadassah Ein Kerem Hospital where he underwent surgery and was listed in good condition.

A large force of police and paramilitary Border Police converged on the area and sealed off the Arab neighborhood of Sur Bahar after witnesses said the assailant fled toward that area.

''No doubt it's a serious incident,'' said Police Minister Roni Milo, who visited the Armon Hanatziv after the attack. ''We have to think carefully how to mobilize all our forces to deal with the problem of the intifada (Palestinian uprising) here in Jerusalem.''

After the attack, Jewish residents of Armon Hanatziv called for revenge, yelling, ''We will get back at them.''

Witnesses identified the attacker as a Palestinian woman, about 20 and dressed in jeans and a white shirt. Jerusalem police commander Arye Bibi said more than 20 women fitting the description had been detained for questioning.

The stabbing is the third in Jerusalem in less than a week with apparent nationalistic motives. An 18-year-old Israeli religious institute student was stabbed and wounded Tuesday near the Old City's Damascus Gate and a 29-year-old Jewish American tourist was slightly injured last Friday while walking in the Old City's Armenian Quarter.

''The stabbing of a child is very, very exceptional,'' Bibi said. ''True, somebody who goes to the Old City has to be cautious, but I don't want to turn the subject into something that people will be afraid to walk in the streets. That's not the case in Jerusalem.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills declined Thursday to link the Mexican government's cooperation in the drug war to a free-trade agreement between the United States and its southern neighbor.

Hills told a House committee that the United States already is "getting considerable cooperation" from Mexico on drug interdiction and predicted a trade pact would lead to greater Mexican efforts against drug traffickers.

On Monday, President Bush and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari announced they had agreed in principle to begin negotiations that would remove all trade barriers between the two countries.

Appearing before the trade subcommittee of the House Ways and Means committee, Hills, who will conduct preliminary consultations in what are expected to be lengthy trade talks, was pressed several times to raise the drug issue.

Law enforcement authorities say drug traffickers, avoiding U.S. air defenses, increasingly are flying shipments into Mexico and then smuggling the drugs across the border in trucks, often hidden in legal cargo.

Hills told the subcommittee she would "consider" bringing up the subject of drugs during the preliminary trade negotiations, but could not guarantee it, given the large number of complex issues to be addressed.

"I tend to think the trade agreement is dealing with trade, and that is licit trade," she said. "But I do believe that having stronger trade relationships enables governments to work more closely on a wide range of political and economic and social problems."

Hills said the drug war would be one example of the cooperation that could be expected. She also said the prosperity that would result from the trade pact would reduce the pressure on Mexicans to enter the drug trade.

However, Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., a member of the committee and chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics, said he believed a failure to link the drug issue to trade would be "sending the wrong message" at a time when "hundreds of tons" of heroin, cocaine, and marijuana are crossing the border.

Rangel noted the United States has linked Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union to improved trade with that country and said, "I have always thought trade was one of the most important tools in our foreign policy."

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker is not ''throwing in the towel'' on Middle East peace negotiations despite his angry suggestions to Congress that the Israeli government is not sincere in its desire for a settlement, a spokeswoman said Thursday.

Baker made the suggestions Wednesday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee while reviewing the frustrations of a five-month stalemate in his attempt to get an Israeli-Palestinian dialogue started.

In comments directed to ''our Israeli friends,'' Baker recited the number of the White House switchboard and then said: ''When you get serious about peace, call.''

As a result, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the White House switchboard was overloaded Wednesday night with 6,000 to 8,000 incoming calls representing all sides of the Middle East issue.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said Thursday that Baker did not mean to say he was suspending his efforts. ''He's not throwing in the towel.''

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said President Bush agreed with ''the thrust of Secretary Baker's comments, and our view is that we've worked long and hard for the peace process.''

Fitzwater added, ''We have worked with all the parties in the region in trying to get a dialogue going, but in the final analysis the parties of the region have to want peace to have it happen.

''We can't want it for them,'' he continued. ''What he (Baker) was saying basically is that if they want peace, to get a dialogue going, then give us a call.''

Asked if Israel wanted the peace process, he replied: ''There's been an assumption here they do want it. We certainly hope they do, but we have not seen the dialogue start.''

The first responses from Israeli spokesmen were moderate.

A spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Thursday Israel was not to blame for the lack of progress and suggested Baker was probably frustrated because of pressures for Washington to halt its dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

''It would be useful for the peace process to take the PLO out of the process. There is a lot of public pressure on the United States to do just that,'' said Shamir spokesman Avi Pazner. ''And maybe that is why Mr. Baker sounded impatient. It's not because of our position.''

In Washington, Israeli Embassy spokeswoman Ruth Yaron said, ''The newly confirmed Israeli government is eager and willing to promote the peace process.''

She said, ''The peace process in the Middle East is best served by direct communications between the U.S. administration and the new Israeli government, reflecting the close and strong relationship between the two democracies.''

Pazner said Shamir hoped to revive Israel's May 1989 peace initiative, which includes plans for Palestinian elections in the West Bank.

The early comments on Capitol Hill were less measured.

During a speech by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., criticizing U.S.

contacts with the PLO, he was asked by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, if he had ever heard a secretary of state address remarks to an ally in such an ''impertinent'' tone.

''I have never heard of that kind of comment, particularly to a friendly goverment. There was a kind of flippancy to it,'' said Metzenbaum.

DeConcini responded: ''It seems to me that the distinguished secretary of state here feels that he can just ... blow off anyway he wants. He is in a popular administration and he doesn't have to even provide diplomatic respect to a strong ally.

''He doesn't have to agree with them. ... Friends can have differences. But friends must be willing to talk about their differences,'' DeConcini said. ''Secretary Baker has done the Bush administration and the peace process a disservice.''

In his statement Wednesday, Baker revealed the exact text of a note he had sent to Israel suggesting an approach that would satisfy Israeli demands on a framework for peace talks. The Israelis did not respond.

Last October, State Department spokesmen said Baker would reveal the exact language of such notes only when he felt that his effort had failed as a means of showing who was responsible for the failure.

(JUNE 14) UPI - Romanian President Ion Iliescu says violence that began at dawn yesterday was inspired- in his words- ''by right-wing forces.'' Iliescu pointed the blame while addressing a crowd of thousands of supporters today in Bucharest. Four people reportedly died and 60 others were injured in the political unrest.

Americans are celebrating Flag Day today. But the spotlight is NOT just on celebrating the creation of Old Glory and its meaning. The focus is also on whether the Constitution should be changed to ban flag desecration. In Maitland, Florida, a pastor is flying a flag in an upside down distress position to signify the danger he believes the flag is facing.

The Bush administration is confirming a report that Soviet President Gorbachev will be getting some advice on White House operations. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says chief of staff John Sununu has accepted an invitation to travel to Moscow at some time in the future.

A crowd of about five-thousand people marched through Liberia's capital today, calling for an end to six months of civil war. Many in the crowd carried banners and placards saying- ''America come to our aid.'' Thousands of Liberians have been killed since rebels began an offensive in December.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Green Seal, a stamp of approval for environmentally sound products, was introduced Thursday by a group headed by Denis Hayes, the organizer of Earth Day 1990.

The seal - a bold green check over a blue circle - will be licensed to manufacturers to be used in the advertising and on the packaging of products that meet Green Seal's standards.

''Green Seal is taking the environmental movement away from a government focus to harness the forces of the marketplace,'' Hayes told journalists at a news conference.

''We expect the Green Seal to become a catalyst for sweeping changes in consumer purchasing habits.''

Manufacturers are to pay for testing, which will be conducted by independent laboratories, Hayes said.

The first products to be evaluated by Green Seal, a not-for-profit organization based in Washington, will be light bulbs, laundry cleaners, house paints, toilet papers and facial tissues.

''We selected these products because they are common and we think we can define certain products within these categories that are better for the environment than others,'' said Norman L. Dean, Green Seal's executive director.

The first seals are expected to be licensed in early 1991, although Green Seal is still developing final criteria for the award, Dean said.

But he said Green Seal ''will examine each product category from the cradle to the grave.''

In evaluating light bulbs, for example, Green Seal intends to look at the environmental impact of mining for glass, whether toxins are released in the manufacturing process, the energy efficiency of the bulb, whether bulbs contain contaminants that would be harmful in landfills, the impact of the packaging materials and whether the bulbs can be recyled.

Green Seal, which eventually plans to evaluate hundreds of product categories, will not identify manufacturers that apply for the award or make public test failures, Hayes said.

In such cases, companies will be encouraged to re-evaluate manufacturing processes and resubmit products if changes are made.

The testing process will be overseen by an environmental standards council whose members will have no financial relationship with manufacturers of tested products, Hayes said.

Hayes said major manufacturers of products up for initial evaluations have been receptive to the idea.

But Tina Barry, a spokeswoman for Dallas-based Kimberly-Clark Corp., a big producer of paper products, said the company has ''no plans to seek a seal.''

''We believe that because there is no consensus on definitions and standards, programs such as these could add to customer confusion,'' she said.

Representatives of Fairfield, Conn.-based General Electric Co., the largest maker of light bulbs in the United States, were not immediately available to comment.

Hayes said ''there is a broad public eagnerness to have this seal affixed to products.''

''People don't tend to trust what they see in advertising and are desperately looking for outside, unbiased judgments.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan of Thailand urged stepped-up efforts Thursday to stem a flow of Chinese arms to the Khmer Rouge guerrillas and bring a cease-fire to Cambodia's bloody civil war.

Following two hours of talks with President Bush, Chatichai, whose nation has emerged as a key mediator in the conflict, declared that ''our two countries are committed more than ever to work together in bringing peace to Cambodia.''

''We will do all we can to accelerate the ongoing peace process,'' he said. Speaking to reporters, he called the ''active participation'' of the United States in that process ''vital to peace and stability of Southeast Asia.''

Though the United States has taken a less direct role than Thailand, Bush pledged to ''continue our diplomatic efforts to end the violence, to achieve a comprehensive solution that meets the aspirations of the Cambodian people.''

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Solomon said Cambodia dominated the talks between Bush and Chatichai, hinting at slight differences in approach at a time when ''we're at a fork in the road'' to a possible settlement.

With the United States favoring a strong role for the United Nations and Thailand promoting talks among the four factions in Cambodia, Solomon said there has been ''considerable ferment'' but few signs of tangible progress.

''I wouldn't want to put the label 'optimistic' at yet on that process,'' Solomon said. ''There's clearly a lot of activity, but the sense of coordinated direction between the different levels of this process have not really developed in the way that it needs to develop.''

In particular, he said, there is no evidence political collaboration among the parties to the Cambodia conflict ''is coming together'' in a way that fuels hope for a political solution.

The United States and Thailand support the three-party rebel coalition that has been at war with the Vietnamese-installed government of Prime Minister Hun Sen. He and the two non-communist rebel factions agreed last week to form a Supreme National Council to act as an interim administration until elections can be held.

The Khmer Rouge, notorious for having killed more than a million Cambodians during a four-year reign of terror, broke with its two partners in the rebel coalition by refusing to participate in the council. The United States wants the Khmer Rouge excluded from any power-sharing arrangement in Cambodia.

Solomon said Chatichai urged efforts to keep arms from the Khmer Rouge. However, those weapons come through Thailand and Solomon conceded U.S. leverage with China is ''not the best'' at a time of strained relations.

With Thailand having outpaced the rest of the world last year in economic growth, Bush and Chatichai announced the creation of a joint committee on commercial cooperation to promote increased trade and investment.

U.S.-Thai trade last year exceeded $7 billion, growing at more than 30 percent annually, and Chatichai said the joint committee could serve as ''a new framework for economic cooperation and partnership'' by tackling trade issues ''before they become trade disputes.''

On one key irritant to bilateral trade, Solomon said Thai officials promised legislative improvements and greater enforcement to address complaints of inadequate protection of American patents, copyrights and trademarks.

Against a backdrop of calls by the United States for Thailand to adopt tougher laws and crack down harder on opium and heroin pouring out of Southeast Asia, Chatichai promised Bush ''the full support of the Thai government in the war against drug trafficking.''

In a reciprocal gesture, Bush assured Chatichai that the United States will continue to battle the huge American demand that creates such a large market for traffickers in Thailand and other producing and transshipment countries.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Congress used Flag Day to open an election year debate on a constitutional amendment to bar flag desecration with charges that Republicans are politicizing patriotism.

But House and Senate Republicans, joined by a few Democrats for press conference-rallies on both sides of Capitol Hill, proclaimed the matter a debate on cultural values prompted by an overwhelming need to protect the national symbol from burning, which the Supreme Court has decided is constitutionally protected dissent.

The exchange of rhetoric - both political and substantive - was but a preliminary to the battle that will be fought out on the floor of the House and Senate, where supporters must muster a two-thirds vote before the amendment can go to the states. Thirty-eight states must ratify it for the simple 20-word amendment to be added to the Constitution as the 27th amendment.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, who was wounded in World War II, angered Democrats Monday by saying 30-second campaign commercials against amendment opponents could be effective. He defended his remarks Thursday, telling a crowd outside the Capitol that ''we're not here to demagogue for anyone or anything. We believe this is the right way to go.

We tried a statute and it didn't work.''

Assistant House Republican leader Newt Gingrich of Georgia, who was joined by a House Democrat, several Republicans, veterans groups and a member of the Republican National Committee, told reporters that ''for those of you who believe that our friends on the left are pained about free speech, this is a debate about cultural values.''

There are Democrats and Republicans on both sides of the issue, but the partisan rhetoric has risen with the promises of Republicans to turn the matter into a campaign issue. Sen. Robert Kerrey, D-Neb., a Vietnam War veteran who was awarded the Medal of Honor, accused President Bush in an emotional speech of using the American flag as a ''political issue'' and of trying to divide the country.

Kerrey said he was ''offended and angered'' by attempts by Bush and the Republicans to use the issue politically for the November elections.

At the White House, Bush declined to be drawn into commenting on Kerrey's address.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said he was ''chagrined, dismayed and angry that this has to be done before the elections in November. You don't have to be a rocket scientist to figure out what's driving this thing.''

And Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., said the Founding Fathers could not have foreseen a president ''so frightened of the next election'' to try and weaken the Bill of Rights. The United States, he said, will be seen as ''whimpering wimps'' around the world if the amendment passes, showing that ''we are not strong enough, brave enough that we can't stand dissent.''

Rep. Lane Evans, D-Ill., who enlisted in the Marine Corps at the age of 17 during the height of the Vietnam War, said the flag ''represents the freedoms embodied in the Bill of Rights. But chip away at the Bill of Rights and we chip away at those freedoms. I detest those who burn the flag ... (but) we should not protect the flag by burning the Constitution.''

MOSCOW (JUNE 14) UPI - Residents of the three Baltic republics attended church services and held solemn processions Thursday to mark the day in 1941 when the Soviet Union consolidated its hold on the republics by deporting tens of thousands to Siberia.

Most businesses in the republics were closed and the ''day of grief'' delayed consideration of possible compromise proposals for negotiations on regaining the independence Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia lost during World War II.

Beginning the night of June 14, 1941, tens of thousands of Balts were sent to Siberian labor camps, many of them never to return.

The mass deportations were part of Josef Stalin attempt to consolidate Soviet control over the republics annexed a year earlier under an agreement with Nazi Germany.

Lithuanian government spokeswoman Rita Dapkus said 36,000 Lithuanians were forced from the republic in just one night.

''It's a very solemn day,'' she said.

Most residents of the overwhelmingly Catholic republic marked the anniversary by attending funeral masses and participating in religious processions through the streets of Vilnius, Dapkus said.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said similar ceremonies were held in the other two Baltic republics.

''Thousands of teachers, doctors, priests, farmers and other civilians were exiled by the Stalin regime and many were never to return,'' Tass said in a frank account of the event.

The Lithuanian Parliament did not meet Thursday because of the day of mourning, Dapkus said, and a Saturday session will be the legislators' first chance to consider a proposal that they freeze their March 11 declaration of independence in return for an end to the Soviet blockade of the republic and negotiations on secession.

On Wednesday Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene announced in Moscow that Soviet officials had agreed to ease the blockade by supplying more natural gas and other raw materials to Lithuanian enterprises.

The total lifting of the blockade, including resumption of badly needed oil supplies, depends on the Parliament's willingness to freeze the declaration of independence.

Prunskiene met with Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov Wednesday, a day after a new atmosphere of compromise emerged in a meeting between the three Baltic presidents and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The Baltic presidents said after the Tuesday meeting they were bringing new compromise proposals back to their Parliaments. Officials said the compromise would include the republics temporarily freezing their declarations of independence during talks on secession.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Activists from Greenpeace met visiting Thai Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhaven Thursday to express concern over what they say is excessive logging of Burmese forests by Thai workers.

Campbell Plowder, rain forest coordinator for Greenpeace, said Chatichai's responses indicated that either he was unaware of the ''reality or that Thai government is trying to hide its direct role in aggravating deforestation.''

''He seemed to grossly underestimate the intensity of the volume of Burma-Thai logging trade. He was under the ill-founded perception that logging in Burma was under some management regime,'' Plowder said.

The logging is helping to ''fuel a teak war in Burma which will have grave environmental consequences,'' he added. Greenpeace canceled a demonstration outside the Thai Embassy Thursday after Chatichai agreed to meet with a delegation.

Greenpeace charges that Thailand - having exhausted its own tropical forests in the past two decades - banned all logging at home in 1989 and now has turned its attention to neighboring Burma.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (JUNE 14) UPI - The military clamped down on the Romanian capital Thursday with the help of government supporters, guarding the state television station and government offices against renewed protests by anti-communist demonstrators.

The official news agency Rompres said four people died and 60 were hospitalized in fierce battles Wednesday and early Thursday between riot police, government supporters and the anti-government demonstrators in the bloodiest day of violence since the revolution that overthrew Nicolae Ceausescu six months ago.

At noon Thursday, President Ion Iliescu addressed thousands of supporters - most of them miners who had flooded into the capital to help put down the rebellion - from a balcony at his National Salvation Front headquarters in Victory Square.

Iliescu told the cheering crowd that the violence, which began at dawn Wednesday when police raided a 7-week-old sit-in at University Square, was ''inspired by right-wing forces in this country and abroad who acted according to a pre-established script, trying to establish a rightist power in Romania.''

Iliescu said ''many people'' were arrested and that an investigation was under way to determine who was responsible for the unrest.

Rompres reported that Interior Minister Mihai Chitac, responsible for maintaining order, was dismissed ''under a presidential decree.'' It said

Doru Viorel Ursu, 37, a military judge, was appointed to replace him.

Rompres also reported the army was maintaining tight control of the television station, which it said had been partially burned by demonstrators Wednesday evening.

The television station had been seized six months ago by civilians protesting Ceausescu's brutal Stalinist regime, a move seen by many as the turning point in the revolution. The National Salvation Front, which led the revolution, apparently was taking no chances that the tables would be turned on them.

Troops also heavily guarded Front headquarters at Victory Square and other government offices and armed guards were reportedly stationed on many street corners.

The violence began at dawn Wednesday when 1,000 baton-wielding police moved in to disperse the sit-in in the city's central University Square, beating protesters bloody with batons and arresting 300.

The thousands of demonstrators, some of whom had been on hunger strikes, had staged the sit-in to protest against the presence of former high level communist officials within the present National Salvation Front government which won power in elections May 20.

The early morning raid sparked the day of violent clashes between the anti-communist forces and police, who were joined by pro-government civilians after Iliescu appealed for help from the masses in Wednesday evening radio and television broadcast.

Casualties of the violence streamed into city hospitals, many bleeding from head wounds. Cars were set ablaze and police headquarters were gutted by fire.

Tanjug, the official Yugoslavian news agency, reported that demonstrators opened fire on Romanian soldiers with arms they had stolen from the Interior Ministry, saying two guards and four civilians were wounded in the clash.

By Thursday morning the violence had died down considerably, but the situation was still tense. Rompres reported there were several clashes in the capital but said anti-government demonstrators were put down with the help of pro-government supporters, who they said chanted slogans in favor of the front.

Rompres reported the offices of the newspaper Roman Libera were occupied and that workers had asked for government protection Thursday, but it was not clear who had taken over the building.

Military helicopters circled the city, filled with the stench of smoke. Smoldering shells of cars and burned-out buses littered the streets.

The Front, which took power after Ceaucescu was deposed and executed in December, won 325 of 494 parliamentary seats in the May elections.

Iliescu, the front leader and a member of Ceausescu's Communist Party Central Committee until his expulsion in the early 1980s, easily won election as president. A new government is to be named next week to replace the interim government.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The drug and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry went forward Thursday, overshadowed by his announcement that he would not seek re-election and by a vigil outside the court for the man who has led the city for 12 years.

Pressure mounted for U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens to reach a plea agreement with Barry before testimony in the case begins next week.

Barry, in a televised address to city residents Wednesday night, said he would not be a candidate for a fourth term.

Speaking five months after his cocaine arrest in an FBI-police sting operation, Barry told his constituents it is ''a time for healing - for me personally and for you politically.''

''Whatever I can do to help you heal, I'm willing to do it,'' Barry said. I'm willing to go to any length. ... Marion Barry will not be a candidate for re-election for my fourth term.''

Attorneys Thursday asked prospective jurors if the announcement altered their assessment of his guilt or innocence. Most said no.

About 40 Barry supporters, wearing black wristbands and calling themselves the Coalition for Equal Justice Under the Law, held a noon vigil outside U.S. District Court, carrying signs reading: ''Entrapment is illegal. Who should be on trial?'' ''Fight the Power,'' and ''Conspiracy. Conspiracy. Conspiracy.''

Many remained silent. Others said they were protesting Barry's prosecution.

''Damn right I'm angry,'' said Johnnie Johnson, 75. ''They gave him illegal drugs to entrap him.''

About 40 others, including Barry's mother, later joined the vigil.

Barry was allegedly videotaped smoking crack cocaine in the Jan. 18 undercover operation that led to his arrest. He has since been indicted on 14 drug and perjury counts, and his trial is finishing its second week of jury selection.

Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson has said a jury will be seated Monday, and opening arguments held Tuesday.

Barry's move had been urged by some supporters who told him a withdrawal from the race would facilitate a plea agreement to settle the charges against him. Others have said an announcement could gather sympathy from the jury.

Jesse Jackson, after a meeting with about 15 ministers Thursday, accused the government of spending $10 million in pursuit of Barry.

''We certainly hope, in light of this new position, there will be a move towards the bargaining table,'' Jackson said.

Jackson, who called Barry's speech ''correct, courageous and appropriate '' added he was not ''Jay Stephens bashing.''

Stephens, the U.S. attorney who has called Barry's political status ''irrelevant'' to the charges or a possible plea bargain, had no comment.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The House voted Thursday to close loopholes in federal water law allowing large farm operations in the West, some foreign-owned, to receive irrigation subsidies intended for smaller American growers.

The measure, sponsored chiefly by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., was adopted 316-97 as an amendment to a bill authorizing an expansion of the Buffalo Bill Dam in Wyoming and six other Western water projects.

The House was expected to complete action the bill later in the day.

A number of Western lawmakers, some representing largely agricultural districts, vigorously opposed Miller's measure, arguing it could have the unintended effect of disrupting thousands of family farm operations.

But Miller said his amendment was aimed at a ''handful'' of wealthy corporate growers who have circumvented restrictions on the size of farms eligible to receive federally subsidized water.

A major overhaul of federal water law in 1982 mandated that ''landholdings'' greater than 960 acres were ineligible for the subsidy, requiring them to pay full cost for water delivered by federal irrigation projects.

However, regulations to carry out that law have allowed numerous parcels of land that meet the acreage limit individually to be operated collectively as one giant farm and still receive subsidized water.

The General Accounting office reported last year that a number of vast farms have reorganized themselves on paper into smaller units to exploit the loophole.

Miller's amendment would outlaw such practices by making the acreage limit applicable to ''farms and farming operations.''

The House also accepted an addition to Miller's amendment offered by Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore., to plug a loophole that has allowed foreign-owned farms to qualify for federal water subsidies by incorporating in the United States.

The House debate underscored ongoing controversy over subsidies received by farmers throughout the West who depend on water that is diverted from rivers and supplied to them by a complex network of dams, reservoirs and canals.

About 10 million acres of farmland in the West are served by federally supplied water, much of it in naturally arid regions, such as California's Central Valley.

Critics, however, argue ready supplies of cheap water discourage the conservation of a precious resource that is being squandered by giant farming operations at the expense of fish, wildlife and wetlands.

DECATUR, GA (JUNE 14) UPI - Mathis Dairy unveiled the nation's first cholesterol-free milk Thursday, launching a new endeavor to get more milk products back into the refrigerators of cholesterol-conscious consumers.

"For most people, it's permission to drink milk again - even if they're on restrictive diets - with all the flavor," said Jim O'Sullivan, who is in charge of packaging for Mathis.

The new product, called Mathis/Sun-up, is a version of two percent milk in which the cholesterol-laden animal fat has been removed and replaced with a vegetable fat. It is classified as a "milk product," since it is not true milk.

A cup of skim milk contains only two milligrams more cholesterol than the government requires for a cholesterol-free label. But people who dislike the watery taste of skim milk should find Mathis-Sun-up more to their liking, said Joe Di Bruno, the developer of the product.

"The product Sun/Up differs in that it has the two percent fat back in it, which is vegetable fat in place of milk fat, and that gives it more of that creamy taste or mouth feel," Di Bruno said. Company President Jack Mathis said the product was tested on 8,000 people, with the "overwhelming majority" saying they liked it.

Di Bruno began working on the cholesterol-free product in 1969 but it was not until 1987 that he devoted his full attention to the process. The technology to make the milk has been around for years. The problem was finding the right combination of vegetable fat.

He finally settled on a blend of soya oils and B-Blend 88, a dry formula that contains added proteins, emulsifiers and vitamins to replace the animal fat.

"This product contains the same protein, the same carbohydrates and the same calories," he said. "It maintains all the nutrients and vitamins of two percent milk and even adds some."

Spokesmen predicted companies nationwide would introduce their own versions of cholesterol-free milk - and said a variety of cholesterol-free dairy products, including ice cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese, might be in grocery stores soon.

Nutritionists said almost anyone, including children and people on a cholesterol-free diet, can drink the product. Only people who are allergic to lactose should avoid it, they said.

"For people who steer away from milk products because of the cholesterol content or because in some instances they don't like the taste of skim milk, this is the answer," said Helen Howington, a nutritionist with the Georgia Extension Service. "It's one of the greatest breakthroughs we can see in the dairy industry today."

Mathis said product and subsequent derivatives could be a boon to the dairy industry, which has seen an eight percent decline in total milk sales over the last two decades as the nation became more health- and weight-conscious.

The company will begin home deliveries and grocery store sales of the cholesterol-free milk Monday in the Atlanta area. The milk, which is classified as a premium product, will cost about 30 cents more a half gallon than regular two percent milk.

Industry officials acknowledged the Mathis product as the nation's first cholesterol-free milk, although other products have been tested and withdrawn. Flavo-Rich markets a low-cholesterol milk product, and cholesterol-free yogurts already are on the market.

(JUNE 14) UPI - Four people die in violence in Romania... the Supreme Court rules on the constitutionality of sobriety checkpoints... and crews work to clean up oil spilled from a burning tanker in the Gulf... Those and other top stories, next, from U-P-I.

Romanian President Ion Iliescu says an investigation is under way to determine who is to blame for the unrest that left four people dead.

But Iliescu has his own ideas about who is to blame. He told thousands of supporters in Bucharest today that ''right-wing'' forces were behind the violence.

Iliescu says ''many people'' are under arrest following the unrest that began at dawn yesterday with riot police storming a sit-in at University Square.

The sit-in began seven weeks ago as a protest against the alleged presence of former high-level communist officials in the new interim government.

The official news agency Rompres says four people died and 60 others were hospitalized in the fierce street battles involving soldiers, anti-communist protesters and government supporters.

The violence eased today, with a military clampdown in the capital. Soldiers as well as government supporters are guarding the state television station and government offices against the possibilty of renewed protest.

ALBANY, NY (JUNE 14) UPI - New York's highest court Thursday upheld a lower court order forcing a criminal defendant to be tested for AIDS after he allegedly bit three law enforcement officers.

The decision was criticized by civil rights advocates who said the test not only violates the defendant's rights, but also provide no guarantee the officers will or will not get AIDS.

''It's a ruling without basis in law, medicine or common sense,'' said Tom Stoddard, head of the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, a homosexual rights group. ''The possibility of transmission through a bite is virtually nil,'' he said.

''We oppose mandatory AIDS testing (of persons accused of crimes).... It's the victim who will actually have to have the test. That's the only accurate way to be sure,'' added Alice Green, legislative director of the New York Civil Liberties Union.

''It might have been more appropriate to spend the money on counseling of the victims,'' said Stoddard. ''Even if they do get it (AIDS) - what's the response to it? There is no drug (to cure the fatal illness),'' he added.

The Court of Appeals unanimously upheld the forced testing in a one-paragraph decision that indicates the test was challenged on improper grounds. The challenge involved a law that allows forced blood testing only in drunk or drugged driving cases.

The defendant, whose name was not revealed in court papers, was being arraigned for attempted murder in January 1988 when he allegedly bit two Utica police officers and an Oneida County sheriff.

Acting Supreme Court Judge Nathaniel Merrell then ordered the man tested for the AIDS virus.

Merrell ordered a second AIDS test 17 months later, at which time the man allegedly was shackled to a wheelchair and taken to a hospital, where blood was drawn against his will.

Lawyers in the case refused to speak to reporters because of gag orders in the case.

However, sources said the man is scheduled to go on trial July 2 in Oneida County on the attempted murder charges.

It is not known if he was considered likely to have AIDS.

''No judge should order a medical test against anyone's will unless there is a reasonable likelihood of transmission'' of an illness, Stoddard said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - The dollar moved up smartly against all European currencies but lost ground against the Japanese yen in active New York trading Thursday as economic news suggested interest rates could hold steady.

The main stimulus for trading was a Labor Department report saying wholesale prices increased 0.3 percent in May. That was in line with what economists had been saying, but on the high end of market expectations.

The implication was that inflation remained a factor to be contended with and that lower interest rates may not be imminent - which in turn convinced global fund managers the dollar remained a sound investment. "People were buying dollars against everything, aggressively," reported John Lyman, senior customer dealer for the Bank of Tokyo.

Dollar bullishness was fanned by comments from Manuel Johnson, outgoing vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, indicating he was satisfied with the dollar's current level and it needn't drop further. Remarks by Johnson's boss, Fed chief Alan Greenspan, hinting at a decline in interest rates, slowed but didn't halt the dollar rally.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.6945 West German marks, up from 1.6865 late Wednesday, and at 154.15 Japanese yen, down from 154.75 yen the day before.

Traders were pleased to see "good volatility" at last in a calm market, but were frustrated at the lack of major price swings. "All the moves have been in the Far East," he said. "New York is the garbage market."

Participants were hoping for more activity Friday when the May consumer price index and April trade figures were to be released. But barring any surprises, Lyman said, "We need some new factors."

Other dollar rates: 1.4355 Swiss francs, up from 1.4240; 5.6975 French francs, up from 5.6710; and 1,243.20 Italian lire, up from 1,238. The British pound ended at $1.7083, down from $1.7110.

In Europe, the dollar closed lower in quiet trading as the increase in U.S. wholesale prices met expectations, analysts said.

"The dollar was down a bit after the U.S. prices, which came out as expected," said George Magnus, a currency economist at Warburg Securities in London. "Still there's reasonably good demand behind the dollar."

Trading was quiet in part because West Germany's market closed for a one-day bank holiday, analysts and dealers said.

The dollar dipped lower in Zurich at 1.4285 Swiss francs against 1.4325 at Wednesday's close.

In London, continued speculation that Britain will fully join the European Monetary System pushed the pound up in morning trading. But the British unit settled back later on dealer caution, closing unchanged at $1.7075.

The U.S. unit retreated in Paris, Brussels and Milan, ending at 5.6685 francs against 5.6985, 34.7550 Belgian francs compared with 34.8175, and 1,236.65 lire aginst 1,243.75.

In Tokyo trading, the dollar plunged against the yen after four consecutive rising sessions on sentiment the U.S. economy is slowing. The dollar closed at 153.53 yen, down 1.02 yen from 154.55 yen Wednesday.

Dealers said the Bank of Japan sold dollars to push up the yen. Traders were cautious amid the week's heavy batch of U.S. data.

Gold lost $5 in Zurich, sliding to $345.50 an ounce against $356. In London it fell to $345.75 an ounce from $351. Dealers said gold dropped through the crucial $350-an-ounce support level on Mideast selling.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $346.25 an ounce, off from $351.50 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $346.80 an ounce, down from $352.

Silver dropped in Zurich to $4.90 an ounce from $4.95. In London the metal finished at $4.83 an ounce, compared with $4.96. Republic closed cash silver at $4.785 an ounce, off from $4.94. Comex silver settled at $4.77 an ounce, down from $4.915.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - A man defending his woman companion Thursday shot and critically wounded one of a gang of youths that followed the couple into the subway station at the Grand Central subway station and snatched the woman's gold chains, police said.

The 15-year-old, who was shot in the chest about 2:35 p.m. in one of the city's busiest subway stations, was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where he was was listed in critical condition, transit police spokesman Al O'Leary said.

A gang of about five or six teenagers followed the couple into Grand Central Terminal, then robbed the woman, O'Leary said.

''The group takes the girl's jewelry, rips off her chains,'' O'Leary said. ''Her companion pulls out a gun from a bag and shoots one of the group in the neck.''

The group apparently dispersed and the gunman fled, O'Leary said.

Police were searching for the gunman, O'Leary said. He said it was unclear whether the woman fled with the man.

(JUNE 14) UPI - The White House says it is NOT blaming any person or country for the breakdown in Middle East peace negotiations.

But spokesman Marlin Fitzwater is backing up Secretary of State Baker's statements yesterday in which Baker expressed frustration with Israel.

Fitzwater says Baker was simply saying that the Bush administration has worked ''long and hard'' to get a dialogue going in the region. But Fitzwater says in order for peace talks to get going, those involved have to want it. In his words- ''we caN'T want it for them.''

Baker directed his comments to Israel while speaking to the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He said when Israel ''gets serious about peace, call.''

While Israel has NOT called... the White House says about eight-thousand Americans did call to express their views. Sources say the calls are running about 35-to-1 against the Israeli position.

In Jerusaleum, a spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir says Israel is NOT to blame for the deadlocked negotiations. The spokesman says Baker is probably frustrated because of pressure on Washington to halt its dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Michigan's attorney general says he is pleased with a U-S Supreme Court ruling today that allows the state to continue its sobriety checkpoints.

The attorney general says it's unfortunate that public education is NOT enough. In his words- ''sometimes strong enforcement measures are the only effective answer.''

The high court today voted 6-3 in upholding the checkpoints, concluding the stops do NOT violate the Constitution's ban against unreasonable search and seizure.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist noted the ''magnitude of the drunken driving problem'' in issuing the ruling.

Three justices dissented, saying they are NOT disputing the immense problems caused by drunken driving, but disagree that the intrusion is constitutional.

One dissenter, Justice John Paul Stevens, says the court is focusing on- quote- ''punishing countless intoxicated motorists- when it should keep its eyes on the road plainly marked by the Constitution.''

MIAMI (JUNE 14) UPI - Troubled Eastern Airlines is counting on a new face to help it win back much-needed business in a nationwide television campaign that will debut Sunday in 33 markets, the airline announced Thursday.

The face belongs to Martin Shugrue, the plain-speaking trustee appointed to run Eastern in April by the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York.

The idea for the campaign, which is reminiscent of Lee Iacocca's spots for Chrysler Corp., came from employees themselves, Shugrue told reporters during a news conference.

In one ad, Shugrue tells employees: ''We are running a very good airline here today. The problem is a lot of potential customers out there don't know it.

''Yes,'' he adds. ''We have a large, deep hole to climb out of.''

Shugrue said Eastern's planes flew with only 54 percent of their seats filled during the month of May - down significantly from load factors of 63.9 percent in April and 66.8 percent in March.

''May is always a lousy month for us, and it is particularly so this year '' said Eastern spokeswoman Karen Ceremsak.

Eastern hopes the television campaign will reverse that trend.

''It is a little different than traditional airline advertising, to say the least,'' Shugrue said. ''I think it will work.''

Shugrue said he hopes the ads convey the message that Eastern is a company where employees can communicate, and where the workforce is dedicated to serving customers.

Asked if the ads could backfire, because they address some of Eastern's problems and its uncertain future, Shugrue said: ''I don't think that honesty is risky. I don't think that candor is risky. It can be controversial.''

One topic the ads don't discuss is the ongoing strike by the International Association of Machinists.

''No need to do that. That's covered adequately elsewhere,'' Shugrue said.

Eastern filed for bankruptcy in March 1989 after unions representing its pilots, flight attendants and ground workers began a crippling strike.

Unions representing the pilots and flight attendants pulled down their picket lines in November, but the IAM continues on strike.

Shugrue said he has not given up hope of reaching an accord with the pilots union, despite reports this week that union members were disappointed with Shugrue's actions and would consider a resumption of their strike.

Union spokesman E.J. Breen said Air Line Pilots Association members are frustrated by the company's position on a recent recall of 90 pilots and the eventual integration of the pilot workforce.

Breen said Eastern chose to recall 53 pilots who had offered to cross picket lines before the strike was called off and were placed on a preferential hiring list by the company.

The company also has insisted that working pilots with less experience be given seniority over returning pilots who in some cases have flown Eastern planes for decades.

(JUNE 14) UPI - The cleanup continues today around the burning tanker that's anchored off Galveston, Texas, in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Coast Guard says crews have recovered more than 76-thousand gallons of the estimated three-Million gallons of light crude oil that have spilled.

Officials say the majority of the oil has either evaporated or burned off.

It's NOT certain exactly how much oil has been dumped in the ocean from the tanker that is still burning five days after an explosion ripped the vessel.

Elsewhere, a Norweigan board of inquiry is into a second day of investigating the cause of the accident that came in international waters.

There is new hope for peace in Liberia.

Liberian government and rebel negotiators entered their third day of peace talks in neighboring Sierra Leone today in an effort to end the six-month civil war.

Sources close to negotiations say the Liberian government has put forth a new plan for a mutual troop withdrawal as part of a cease-fire initiative.

Under the proposal, an international peace-keeping force would be sent to Liberia and negotiations would begin on both a cease-fire and an ultimate solution to the conflict.

The plan is the first sign of concrete bargaining during the Freetown sessions.

The rebels say they will study the idea of a mutual troop withdrawal.

But analysts say it is far from certain the rebels... who are just 35 miles from the capital of Monrovia... will accept the deal.

Since the start of talks Tuesday, the guerrillas have insisted that Liberian President Samuel Doe and his government resign as a condition to a cease-fire.

(JUNE 14) UPI - Today is the 213th birthday of the American flag, and this year Americans are fighting about Old Glory as well as celebrating it.

Congress used Flag Day to open an election year debate on a constitutional amendment to bar flag desecration, with some Democrats charging that Republicans are politicizing patriotism.

But House and Senate Republicans, joined by a few Democrats, say there is an overwhelming need for an amendment to protect the nation's symbol.

The high-flying rhetoric is but a hint of the battle that will be fought out on both floors of Congress, where supporters must get a two-thirds vote before the amendment can go to the states.

38 states must ratify the 20-word amendment before it can be added to the Constitution.

In a more somber salute, President Bush... a staunch supporter of the proposed amendment... led a flag-raising ceremony this morning at Washington's Vietnam memorial.

The president... flanked by U-S Marines...replaced the flag flying at the memorial with one of his own.

(JUNE 14) UPI - The Soviet parliament gave citizens a break today by overwhelmingly rejecting a plan to allow high price increases as part of a series of economic reforms.

Lawmakers in Moscow also ordered the government to come up with a new plan by this fall.

Before that new proposal is re-submitted, Soviet government leaders must first consult with local leaders to get their ideas for reforms.

Today's vote comes just one day after the parliament approved a resolution supporting the concept of changing the country's economic system to a free market economy.

That resolution gave Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev the ability to set in motion laws involving property, lease agreements, local self-government... AND local operation of the economy.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (JUNE 14) UPI - A bomb exploded Thursday in a car at a police checkpoint in Medellin, killing at least four people including the occupants of the vehicle in the second apparent suicide bombing in less than a month. Also Thursday, officials said police killed one of the top hitmen of the Medellin Cartel of cocaine traffickers.

Jose Arias Tascon, 28, leader of a band of gunmen, was killed in a gunbattle with police Wednesday night, officials said. He had been one of the top 12 members of the Medellin Cartel being sought by the National Police.

"I believe this is one of the most severe strikes against the Medellin Cartel," said Gen. Octavio Vargas, operations director of the National Police. Arias's picture appeared in a flyer distributed by police last Friday as one of seven heads of hit squads who work for the Medellin Cartel.

At least 43 people were wounded in the explosion in the exclusive El Poblado district of Medellin, 160 miles northwest of Bogota, which police estimated contained 166 pounds of dynamite, a police statement said. Radio reports put the number of wounded at nearly 70. The statement said a member of the National Police Elite Force, a civilian and at least two people inside the car were killed in the 10 a.m. blast.

Medellin Fire Capt. Carlos Correa said 33 cars were damaged in the explosion.At least 15 buildings also were damaged. The car bomb appeared nearly identical to the May 24 suicide explosion of a car bomb in Medellin that killed nine people. In that incident in the same area of the city, a man inside a vehicle also died when he ignited the bomb at a police checkpoint.

The bomb exploded in front of a cafeteria-bread store, hurling a car against the building, the radio news network RCN said. It left a crater of about 1 1/2 feet deep by nine feet wide.

There have been 15 car bombs explode in Colombia since April 11 blamed on the Medellin Cartel. At least 68 people have been killed in the explosions and more than 200 wounded.

Police also said five policemen were killed between Wednesday night and Thursday morning in Medellin, 160 miles northwest of Bogota. The murders in separate shootings bring to some 130 the number officers killed in or near Medellin this year. The cartel has offered gunmen a reward equal to $2,000 for the killings of officers as part of its war on the nation.

(JUNE 14) UPI - The makers of Mazola brand corn oil signed an agreement with ten states and the Federal Trade Commission Thursday to halt claims about the product's ability to lower cholesterol levels that officials said were misleading.

CPC International Inc., of Englewood Cliffs, N.J., was charged in a suit filed by state and federal officials with airing television advertisements that falsely suggested the corn oil could reduce cholesterol levels without other diet modifications.

Under an "assurance of discontinuance" agreement, CPC is prohibited from suggesting such benefits in future ads. The company also agreed to pay each state named in the complaint $10,000 to cover the cost of the investigation.

"We have to insist on truth in every aspect and in every detail in advertising by producers," said Jim Mattox, the Texas attorney general. "As long as the public knows that there is a line over which advertisers will not be allowed to cross, the public can feel some sense of confidence when it selects products for purchase."

"Today's consumers want to eat right and they are often swayed by the claims made by food producers," said Massachusetts Attorney General James Shannon. "Any food touted as a magic cure without stressing the need for an all-around healthy diet does consumers more harm than good." The other states due for reimbursements were California, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, New York, and Wisconsin.

The charges stemmed from advertisements that featured Mazola "spokespersons" touting the oil and its purported benefits. Officials said the spots were discontinued months ago for other reasons. The copy in one ad said: "Mazola does what? They said it could turn back my cholesterol. I didn't believe it until my level dropped 17 percent."

Under the agreement, the company did not admit to breaking any law, and company officials continue to maintain the language did not mislead consumers. "CPC continues to believe ... that the commission's and the states' interpretation of the advertising does not reflect consumer understanding of the advertising," the company said in a statement.

"CPC cooperated fully with the FTC and the states and supplied them with numerous studies supporting its long-standing position that a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet which includes Mazola corn oil can help lower serum cholesterol.

"CPC will continue to communicate this important message in future adverstising messages to consumers, while - consistent with the terms of the consent agreement - avoiding use of statements which might be misinterpreted to mean that the use of corn oil would, by itself, lower serum cholesterol," the statement said.

The company is also prohibited from using "fictitious" consumers to endorse the oil. CPC spokesman Bill Parker said although the characters portrayed in the ads were intended to represent a larger consumer cross-section, their use would be discontinued as well.

A consumer health advocate hailed the agreement, saying such ads were adding confusion to an already complicated issue. "You really start to think that if you drink the oil, you're drinking medicine to protect yourself," said Elizabeth Whelan, president of the New York-based American Council on Science and Health.

"The reality is, these polyunsaturated oils are certainly part of a healthy diet, but they're not a shortcut to a healthy cardiovascular condition," Whelan said. "I don't think there would be any controversy whichever side you're on with these ads. There's no doubt they're misleading."

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Cable television rates for basic service rose an average of 10 percent last year and as much as 43 percent since the cable industry was deregulated in 1986, the General Accounting Office reported Thursday.

Cable rates have been the focus of a heated debate on Capitol Hill. Last week, the Senate Commerce Committee approved a bill to re-regulate the cable industry and give the Federal Communications Commission authority to regulate rates.

A similar measure is expected to be considered by the House Committee on Energy and Commerce in two weeks.

''The continued increases in cable rates are likely to fuel further debate over regulating the cable industry,'' the report said.

The report, requested by Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., made no policy recommendations.

The average monthly bill last year for the lowest-priced basic cable service increased 10 percent to $15.95 from $14.50. These rates have jumped 43 percent since November 1986, the study showed.

Rates decreased slightly for premium cable programming, such as Showtime and HBO, during the past three years. Not surprisingly, the number of subscribers for premium services increased by 16 percent during the period.

An earlier GAO study, conducted in August 1989, showed a 29 percent increase for the lowest-priced basic service during a 23-month period ending in October 1988.

The GAO report showed that revenue to cable operators per subscriber increased an average of 5 percent last year and 21 percent since deregulation four years ago. Cable subscriptions have increased 22 percent in the past three years, while the number of homes with access to cable grew to 56 percent.

Despite rate increases, the number of cable subscriptions grew for two reasons - lack of alternative services and improved cable programming, the GAO said.

John Wolf, a spokesman for the National Cable Television Association said the new GAO report shows that the rate of increase in cable rates has leveled. ''We look at this as good news,'' he said.

Gene Kimmelman, legislative director for the Consumer Federation of America, said the report shows cable rates are continuing to rise unabated and points to the need for the re-regulation of the cable industry.

''The GAO report confirms that basic cable rates have gone up three times the rate of inflation on average since deregulation,'' Kimmelman said. ''This compares with basic cabel rates never going up nearly as much as inflation during the era of regulation.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Sending a message to South Africa and the business world, Mayor David Dinkins Thursday unveiled tough new legislation to close major loopholes in the city's anti-apartheid sanctions law.

The bill, announced less than a week before Nelson Mandela's arrival, would restrict city deposits with banks linked to South Africa and forbid most contracts with firms that have subsidiaries, franchises or investments there.

The city has an average of $200 million in deposits daily in 1,500 accounts in 24 banks.

''Those whose activities offer aid and comfort to apartheid will receive no aid and no comfort from us,'' Dinkins said. ''If you do business with South Africa, you have no business with the City of New York.''

The mayor, joined by anti-aparthied activists and officials from Mandela's African National Congress, said he hoped residents would follow his lead and sever their personal ties with banks identified by the city as aiding the white minority regime.

The new measure expands sanctions laws passed in 1985 and 1986.

Brooklyn City Councilman Abraham Gerges, who recently took an all-expenses paid trip to South Africa as the guest of the all-white Johannesburg City Council, said he wholeheartedly supports the goals of the legislation, but was still non-committal about whether he thought the bill should be passed.

Upon his return from South Africa, Gerges called for the immediate introduction, but not necessarily passage of the bill.

After the mayor's news conference at City Hall, Gerges said he wanted to hear from Mandela himself whether the measure was needed or if approval should be delayed to hold over the South African government as an incentive for change.

Mandela, however, has said repeatedly since his release from more than 27 years in prison in February that new pressure in the form of heightened sanctions was necessary.

''Keep the pressure on,'' said Tebogo Mafole, the ANC's representative to the United Nations.

Exisiting city sanctions law bars the city from contracting with companies that directly operate in South Africa or do business with their police, justice department, prison system or armed forces.

Many firms have gotten around the law, however, through use of subsidiaries and franchise and investment agreements.

The new law would bar the city from doing business with parent companies that have any such subsidiaries or franchisees, contractors or affiliates operating in South Africa.

It also would give the city new power over deposits it makes with banks that have relationships with South Africa.

The legislation also would forbid the city to contract with firms that do business with any South African government agency or with any agency established by the ''homelands,'' which were created by the South African government to contain the black majority.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Bucking the recent trend towards downgrades of major banks' credit ratings, BankAmerica Corp. saw its senior debt upgraded Thursday by Fitch Investors Service to A-plus from A-minus.

Assessing BankAmerica commercial paper, subordinated debt and certificates of deposit for the first time, Fitch gave those instruments ratings of F-1 A and A-plus/F-1, respectively, the agency said.

Fitch said the debt upgrade reflected an improved balance sheet stemming from ''prudent financial management'' and a ''strong operating performance with an outlook for continued good, consistent results.''

It added, ''Having refocused the business largely towards West Coast regional banking, BankAmerica has a more profitable and less risky asset mix.''

Raymond Peters, executive vice president of San Francisco-based BankAmerica, said the company was ''gratified by this further recognition of ... improving credit quality, increasing capital leveld the success that our business strategy is achieving.''

BankAmerica's upgrade comes as other money center banks, including Citicorp, the nation's largest, Chemical Banking Corp. and Chase Manhattan Corp., have seen their debt or that of their subsidiaries downgraded.

In each case, the main reason for assignment of a higher measure of risk was deteriorating quality of real estate loan portfolios.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Stocks closed broadly lower in light trading Thursday as worries about corporate earnings tied to gloomy forecasts for two technology companies pressured prices.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 3.72 Wednesday, fell 1.48 to close at 2928.22 as the blue chips outperformed the broad market.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 1.02 to 197.98 and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 2.00 to close at 362.90. The price of an average share fell 18 cents.

Declines led advances 909-550 among the 1,966 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 135,770,000 shares, compared with 158,910,000 shares traded Wednesday.

Nervousness about what second-quarter corporate earnings may show, especially after recent weak economic data such as Wednesday's retail sales report, weighed on prices from the start, analysts said.

Those fears grew when analysts for PaineWebber and Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette reportedly cut their earnings estimates for United Telecommunications. PaineWebber's move was said to be tied to lower-than-expected revenues at its US Sprint unit.

Then, before midday, Digital Equipment called earnings forecasts for its fourth quarter ending June 30 "too optimistic," citing sluggish markets in the United States and Great Britain.

Trading in Digital was halted on the Big Board before the announcement and resumed with the stock dropping sharply. In early afternoon trading it was down 1 3/4 to 86 3/8. United Telecom opened sharply lower after a delay and never recovered.

Program selling, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, aggravated the market's decline, taking the Dow industrials down more than 20 points. But the blue chips then bounced off their lows and ended near Wednesday's closing levels, faring much better than the broad market.

"The earnings worries were the principal thing that shot us down early in the morning," said Dale Tills, manager of institutional equity trading at Charles Schwab & Co. in San Francisco.

"But then bonds rallied and performed rather well considering PPI (the producer price index) wasn't as good as people had anticipated, and the market stabilized," he said.

Treasury bonds closed up 3/8 point despite news early Thursday that wholesale prices nationwide edged up 0.3 percent in May. The increase was generally in line with forecasts by private economists and was not seen as especially bullish. Tills said the strength in bonds pulled the Dow up off its lows.

Volume was light as many investors kept to the sidelines before the economic reports due out Friday and the "triple-witching hour" expirations of stock-index futures, options and options on individual stocks.

On Friday the government is scheduled to report on the May consumer price index, as well as the April trade deficit, May industrial production and capacity utilization. Consumer prices are expected to have risen 0.3 percent in May.

On the trading floor, United Telecommunications was the most active issue, sinking 3 1/4 to 40 7/8.

Empresa Nacional followed, unchanged at 22 1/2. Wendy's International was third, up 3/8 to 7 1/4. Analysts cited signs of a turnaround in its business and recurring takeover speculation. IBM was also active, off 1/2 to 120 7/8.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T fell 3/4 to 42 3/8, General Electric lost 5/8 to 69 5/8, McDonald's fell 5/8 to 35 5/8, Woolworth added 3/8 to 34 1/8, and Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing closed at 87 1/8, up 1 3/8.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 161,103,220 shares, compared with 191,909,560 shares traded Wednesday.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index fell 0.74 to close at 364.30. The price of an average share lost three cents. Declines led advances 329-224 among the 825 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 12,722,350 shares, versus 15,604,750 traded Wednesday. Home Shopping Network led the Amex issues, unchanged at 8 7/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 1.76 to close at 467.10.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Bickering prevailed over tough decisionmaking Thursday at a committee sorting out differences between the House and Senate child care bills, with President Bush's veto threat omnipresent in the discussions. The House's version would cost about $27 billion over five years, while the Senate version would cost about $10 billlon over four years.

The political squabbling at the conference committee - even among members of the same party - demonstrated just how high emotions are over the bill that Democrats have placed high on their domestic legislation agenda but Bush has threatened to veto.

Agreement could not even be reached on what the proposed law should be called. The Senate wants Act for Better Child Care, or ABC, while House conferees proposed Child Care Block Grant.

Rep. William Goodling, R-Pa., set the parameters for the discussion by stating where the White House stands. "In the veto box is anything that smells of ABC, any change in the religious school language and EITC (earned income tax credit)," said Goodling, who has dubbed ABC an "awful bad concept." He said the White House fears the Senate's ABC version could mean federal mandates to states.

Both House and Senate bills would permit parents to use federal child care funds at church-run day care centers and both bills provide for earned income tax credits for child care.

Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., and most Republican conferees were upset their staffs were not privy to behind-the-scenes negotiating before Thursday's meeting that led to some proposed resolutions of certain issues. "I don't like fait accomplis presented to me," Downey said.

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the conference, responded, "These are faits, not accomplis."

Rep. Thomas Tauke, R-Iowa, blew a fuse over the proposed resolutions. "We're damn mad about how you're handling this. You come in here and your staff presents us with things we've never seen before," Tauke said to Hawkins. "I don't like the way we're being jacked around."

Hawkins said there was no need to get "hot and bothered over procedure" and that everyone should be familiar with the issues.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Assets of the nation's 504 money market mutual funds increased $988.6 million to $382.14 billion for the week ended Wednesday, the Washington-based Investment Company Institute reported Thursday.

The institute said broker-dealer fund assets increased $432.5 million to $159.23 billion, assets of general purpose funds increased $1.01 billion to $131.32 billion and institutional fund assets decreased $455.0 million to $91.59 billion.

"Last week's swings in stock prices had no discernible effect on money market fund assets," said Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist at the institute. "And, with interest rates holding steady, asset growth came mostly from internal buildup rather than from new inflows."

The Investment Company Institute, a national association of the American investment company industry, reports the assets of money market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week.

The Donoghue Organization, of Holliston, Mass., said average seven-day simple yields dropped to 7.65 percent from 7.67 percent, and 30-day simple yields fell to 7.68 percent from 7.69. The average maturity of fund portfolios was 43 days, down from 44 days.

The Bank Rate Monitor, of North Palm Beach, Fla., gave average rates as follows: money market deposit accounts, 6.02 percent, down from 6.03; Super-Now accounts, 5.00 percent, up from 4.98; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.71 percent, down from 7.73; one-year CDs, 7.86 percent, down from 7.88; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.86 percent, down from 7.89; and five-year CDs 7.92 percent, down from 7.95.

The average rate for a one-year, adjustable-rate mortgage was 8.52, up from 8.51 percent.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage fell in the latest week to 9.77 percent from 9.79, while the average rate for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage was 9.94 percent, down from 9.95.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was 12.26 percent, down from 12.27 percent.

DALLAS (JUNE 15) UPI - Southland Corp. Thursday revised its plan to sell 75 percent of the company to its Japanese partners, giving existing bond and preferred stockholders an 18.5 percent stake in the restructured concern instead of 10 percent as previously proposed.

The additional 8.5 percent stake would come from existing equity holders whose holdings in the new Southland would correspondingly go down to 6.5 percent from 15 percent. That reduction will mostly affect the Thompson family, which currently holds a substantial portion of the equity in Southland, the parent of the 7-Eleven chain with 7,000 stores.

In revising the plan, Southland said it will not pay some $69 million of interest due Friday on two of its high-yield junk bonds. Southland also will skip the pay-in-kind stock dividend due on another bond at 14.5 percent.

Southland and its Japanese partners also extended until Aug. 15 the stock purchase agreement. In the original proposal, the parties had until Thursday to terminate the agreement.

In the original plan, which ran into difficulties with bondholders after it was announced in March, Southland proposed an exchange of its outstanding preferred stock and about $1.8 billion of outstanding debt. Based on the exchange, Southland would sell 75 percent of its common stock for $400 million to its Japanese partners, Ito-Yokado Co. Ltd. and Seven-Eleven Japan. Co. Ltd.

Under the exchange offer, the holders would have gotten about 10 percent of the common shares of the new company and the remaining 15 percent would have gone mostly to the Thompson family. The original plan also called for the holders to give up their interest-bearing public debt for zero coupon bonds.

The Thompson family incurred $4.9 billion in debts when it took Southland private in 1987.

Southland's Chief Financial Officer Clark Matthews said the revised offer represents an increase in the current value of about $200 million over the original offer.

The new plan would give the bondholders some $500 million of debt securities bearing cash interest of 12 percent to 14 percent and maturing in six to seven years.

The preferred holders would receive shares of a new series of preferred stock with terms to be established or common stock of substantially the same value.

''In addition, bondholders and preferred shareholders would receive a total of approximately 18.5 percent of the company's common stock,'' the announcement said. ''The equity position of the existing shareholders would be reduced to 6.5 percent, assuming 100 percent acceptance of the exchanges.''

On the question of not making the interest payments, Southland said, ''While the company is continuing to meet its other current obligations, it reached this decision in order to provide the company with additional flexibility and liquidity.''

In New York, John Gordon of Deltec Securities Corp. who heads the bondholders committee, said the new plan ''is a very meaningful improvement over the original plan which I considered totally unacceptable.''

He said the two sides are yet to settle some other issues involving the value of the new Southland but sounded confident of their resolution.

Gordon said he was pleased the company had agreed to replace the zero coupon bonds in the original proposal with interest-bearing securities.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - The Bush administration, using the Saudis as surrogates, blocked efforts at an international global warming meeting to advance specific proposals to reduce "greenhouse" gases, a Democratic senator charged Thursday.

Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, citing minutes of the meeting in Geneva last week as well as reports by attending officials from other countries, said the Saudis - with apparent U.S. acquiesence - denounced as unrealistic any plan for cutting carbon dioxide, the main pollutant linked with global warming.

In what he called a "disastrous" failure of U.S. leadership, Gore said the U.S. delegates chairing the meeting were "totally silent" as the Saudis successfully led opposition to proposals that emission reduction goals or timetables be included in an international treaty to fight global warming.

While acknowledging there was no proof of collusion, Gore said: "Many observers felt the Saudis were articulating the policy preferences of the White House.

"The U.S. delegation sat on its hands while the Saudi delegation and others blasted the hell out of any policy options that would have led to (emission) reductions," said Gore at a Senate Commerce Committee hearing to review intensifying international talks on climate change.

Gore said the Saudi attack was led by that country's oil minister, whom Gore said was clearly intent on protecting Saudia Arabia's interests as a major oil exporter. Petroleum burned in cars, power plants and factories is a major source of carbon dioxide, along with coal and natural gas.

The allegations of U.S.-Saudi collusion were vehemently denied by Frederick Bernthal, deputy director of the National Science Foundation and head of the U.S. delegation to the Geneva meeting. "That's just not true," Bernthal said. "We certainly had no prior consultation with the Saudis."

Bernthal said no emission reduction proposals were adopted at the meeting because many countries, including the United States, had concerns about their feasibility and impact of economic development.

"There was a reality check on how vital interests are affected on this issue," said Bernthal, who suggested European countries pressing for emission reduction goals were alienating impoverished Third World nations struggling for economic growth.

He said the Bush administration opposed any immediate move toward emission reduction goals as premature, but he argued that even if U.S. officials felt otherwise, "it was not for the United States to determine what the policy should be."

But Gore said that in view of scientific reports citing growing consensus about the threat of global warming, the United States - as the largest emitter of carbon dioxide - had a responsibility to show leadership.

"The U.S. could have offered some leadership, offered some proposals," he said. "Instead, the U.S. sat around, proposed nothing of significance and allowed the Saudi oil ministry to dominate the meeting. "I just think it's a disastrous result that is a setback to the needed movement toward solving this problem."

The United States hosted the Geneva meeting as head of the "response strategies" working group of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, a group set up by the United Nations and the World Meteorological Organization to coordinate international action on global warming.

The working group is supposed to determine what measures can be taken to reduce rising carbon dioxide concentrations in the atmosphere. The group is to produce a final report later this summer.

Scientists say carbon dioxide is the main contributor to a growing blanket of heat-trapping pollution that threatens to raise global temperatures, resulting in rising sea levels, disruption of agriculture and forests and altered weather patterns.

Another IPPC working panel on the science of global warming issued a report last month expressing greater certainty that the world faced temperature increases of several degrees by the middle of the next century.

NEW YORK (JUNE 15) UPI - American women still lag behind men in salaries even though they make up a majority of all managers under the age of 35 and may earn more than their male counterparts in some professions, an informal survey released Thursday said.

The annual salary survey by Parade magazine found that the median annual earnings of men in 1989 was $24,336, while women made $17,056, about 70 cents for every male dollar.

Women minorities fared slightly better than the average, earning 85 percent as much as their male counterparts. The median income of black men and women together was $16,588, while Hispanics earned $15,496, Parade said.

Women entering the field of law earned $2,000 more than men, bucking the trend in the survey.

The survey, which was not scientific, was conducted through interviews with hundreds of wage-earners form all areas of the country. The results revealed a wide disparity between salaries for the same job in different cities.

For example, a janitor in New York was paid $442 per week, but the same job in Richmond, Va., garnered only $175, Parade said. In Los Angeles, a truck driver earned $1,064 a week, but in Baltimore only $635. The average weekly salary for a secretary in New York was $519 and in Kansas City, Mo. $387.

Parade said a ''sweeping majority'' of those surveyed were most concerned with the federal deficit, calling it the nation's greatest economic problem. Most said personal debt - from credit cards, for example - was their greatest personal financial problem.

The survey listed the salaries of a number of people from around the country. For example, Randy Tindle, 37, of Hueytown, Ala., earns $37,000 a year as a coal miner. In Los Angeles, Sharon Brown, 34, earns $18,200 as a City Council aide. And Mike Pearl, 61, earns $52,000 as a reporter for the New York Post in New York City.

(JUNE 14) UPI - Romania's official news agency Rompres says the interior minister responsible for maintaining order has been fired in the wake of the nation's worst violence since the December revolution. The minister was reportedly sacked under a ''presidential decree,'' with a military judge appointed to replace him. Four people died and 60 others were hospitalized in street battles that ended early today.

The Soviet Parliament rejected a plan today that would have tripled the price of bread. The vote is a major setback for Mikhail Gorbachev's economic reforms. One legislator described it as a setback for parliament as well, saying- ''parliaments canNOT shrink from difficult, unpopular decisions.'' The government had argued that bread prices are ridiculously low and that the Kremlin canNOT afford to subsidize the basic food any longer.

Old Glory's 213th birthday is being colored by bitter debate. President Bush is leading the drive to change the Constitution to protect the flag from desecration. The American Bar Association repeated its call today against the proposed amendment, calling ''unthinkable'' the idea of unraveling the Bill of Rights for- quoting the A-B-A here- ''partisan, political advantage.''

A strong earthquake shook a sparsely populated area of Soviet Central Asia near the Chinese border today, but there are NO reports of injuries or serious damage. The official Soviet news agency says the quake... which measured six-point-eight on the Richter scale... struck two-thousand miles south of Moscow.

TORONTO (JUNE 15) UPI - John Labatt Ltd. Thursday reported fourth-quarter earnings of $39.1 million, or 44 cents a share, up 23 percent from $31.9 million, or 41 cents a share, in the year-ago period.

Revenues in the quarter inched up to $1.11 billion from $1.10 billion in the fourth quarter of 1989.

The company reported year-end earnings of $143.7 million, or $1.70 a share compared with $114.8 million, or $1.53 a share, in 1989. Revenues declined slightly to $4.5 billion from $4.6 billion in 1989.

Labatt said its improved 1990 earnings reflected higher brewing results and reduced interest costs.

The slight drop in revenues was attributed to the divestitures of Catelli and the company's wine operations, Labatt said.

Labatt is a holding company with brewing, food and entertainment interests.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Jailhouse author Jack Henry Abbott closed his civil trial Thursday by urging a jury not to give a penny to the widow of a man he stabbed through the heart, saying the quickness of the killing proved ''I am not a savage.''

Ricci Adan, 31, is suing Abbott for $10 million for the wrongful death and pain and suffering of her husband, Richard Adan, a budding actor, on July 18, 1981.

A judge already has ruled Abbott is liable for damages and a jury at state Supreme Court must now determine how much he owes.

An economist testified during the trial that if Adan, who was 22 at the time of his death, had lived to become a successful television and film actor, he would have earned $17 million by age 65.

Abbott killed Adan with a single stab wound to the heart outside an East Greenwich Village restaurant after an argument over a lavatory. The killing took place six weeks after author Norman Mailer helped Abbott win early release from a Utah prison, where he was serving time for the murder of a fellow inmate.

Abbott's correspondence with Mailer was published as a book titled ''In the Belly of the Beast.'' The book includes a section in which Abbott describes the sensual experience of killing a person.

In his rambling summation, Abbott, acted as his own lawyer, said Adan was spared any pain because his method of killing was so efficient.

''I'm not a savage,'' Abbott said. ''Mr. Adan was stabbed one time. An atrocious murder is one that is committed to inflict the maximum physical damage to the body ...''

''Objection!'' Ricci Adan's lawyer, Dan Leonard, shouted, jumping to his feet.

''Sustained. Move on, Mr. Abbott,'' agreed Justice Carol Arber.

Abbott, 46, is serving a 15-year to life sentence for manslaughter in Adan's death.

Abbott explained to the jurors why he harangued Adan's widow for crying during cross-examination by her husband's killer. The couple was married six months before the killing.

''Something snapped in me and I thought, 'She is not going to get away with any more of this weeping,''' Abbott told the jurors.

He urged the panel not to give Adan a penny, saying she only filed the suit to punish him.

''All of her witnesses expressed a desire to punish me... I've been punished and I will continue to be punished. The New York prison system is not a very nice place,'' Abbott said.

During his summation, Leonard said, ''This case is not about Jack Abbott. It is about the promise of a great life. About two young people's future together.''

He told the jurors their verdict was based on a ''preponderance'' of the evidence. They must simply find ''that it is more likely than not that Richard Adan would have been a successful actor in television and motion pictures,'' he said.

During the trial, a casting agent, a public television producer and a playwright all testified that Adan won acting parts because of his talent. After starring in a pilot situation comedy that aired on public television he was supposed to act in the subsequent series. He was killed before the filming began.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Some of America's largest corporations are reaping new benefits from writing provisions into their bonds that protect investors from losses caused by events like leveraged buyouts that can drive down bond ratings, debt rating analysts and company officials said Thursday.

Companies such as American Airlines, Ralston Purina Co. and Upjohn Co. have recently issued bonds with provisions called event risk covenants, a concept spawned by the RJR Nabisco Inc. LBO engineered by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co.

But these covenants, which began catching on last year, are now being sought by corporations for their cost-saving potential rather than their ''poison pill'' antitakeover effect.

Under these provisions, companies offer bonds with lower initial interest rates in exchange for guarantees they will raise the rates of interest paid on outstanding bonds if certain events cause their ratings to fall from investment grade to a lower, speculative grade.

In one case, American Airlines, according to Securities and Exchange Commission documents, registered equipment trust certificates in May that promised interest rates on the bonds would be raised if any designated events - a takeover, an ouster of the board of directors, certain types of mergers or a buyout by American of a non-airline business - led Moody's Investors Service Inc. or Standard & Poor's Corp. to downgrade the company's debt rating.

Writing these covenants are a response to ''bondholder concerns that have cropped up over the last year about having their bonds lose a great deal of value in a takeover situation,'' said Jeffery M. Jackson, managing director of corporate finance for Fort Worth, Texas-based American.

''I would presume that investors are a little more jumpy about AMR Corp. (American's parent company) and perhaps other transportation companies in the context of ... takeovers. Donald Trump did make a bid for AMR at one point,'' noted Gail I. Hessol, managing director for S&P's rating group in New York.

Costs that bond issuers can save by including event risk covenants can be substantial.

American estimates it saved 50 to 100 basis points by placing event risk covenants in its long bonds. A hundred basis points are equal to a full percentage point of interest.

S&P said the covenants have become so popular that a separate rating system has been created for them. The debt rating agency calculates that some $19 billion in outstanding debt, representing 125 bond issues from about 100 major corporations, includes this type of covenant.

Although emphasizing the covenants are intended solely to cut costs, American noted in its bond registration statements that the provisions also have a poison pill effect.

''Because a designated event could be expected to occur in connection with certain forms of takeover attempts, these provisions could deter a hostile or friendly acquisition of American or AMR where the person attempting the acquisition views the increased cost of interest on the (bonds) ... as a negative factor,'' a June 7 registration statement filed with the SEC said.

BOSTON (JUNE 14) UPI - In a rare public clash, the Bank of New England Corp. Thursday accused an investment banking firm of basing a highly pessimistic estimate of the troubled banking company's prospects on a conversation ''that never took place.''

Meanwhile, the investment banking firm stood by its report and vowed to produce telephone records to prove it had spoken at length with Bank of New England's new vice chairman, R.T. McNamar.

In its report, the investment firm, Whitman Heffernan Rhein & Co., said ''one or more'' of the Bank of New England bank subsidiaries is likely to be seized by federal regulators before September. Also, the memo said that as a consequence of the banking company's condition, its bonds are virtually worthless.

The bank said Thursday: ''Their portrayal of the company's situation is wrong and it's materially misleading. We stand by our public disclosures.''

A bank spokesman, James Dorsey, said McNamar was not available because he was preparing for a meeting. However, Dorsey said McNamar claims never to have spoken with the investment banking firm. ''I am authorized by Mr. McNamar to say that the conversation never occurred,'' he said.

However, Whitman Heffernan stuck to its story. Based on a conversation with McNamar, Whitman Heffernan concluded ''there is a high probability that one or more of the bank subsidiaries will be seized (by government regulators) by the end of August,'' said John Mueller, an investment banker at the firm.

Also, Mueller said McNamar told him that banking regulators ''are very negative'' on New England. In what Mueller described as a ''pretty frightening'' appraisal, he said McNamar relayed the view of regulators that despite the recent sharp declines in real estate prices in the region ''real estate hasn't started down yet.''

Mueller said he is one of two vice presidents at his firm who spoke with McNamar by telephone from New York for 20 or 30 minutes on May 29.

The next day, Mueller said, Whitman Heffernan issued a memo telling its clients who hold bonds in the Bank of New England that the securities were nearly worthless.

''Having had the conversation with McNamar, we felt an affirmative obligation to report'' those results, Mueller said.

''It is not our portrayal; it is McNamar's. And if it is wrong and misleading, they have a responsibility to explain how it is wrong and misleading. They have failed to respond to our requests for clarification.''

''I don't understand the company's position that the conversation never occurred,'' Mueller said. ''We had the conversation. And when they become available, we will provide them with our telephone records that will definitely prove the conversation took place.''

''We spoke to the company (again) before the memo had been fully distributed,'' Mueller said. The bank thus ''had access to that memo at more or less the same time as our bondholder group'' and could have responded to the questions it raised but declined to do so, Mueller said.

Mueller emphasized that McNamar had not said any of the banks Bank of New England owns in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Maine would be taken, but rather that was a conclusion he and his colleague, Alex Greene, drew from McNamar's comments and other circumstances.

''The reason we say August (for a likely seizure) is there's a large interest payment due in September. If the government wants to do a deal, they've had plenty of time and they're going to want to keep cash in the (Bank of New England) system.

''There were also some other comments by Mr. McNamar that led us to that conclusion,'' Mueller said, ''but I don't want to go into that.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 14) UPI - Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner announced a series of actions Thursday aimed at enhancing travel security against terrorism, including the creation of an Office of Intelligence and Security.

The actions stem in part from recommendations made by the presidential Commission on Aviation Security and Terrorism.

''I want our organizational framework to reflect the fact that aviation and maritime security is a top priority of this department,'' Skinner said.

Skinner announced his intention to create the Office of Intelligence and Security within his immediate office. It would oversee security policy and strategic planning for all security initiatives in the Transportation Department.

Skinner named Coast Guard Vice Adm. Clyde Robbins to serve as director of the office. Robbins is the commander of the Pacific Area and Maritime Defense Zone.

The government has been studying ways to upgrade security against terrorism since a Pan American World Airways jet was bombed over Scotland in December 1988, killing 170 people.

The new office will coordinate security policies and strategies and share technical expertise among the different modes of transportation. Robbins will serve as the Transporation Department's chief liaison with other government intelligence and law enforcement agencies, including the National Security Council.

In a related development, Federal Aviation Administration head James Busey announced the creation of a new position of assistant administrator for civil aviation security. That person will report to Busey and work closely with the Office of Intelligence and Security.

Other anti-terrorism steps taken include requiring more sensitive X-ray machines and metal detectors at airports and requiring a positive match of passengers and checked luggage for international flights leaving the United States.

''Taken together these initiatives represent building blocks in a system that will justify even higher levels of passenger confidence in the safety of air travel, already our safest mode of transporation by a wide measure '' Skinner said.

LAKE BUENA VISTA, FL. (JUNE 14) UPI - Warren Beatty, producer, director and star of ''Dick Tracy,'' and co-star Dustin Hoffman appeared Thursday night before a boistrous crowd of about 3,000 people who came to see the world premiere of the $35 million movie.

Madonna, who has received rave reviews for her portrayal of temptress-songstress Breathless Mahoney, canceled her appearance at the opening of Beatty's salute to the legendary crime fighter. A spokeswoman for Warner Bros., where Madonna records, said the sultry pop singer was suffering from a minor viral infection, but was expected to perform Friday night at the Spectrum in Philadelphia.

Al Pacino, who plays villian Big Boy Caprice, also canceled because is he working on another movie, said Charles Ridgeway, a Disney spokesman said.

Beatty and Hoffman, who appears as Mumbles in ''Dick Tracy'' and also co-starred with Beatty in the flop ''Ishtar,'' along with a half dozen co-stars entered the 10-screen movie theater where the film made its premiere about 6:30 p.m. EDT. About 800 members of the media also were present for the splashy opening.

The movie, shown on all 10 screens at the multiplex theater on Disney property south of Orlando, was financed by Touchstone Pictures, a Disney subsidiary.

After the screening, the stars were to travel to the nearby Disney-MGM Studios Theme Park and cruise down the re-created Hollywood Boulevard in limousines. Beatty, Hoffman and co-stars Glenne Headly, who plays Tess Trueheart, Tracy's girlfriend, and Charlie Korsmo, who plays the Kid, a street urchin adopted by Tracy, were to place their handprints into concrete.

Guests were then to gather at the re-created Brown Derby nighclub at Disney-MGM for a party.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 15) UPI - Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., introduced a bill Thursday that would send $10 million in emergency medical supplies, food and clothing to Lithuania, using private relief agencies to get around the Soviet blockade of the breakaway Baltic republic.

Since the crackdown began in April, the House and Senate have voted to hold up benefits for the Soviet Union, but Armstrong spokeswoman Wendy Stone said she believed the bill was the first congressional attempt to aid Lithuania.

The bill directs the president to begin negotiations with the Soviet government to allow the $10 million in aid to be delivered.

During that effort, the U.S. Agency for International Development would distribute the aid through the Red Cross and Caritas, a Roman Catholic charity, both of which are active in Lithuania, Stone said.

The aid would include medical supplies, food, clothing and emergency fuel for use at medical facilities.

Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene announced Wednesday in Moscow that Soviet officials had agreed to ease the blockade by supplying more natural gas and other raw materials to Lithuanian enterprises.

Armstrong said, ''While this may slightly mitigate some effects of the blockade for a few, these small steps forward do nothing to alleviate the impending suffering for the inhabitants of this tiny Baltic nation.''

The total lifting of the blockade, including resumption of badly needed oil supplies, depends on the Lithuanian Parliament's willingness to freeze its declaration of independence. The Parliament meets again Saturday.

''The Soviet Union is wreaking havoc in Lithuania. Since April, its borders have been sealed preventing the inflow of necessary fuel, food and medical supplies,'' Armstrong said, warning of possible starvation.

''The Senate has consistently resisted further trade agreements with the Soviet Union until the Lithuanian crisis has been peacefully resolved,'' he said. ''However, Congress's resolve has had little effect on the administration and the Soviet government.''

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (JUNE 14) UPI - Zsa Zsa Gabor has decided to stop appealing her conviction for striking a motorcycle cop and will serve three days in jail, her publicist said Thursday, the first anniversary of the slap heard around the world.

''She's planning to drop her appeal and will serve her 72-hour sentence within the month,'' publicist Phil Paladino said. ''She's just tired of it and as Zsa Zsa says, you can't fight City Hall.

''In her heart, she's innocent. She just wants to end it and go on with her life and put it behind her. Besides, 72 hours isn't going to kill her.''

Paladino said Gabor, 72, a former Miss Hungary, still has to formally notify the Superior Court appellate division that she is dropping her appeal.

Gabor's lawyer, Harrison Bull, could not be reached. Deputy District Attorney Elden Fox, who prosecuted Gabor, said he welcomed the news and did not believe Gabor's appeal had ''any substance to it anyway.''

After a celebrated three-week trial that attracted worldwide attention, Gabor was convicted last September of slapping Beverly Hills motorcycle officer Paul Kramer after he stopped her $110,000 Rolls-Royce Corniche for an expired registration tag on June 14, 1989.

Municipal Court Judge Charles Rubin sentenced Gabor to three days in jail, but allowed her to delay serving the jail term pending appeal.

If Gabor does indeed drop her appeal, she will be allowed to serve her term in the jail of a local municipality rather than in harsher county facilities, Paladino said.

As part of her sentence, Rubin also placed Gabor on probation and ordered her to perform 120 hours' community service at a shelter for homeless women in Venice, to pay nearly $13,000 in fines and restitution and to undergo psychiatric evaluation.

Last month, Rubin found that Gabor had completed only 34.5 hours of the community service by the March 30 deadline, and ordered her to complete the remaining 85.5 hours, plus an additional 60 hours.

The judge sternly warned her that if she violated her probation again, he would sentence her to additional jail time.

In a related development, a celebrity auction organized by Gabor and held Friday at the Beverly Hilton Hotel raised about $50,000 for the Venice homeless shelter, Paladino said. Gabor had estimated that the auction would raise some $500,000.

She had hoped that the time spent organizing the auction would serve as credit towards her community service, but Judge Rubin said it could not.

DALLAS (JUNE 14) UPI - Indicted former Vernon Savings owner Donald Ray Dixon surrendered to federal authorities Thursday, saying he and other thrift owners are being made scapegoats for government regulators who turned a $10 billion market correction into a $500 billion fiasco.

A grand jury Wednesday capped a three-year federal investigation of the $1.3 billion failure of Vernon Savings and Loan Associaton of Dallas by indicting the flamboyant former thrift owner. Dixon faces 38 counts of conspiracy and misapplication of funds for allegedly scheming with other Vernon Savings executives to use thrift funds for political contributions, party girls and vacation homes.

Dixon turned himself in to the FBI and was brought in handcuffs before U.S. Magistrate John Tolle for a brief hearing.

Tolle accepted the government's recommendation that Dixon be released without posting a cash bond and ordered him to appear for arraignment June 27 before U.S. District Judge Joe Fish.

Dixon told reporters he and other S&L owners, such as Charles Keating of Lincoln Savings in California, are being made scapegoats for the actions of ''the real villians'' the taxpayers haven't seen yet.

Dixon identified them as politicans, regulators and administration officials.

''The whole system of deregulation was improperly handled and they've got to blame someone. We're an easy target,'' Dixon said.

The indictment charges that between 1983 and 1986, Dixon and a number of officers and employees of Vernon Savings conspired to falsify thrift records to conceal his personal use of Vernon's money for hunting trips, political contributions, prostitutes, yacht cruises, antique cars and a house in Solana Beach, Calif.

One count charges that Dixon used his airplane to promote an illegal activity, the transportation of prostitutes from Texas to California.

Dixon, who describes himself as an unemployed financial consultant, said the American taxpayers footing the bill for the failure of the saving and loan industry have yet to hear the full story of what happened.

''In reality they (villians) took a correction in the real estate market of $10-12 billion and turned it into a $500 billion fiasco,'' he said.

Dixon helped build Vernon from a small thrift into a $1.7 billion institution before its collapse in March 1987. Vernon's failure, resulting in a $1.3 billion loss, was the region's largest thift failure at the time.

Dixon, who says he will plead ''not guilty'' when he is arraigned, and his attorney, Billy Ravkind of Dallas, both criticized the media for its coverage of the S&L crisis.

''Our only hope and prayer is a fair and impartial jury,'' said Dixon. ''We've already been tried and convicted in the press.''

So far, seven former Vernon officers have been convicted or have pleaded guilty to criminal charges, including former Chief Executive Officer Woody F. Lemons, who was given a 30-year prison sentence.

In a statement released in Washington, U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh termed the Dixon indictment the ''most significant case developed out of our savings and loan investigations in the Dallas area.''

MEDINAH, IL (JUNE 14) UPI - Tim Simpson and Jeff Sluman, leading the largest assault on par in the tournament's 90-year history, shot 6-under 66s Thursday to share the lead late in the first round of the U.S. Open.

Curtis Strange, however, failed to take advantage of the ideal scoring conditions and after a first-round 73 found himself way back in the pack in his bid to become only the second player to win the Open three straight years.

''I didn't play very well,'' said Strange, who became so frustrated with his game that at the 17th tee he walked to his golf bag, which was standing upright, and kicked it over. ''Basically, I didn't putt very well at all. And eventually it affected the rest of my game.

''I still don't think I've lost yet. But it's a disappointment because Medinah was there to be taken advantage of today. If you are going to win the golf tournament, you needed to shoot a good score today. I have a lot of ground to make up.''

Simpson spent the week prior to the Open salmon fishing in Alaska. Sluman, the 1988 winner of the PGA Championship, chose instead to grind his way to a poor finish at the Western Open.

But although they took divergent paths, they wound up with the same score on a day in which par was not a very good score.

With more than a third of the field still on the golf course, the U.S. Open record for most sub-par rounds in a single day - 24 - had already been matched.

Overnight rains not only forced a 30-minute delay in the start of the tournament, but softened the Medinah Country Club's No. 3 course to the point it became almost extraordinarily vulnerable.

''I was hoping the course would soften up,'' said Simpson, who vaulted into the ranks of the PGA Tour's top players last year by winning $761,597. ''I knew the USGA wouldn't do it, so God did it.''

The co-leaders had a one-shot advantage over Steve Jones and Mike Donald, who equaled a first-round record at the Masters this year with a 64 only to shoot an 82 the next day.

''I think that experience will help me,'' Donald said. ''I think I'm playing better now than I was then.''

At 4-under 68 came John Huston and Mark Brooks while Billy Ray Brown and Emlyn Aubrey were at 3-under 69. Ian Woosnam, Gil Morgan and Mike Reid were among those at 70 while Chip Beck and Bobby Wadkins headed the group at 71.

Out on the course, meanwhile, players were still taking advantage of the easy conditions. Scott Simpson, winner of this tournament three years ago, was 4-under with six to play. Dave Rummells was 2-under with nine to go, Jack Nicklaus was 1-under going to the 18th tee and Masters champion Nick Faldo was 1-under after 15.

''I never thought the golf course would play this tame,'' said Huston, who played in the same threesome with Simpson and who bogeyed only one hole. ''It sure played a lot easier than it did in the practice rounds.

''Tim sure took advantage of it. He didn't miss a shot.''

Simpson has posted six top 10 finishes this year and is 14th on the money list with $329,564.

But he had become so tired of golf that he headed out of town last week - a long way out of town.

''I had played five straight weeks,'' Simpson said. ''I felt burned out. I love to hunt and fish and I decided to go salmon fishing in Alaska. And when I got back I had a little jet lag and felt a little tired.

''I didn't even play a practice round Wednesday. So you can imagine how tickled I am. Today was just one of those days. I hit every fairway and every green.''

Simpson got going by hitting an 8-iron to within four inches at the par-3 fourth hole and then hit a pitching wedge to within a foot at the par-5 fifth. He made an eight-footer for birdie at the par-4 sixth to go 3-under and then made a 23-footer at the par-5 10th.

His final two birdies were from 4 feet at the par-5 14th and from 25 feet at the par-3 17th.

Strange's day got off to a bad start when he three-putted the opening hole. He also three-putted at the ninth and 16th holes.

LOGAN, UT (JUNE 14) UPI - Mayor Russ Fjeldsted issued an executive order Wednesday demanding all city departments immediately alter or remove the part of the city's logo bearing an image of the Logan Mormon Temple.

''We have been advised by legal counsel to immediately remove all city decals from vehicles, letterheads, cards, notices, etc., which depict the Logan Temple landmark,'' Fjeldsted said.

''We are redesigning the logo and will replace them when the new design is ready,'' he said.

The mayor said the decision was made to avoid ''any legal hassles'' with those who object to the Logan Mormon Temple on the city's symbol.

''We've reanalyzed the legality of it and we don't want to take any chances,'' he said.

Logan wants to avoid the same type of costly legal battle St. George recently fought with residents who objected to use of the St. George Mormon Temple on that city's logo, and city subsidization of electricity that allowed the temple to be lighted at night, Fjeldsted said.

Last week, St. George agreed to pay $85,000 in attorneys' fees to the residents who alleged the practices violated First Amendment guarantees of a separation of church and state.

The agreements followed a U.S. Supreme Court decision in April letting stand a lower court ruling that the city violated the First Amendment when it gave free electricity to light the temple.

Pastor Danny Royer, from the Logan Assembly of God Church, had written a letter to the editor published in the Herald Journal newspaper that urged responsible Mormons and others to write to the city complaining about the logo.

Royer said the logo was not fitting because the temple is off limits to all residents except faithful Mormons. Only members of the church in good standing are allowed inside the building for such religious ceremonies as baptisms and marriages.

REDMOND, Wash. (JUNE 15) UPI - A top Microsoft Corp. officer said the software giant plans to expand its work force by more than 50 percent in the next year.

Current employment of 5,200 will expand to about 8,000 by the end of June 1991, said Frank Gaudette, chief financial officer. He said the majority of the new hires will be employed at the company's compound in Redmond.

As recently as 1986 Microsoft's employment was under 1,000. But Microsoft's growth has been enormous and the new employees are needed to keep pace with sales, Gaudette said.

He said Microsoft achieved its first billion-dollar annual sales period in the 12 months ending March 31. During that period the company had $1.1 billion in sales with $245 million in earnings.

The company also is expected to post its first billion-dollar fiscal year in the period ending June 30.

Gaudette made his comments Wednesday at an investment conference in Seattle.

(JUNE 14) UPI - The State Department today condemned Romania's violence against protesters, and tied future economic aid to the Romanian government's behavior. State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said most favored nation tariff treatment and assistance will depend on Romania's response. The White House condemned ''in the strongest terms'' government violence yesterday and today which left at least five people dead.

Algeria today declared the Moslem fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front the winner of yestrday's elections. The vote was the first multi-party election in Algeria since its independence from France 28 years ago. The victory against the ruling party heightened concerns in France about an increase in Algerian immigration and the strengthening of an anti-immigrant movement. Some are also afraid of an increase of fundamentalist tendencies in France.

The Supreme Court today ruled that police may use roadblocks to check motorists for drunken driving. The high court ruled 6-3 that the intrusion on drivers is slight compared to the magnitude of the drunken driving problem. Justice William Brennan's dissent said the benefits of the practice are beside the point. Opponents of sobriety checkpoints say they violate the Constitutional ban against UNreasonable search and seizure.

A suicide car bombing at a police checkpoint in Colombia today killed at least four people. Two people who were in the car died. It was the second apparent suicide bombing in less than a month. Also today, police say they killed one of the top hitmen of the Medellin cocaine cartel. The suspected leader of a band of gunmen was killed in a gunbattle with police last night. Five policemen were killed overnight in Medellin.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 15) UPI - The U.S. Department of Labor Thursday announced a settlement agreement in which Eaton Corp.'s Controls Division will provide $230,514.24 in compensation to 16 individuals allegedly denied employment at the firm's Wauwatosa, Wis., facility based on perceived handicaps.

''This agreement upholds the Labor Department's commitment to eliminate employment discrimination of all kinds,'' U.S. Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole said. ''It is important that job qualifications accurately reflect job requirements and do not deny employment based on perceived handicaps.''

The Labor Department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs began a routine compliance review of Cleveland-based Eaton Corp. in November 1988.

The review found that 16 qualified individuals who had applied for jobs at Eaton from July 19, 1987 to March 6, 1989 were routinely denied employment based on the results of a pre-employment physical examination. It said they were denied jobs despite being physically and otherwise qualified for available positions.

The conditions screened out included high blood pressure, back problems, diabetes, thyroid conditions, history of wrist surgery and asthma.

The agency is responsible for enforcing the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, which requires employers with federal contracts or subcontracts of more than $2,500 to provide equal job opportunity and affirmative action for qualified individuals with, or regarded as having, handicaps.

OFCCP Director Cari Dominguez said, ''Federal contrators have a legal obligation to assure every qualified individual has equal employment and promotional opportunities.''

As a result of OFCCP's findings, the firm agreed to make back payments, but did so without admission of any violation of the law.

Headquartered in Carol Stream, Ill., Eaton's Controls Division is a subcontractor to various large federal contractors to provide parts for air conditioners and other cooling systems.

As part of the settlement agreement, the company further agreed to modify its personnel procedures in order to ensure that physical and/or mental job requirements do not screen out otherwise qualified handicapped individuals.

Barry announced last night that he will NOT seek a fourth term.

BOSTON (JUNE 15) UPI - Digital Equipment Corp. agreed to pay $4,410 in fines Thursday stemming from safety violations uncovered after the death of a worker at the computer maker's Hudson, Mass., plant, federal regulators said.

The Departmant of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration investigated the semiconductor manufacturing plant following the Jan. 27 death of a worker who accidentally inhaled nitrogen through a pressurized breathing air system.

The federal investigation uncovered seven alleged serious violations from deficiencies in respirator-safety training, inadequate hazard communication procedures and other problems.

Maynard, Mass.-based Digital ''has already abated the cited hazards and agreed to pay the full amount of the penalty and to not contest the citations,'' said Frank Gravitt, director of OSHA's northeastern Massachusetts area office.

''The company has further agreed to promote comprehensive safety systems analysis within the industry and also to work with OSHA in the development of a hazard alert to be disseminated throughout the semiconductor field,'' Gravitt said.

BATON ROUGE, LA (JUNE 14) UPI - The Louisiana House of Representatives voted Thursday to pass an bill that would outlaw all abortions in the state except where a mother's life is endangered by a continued pregnancy.

The legislation now moves to the Senate, which is considered likely to pass it with little or no changes. It is unclear whether Gov. Buddy Roemer would sign the measure into law. If enacted, such a law would be certain to go before the Supreme Court as a test case.

After more than four hours of often bitter debate, the House voted 74-27 in favor of the bill, which would make it a felony to perform an abortion in the state except to save a woman's life. A doctor who performs an abortion would face up to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $100,000.

When the vote was announced, anti-abortion forces in the galley of the House chamber applauded wildly.

''What kind of man or woman would reach into a mother's body and pull a baby out of her?'' asked the legislation's sponsor, Democratic Rep. Louis ''Woody'' Jenkins, before passage. ''What kinds of man or woman would not try to stop the killing of innocent children in this country?''

Jenkins argued that life begins at the moment of conception, meaning any abortion should be considered a murder.

He and other anti-abortion members of the House successfully defeated efforts to amend the bill to include exceptions for rape and incest, arguing that those cases result in between 10 and 20 pregnancies each year nationwide.

''If we do not consistently protect the right to life ..., we will undermine Louisiana's strong case that an unborn child is a human being,'' Jenkins said.

Virtually the only opposition to the strict language of the abortion legislation came from back lawmakers, who unsuccessfully offered amendments that would have forced the state to provide pre- and post-natal care and welfare to women who could not afford to have children and would have had abortions if they remained legal.

In each case, House Speaker Jimmy Dimos, a co-author of the measure, ruled that those amendments were not relevant to the bill because the legislation dealt with criminal statutes, not civil statutes.

Dimos also ruled that Rep. Charles R. Jones could not ask the House to consider an amendment that would have forced each member of the Legislature to adopt a child in the next year if the mother signed an affidavit declaring that she would have had an abortion had it been legal in Louisiana.

''We are dealing with a bill impacting women below the poverty level,'' Jones said. ''Someone's going to have to pay for them, and that adds up to thousand and thousands of children that will be added to our welfare rolls.''

After the vote, abortion rights advocates said they expected the people of the state to rise up in protest against the bill.

''Woody Jenkins and his lot should not be allowed forced their morality on the people of this state,'' said Marie S. Ashby, president of the Louisiana Coalition for Reproductive Freedom. ''This is the mentality that burned witches at Salem.''

The governor, who describes himself as a ''pro-life'' governor, repeatedly has said he would veto any legislation that did not allow exceptions for the mother's health, rape or incest.

But Roemer appeared to soften that stance Thursday before the House debate. ''It's going to be dysfunctional - not proper - to have a bill that does not treat as a special event the violent act of rape,'' Roemer said. ''That's an exception that ought to be in the bill. ... I would rather not play the end game (of signing or vetoing the bill) yet.''

When reminded that he had previously said he would veto any bill without the exceptions, Roemer responded, ''I think that's true. I don't mean to be tricky about it, but I'd like to give (legislators) a chance to debate it and decide what's in their best interest.''

Later, Roemer said ''unequivocally'' had not changed his position on abortion, but again did not say if he would veto the bill.

Recent polls suggest a majority of Louisianians do not favor an outright ban on abortion.

A measure similar to Jenkins' has been approved by a Louisiana Senate committee and is awaiting action by the full upper chamber.

Louisiana previously had restrictive abortion laws, but in its landmark Roe vs. Wade ruling in 1973, the Supreme Court ruled them unconstitutional.

After last July's Supreme Court decision granting states wider latitude in restricting abortion, the state tried to prosecute an abortion clinic under the long-dormant statutes, but a federal court in New Orleans threw out the case saying the old anti-abortion laws still were unconstitutional.

HAMELN, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 15) UPI - An explosion damaged a British military building in West Germany Thursday, and an army spokesman confirmed investigators suspect the blast was caused by a bomb placed by the Irish Republican Army.

The spokesman for the British Army on the Rhine said no one was injured in the blast around 5:15 p.m. - a time when the building, which is used as a training center, was not occupied.

He said the explosion damaged the roof of a Royal Engineers Unit training center, located near Hameln in the north of West Germany.

''One assumes it was caused by a bomb,'' he said. He said British military officials and West German police had started investigations.

Asked whether the investigators believe the Irish Republican Army had placed the bomb, he said, ''Yes, they do.''

The IRA has claimed responsibility for a total of 14 attacks on British military personnel and installations in West Germany.

Two weeks ago the Irish extremist movement said its members had shot dead two Australian tourists in Holland, near the German border. The IRA said in a statement the gunmen thought the two were British troops.

NEW YORK (JUNE 14) UPI - Baaron Pittenger, former executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, Wednesday was named executive director of USA Hockey, the group that runs the country's Olympic hockey program.

(JUNE 14) UPI - International condemnation of Romania's bloody crackdown on dissent... the Supreme Court O-K's sobriety checkpoints... And Soviet lawmakers reject market reform program. U-P-I has it all, next:

Romania is facing international criticism for its violent handling of dissent that reportedly killed at least five people and hospitalized 60 others.

Britain is one nation expressing concern. Foreign Office Minister William Waldegrave descried today's crackdown on protesters as ''calling out a rent-a-mob of coal miners.''

The State Department also voiced strong condemnation, saying future economic assistance to Bucharest will be impossible if human rights violations continue.

The B-B-C says the death toll could reach several dozen in confrontations that marked the bloodiest day since Romania's December revolution.

The fighting involved riot police and government supporters on one side... and anti-government demonstrators on the other. The street battles in Bucharest broke out at dawn yesterday when riot police stormed a sit-in held to protest the presence former high-level communists in the new government.

The fighting died down today. Soldiers are guarding government offices and the state-owned television station to prevent renewed protests.

Transportation Secretary Skinner says he supports today's Supreme Court ruling on roadstops because it means drunken driving ''will NOT be tolerated.''

Skinner adds that the sobriety checkpoints upheld by the high court have been a useful tool in many states in getting intoxicated drivers off the roads.

But the American Civil Liberaties Union says it does NOT consider the case closed. The director of the Michigan chapter of the A-C-L-U says a lower court order was based on the state's constitution... and could be used as a basis to continue fighting the checkpoints in Michigan.

The justices upheld the constitutionality of the sobriety checkpoints in a 6-3 decision... saying the magnitude of the problem outweighs constitutional concern over intrusions.

Three justices voiced dissent, disagreeing that the intrusion of being stopped at a checkpoint is minimal.

(JUNE 14) UPI - The Soviet Parliament today resoundingly rejected a plan to triple bread prices. The vote was 319-33 against the price hike, which is part of a market reform plan.

The legislators ordered a new plan to be drawn up by fall, and insisted it be acceptable to the governments of the 15 Soviet republics.

The government had gone all out to persuade legislators that bread prices were ridiculously low. At 40 cents a loaf, farmers use bread to feed their cattle. This occurs in a country that has to import huge amounts of grain each year.

The defeat of the price plan dealt a major blow to President Gorbachev's economic reforms. Ironically, the action comes a day after the Parliament voted to support the principle of a transition to a regulated market economy.

In another vote today, the Soviet Parliament approved a common tax rate of 45 percent for most state-owned businesses as well as fledgling private and cooperative enterprises.

(JUNE 14) UPI - New York Cardinal John O'Connor says politicians canNOT separate their faith from their policies- at least if they want to remain Catholic.

O'Connor is warning Roman Catholic politicians they risk excommunication if they continue to support abortion rights.

The cardinal... writing in the archdiocesan newspaper Catholic New York... says he is NOT talking about a public officeholder demanding Americans go to mass. O'Connor says he is speaking to individuals who should NOT base their actions on the views of the majority... but what he or she believes is right.

The warning came in a city with a number of nationally prominent Catholic politicians who support legal abortion. One of them- Governor Mario Cuomo- terms O'Connor's statement ''upsetting.''

But Cuomo says he has NO plans to change his mind. The governor personally opposes abortion, but supports a woman's right to chose.

(JUNE 14) UPI - Congressional debate on a constitutional amendment to ban flag desecration began today... Flag Day... even before the issue hit the floor of the House and the Senate.

Republicans and a few Democrats fired the opening shots by calling news conference rallies on Capitol Hill. They proclaimed the flag flap a debate on cultural values prompted by a need to protect the national symbol.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas told a crowd outside the Capitol that a flag-protecting amendment ''is the right way to go.'' He said Congress tried a statute and ''it didN'T work.''

The Supreme Court this week ruled the law UNconstitutional because it violates the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of expression.

Democratic Senator Terry Sanford of North Carolina said the United States will be seen as ''whimpering wimps'' around the world if the amendment passes, showing that the country is- in his words- ''NOT strong enough'' to stand dissent.

Government workers testified today budget cuts for Medicare oversight have made Medicare vulnerable to waste, abuse and mismanagement.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 15) UPI - Hoping to speed consideration of congressional spending bills, the Senate passed a limited budget plan Thursday that does not say how any of the $503 billion in fiscal year 1991 discretionary spending would be used.

The scaled-back Senate budget plan, passed on a voice vote, was needed to help appropriators begin their work without impeding the congressional and administration budget talks on a fiscal 1991 budget package. Those talks continued Thursday with no reported progress.

The Senate budget plan, which calls for $503 billion in discretionary spending next year in all categories, including defense, is considered ''policy neutral'' because it does not direct how much money will be spend for any government function.

Appropriators would decide that later.

The limited Senate budget now goes to a conference committee with the House, which on May 1 passed a spending plan containing $513 billion in defense and domestic discretionary spending as part of a larger $1.2 trillion spending package for fiscal 1991.

The House budget cuts defense spending levels below what President Bush requested in the budget he submitted in January and calls for spending $6 billion more on domestic initiatives that Bush did not propose.

Despite passage by voice vote, some opposition was noted on the Senate floor.

''With passage of this resolution, it's one more step toward (another) year of drift,'' said Sen. Jeffrey Bingaman, D-N.M.

Earlier Thursday, House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., indicated the House would not accept the Senate's budget approach.

''I'm not opposed to it for the Senate,'' Foley said. ''I'm not ready to agree to that conclusion for the (House-Senate) conference'' to adopt.

Under its rules, the House can begin consideration of spending bills for the following year once it has passed a budget resolution. But the Senate cannot begin work on its spending bills until House and Senate negotiators agree on a budget plan.

Appropriators and congressional leaders felt it was important to clear the way for routine consideration of spending bills in case budget summit negotiators fail to reach an agreement.

The 13 spending bills that fund all government functions must pass whether or not there is a budget summit agreement.

LONDON (JUNE 15) UPI - The son of a leading political opponent of Romanian

President Ion Iliescu said Friday his father was beaten by pro-government coal miners and driven away from his home in a police car.

Nicholae Ratiu, who lives in London, said he did not know where his father Ion Ratiu, president of the National Peasants Party, had been taken.

His report, based on a telephone conversation he had with his cousin in Bucharest, could not immediately be confirmed.

Coal miners were in control of the heart of the capital after being summoned by Iliescu to help restore calm after the strongest anti-government uprising since the revolution that toppled dictator Nicholae Ceausescu in December.

Ion Ratiu had disappeared for several hours Thursday during which the miners ransacked his party headquarters, Nicholae Ratiu said.

He returned to his home Thursday evening with three other men.

''A group of miners got into the house, broke in and smashed up house, beat them up,'' Nicholae Ratiu said. ''My cousin went to the house independently. He was held by the miners outside. He was beaten and threatened. A knife was held to his throat and an iron bar in his mouth. They robbed him of money and car keys.''

Nicholae Ratiu said his cousin saw his father and the three men were taken away in police cars. ''The miners got in trucks and followed them,'' he said.

He identified the others as Mihai Leu and Sandu Pobereznic, Romanians who live in Britain, and Dragos Serban of Bucharest. All three were part of Ratiu's election team.

Nicholae Ratiu said his father had received ''lots of death threats ..., I assume from National Front people. He had every reason to believe them after Iliescu summoned miners to beat up people left, right and center.''

Nicholae Ratiu said his mother had fled to Zurich after being harbored in the British Embassy for a short time.

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, CA (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Delphi Information Systems Inc. Friday reported a continuing improvement in operating results.

However, the company recorded a loss for the year ended March 31, 1990, after adjusting operating results for the cumulative effect of an accounting change.

Effective April 1, 1989, the company changed its revenue recognition method to record revenue at the time of shipment to the customer.

Previously the company followed an industry practice of recognizing revenue at the time of delivery to a common carrier, whether for shipment to the customer or to storage for the customer's convenience until request for physical delivery, on the basis that title had passed.

The change represents adoption by the company of a preferred accounting standard and is consistent with expected future developments in revenue recognition principles for software companies.

The results for the year ended March 31, 1990, contained the non-operating adjustment of an accounting change which increased the retained earnings deficit at the beginning of the year by $1,712,000. This adjustment resulted in the company recording a net loss for the year of $1,639,000, or 39 cents per share compared with a net loss for the prior year of $710,000, or 18 cents per share.

However, income for the year ended March 31, 1990, before the cumulative effect of accounting change, was $73,000, or 2 cents per share, compared with a loss of $710,000, or 18 cents per share for the prior year. Revenue for the fiscal year was $21,089,000, compared with $20,502,000 for the prior year, a 3 percent increase.

The effect of the accounting change was to increase income for the year ended March 31, 1990, before the cumulative effect of the accounting change by $43,000, or 1 cent per share.

Net income for the quarter was $288,000, or 6 cents per share compared to a loss of $994,000, or 24 cents per share, for the year earlier period. Revenue for the fourth quarter increased to $5.8 million from $5,022,000 recorded in the year earlier period, a 15 percent increase.

Richard Janssen, president and chief executive officer, stated, ''The improved operating results for the year were achieved through a combination of increased revenues and reduced operating expenses. The revenue increase is attributable to upgrade sales to existing customers and an increase in the average sales price per system, reflecting larger system sizes. The favorable cost results were achieved in connection with a cost-reduction program implemented during our first fiscal quarter.''

As a result of changing market conditions and marketing strategies, Delphi and CIGNA are in the process of amending their 1988 Strategic Marketing Agreement.

Under the amended agreement, CIGNA's fixed sales commitments and related penalties will be replaced by a fund to subsidize the purchase of Delphi Systems by CIGNA agents. Delphi will be relieved of certain commitments and restrictions under the existing contract and reduce the maximum number of warrants that CIGNA can earn from 500,000 to 250,000 shares.

''The amended contract will continue Delphi's close relationship with CIGNA but on a more flexible basis,'' Janssen said. ''In exchanging a fixed commitment for an incentive fund, the volume of our sales to CIGNA agents will depend on how well we use these incentives. We believe that our total revenues under the amended contract will be near $40 million and may exceed that amount.''

Adoption of the new accounting method deferred $3,109,000 of revenue into fiscal 1991. Management believes that this revenue will have a positive incremental effect on revenues in the first six months of fiscal 1991, since the company is changing its operating procedures to minimize revenue deferrals in the future.

Management also believes that its focus on increasing revenues through its expanded sales force, continuing cost controls, and its growing customer base will provide further improvement in both revenues and profits in the coming years even though the property and casualty insurance market is still in a transition from the soft market conditions that have existed over the past several years.

With headquarters in Westlake Village, Delphi is the largest independent developer and marketer of turnkey automation systems for insurance agents and brokers in the property and casualty insurance field.

The Delphi system provides proven agency productivity and profitability increases through total agency automation, encompassing integrated functions of policy information, accounting, financial reporting, prospect management and cross selling, claims administration, management reporting, office administration, integrated rating and electronic interface with insurance carriers.

CHATTANOOGA, TN (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Judge R. Allan Edgar of the U.S. District Court of the Eastern District of Tennessee yesterday ruled in litigation between Provident Life and Accident Insurance Co. (NASDAQ:PACCB) and the U.S. Government.

The source of the litigation was disagreement between the two parties over rights and obligations imposed by the Medicare Secondary Payment Program, which was effective Jan. 1, 1983.

Provident's vice president and general counsel, J. Michael Gannon, said, ''The Court's decision is a step forward in our attempt to resolve our differences with the government. We filed this lawsuit because we could not agree with the government on what the Medicare Secondary Payment Program law means. The court has now ruled on the law, and in many important respects the ruling favors Provident.''

''First, the government insisted that Provident was responsible to pay Medicare on behalf of employer health plans even when Provident only administered the plan but did not insure it. The court has now agreed with Provident's position that it cannot be made to pay in those circumstances. Because a substantial portion of our employee benefits business is in administered plans, this ruling is positive for us.

''Second, the government argued that Provident would be responsible to pay Medicare even when Provident had already paid the claim. Again, the court agreed with Provident's position that it could not be required to pay the same claim twice.

''Third, the government had made unreasonable demands on Provident in an attempt to force the company into administering Medicare's payment recovery program. The court instead has begun a constructive program for an exchange of information between the parties which Provident hopes will resolve the issue.

Total revenues for the fiscal quarter increased to $894,948, compared to $858,663 for the corresponding quarter last year. The company reported a net loss of $128,570, or a loss of 8 cents per share, for the quarter, compared to net income of $10,641 or earnings of 1 cent per share, for the quarter ended April 30, 1989.

EAST HANOVER, NJ (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - The Ultimate Corp. (NYSE:ULT) Friday reported an upswing in sales and a return to quarterly profits for its fourth quarter ended April 30, 1990.

According to the announcement made by Chairman and President Michael J. O'Donnell, there are strong indications that the company's new products are finding increased acceptance among target customers, especially for large systems. For the year ended April 30, the company reported a 5-percent increase in revenue, with a break-even bottom line.

O'Donnell commented, ''During fiscal 1990 we began to implement our new business focus on software and services. We finished the year with a yearly increase in revenue and a quarterly profit that canceled a loss from earlier in the year.

''We also have much-strengthened professional-service offerings, an expanded emphasis on applications and system-level software, maintenance and customer service and an impressive array of new hardware platforms.''

For the year ended April 30, the company reported revenue of $210 million with net income of $125,000, or 1 cent per share, compared with the previous year's revenue of $200 million with a net loss of $13 million, or $1.32 loss per share.

Fiscal 1990 results include a $3.1 million write-off, taken in the quarter ended Oct. 31, 1989, resulting from Ultimate's change from Tandem to Sequoia hardware platforms.

For the fourth quarter, revenue was $58 million with net income of $1.5 million, or 15 cents per share, compared with the previous year's fourth-quarter revenue of $55 million with net income of $3.6 million, or 37 cents per share.

Ultimate has maintained a strong balance sheet throughout fiscal- year 1990. At year-end, cash and cash equivalents were $23.7 million; working capital was $43.9 million; equity was $86.7 million.

In November 1989, a large shareholder had submitted a bid for Ultimate's shares, but a special commitee of Ultimate's board took the company off the market Feb. 16, 1990. The company incurred substantial expense in connection with the process.

O'Donnell added, ''Unfortunately our year suffered from a write-off last fall resulting from a change in products and from unanticipated expense associated with investment banking and legal services mid-year.''

Ultimate provides business solutions to companies of all sizes by integrating system-level software and applications software on hardware platforms from premier computer vendors such as Bull HN, Hewlett-Packard, IBM and Sequoia. The firm also provides education, training, consulting and field-maintenance services to customers across a wide range of vertical markets.

In addition to its domestic operations, Ultimate has subsidiaries in the United Kingdom, Canada, France and Australia.

KANSAS CITY, MO (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Oppenheimer Industries Inc. Friday reported a net loss of $988,864, or 23 cents per share, on revenues of $5,669,405 for the quarter ended April 30, 1990.

For the same period last year, Oppenheimer reported a loss of $881,203, or 21 cents per share, on revenues of $415,090.

Gary D. Hedberg, chief financial officer, said that the large increase in revenues was due to increased sales of real estate. The most significant transaction was the sale of an office building for $4.5 million.

In addition, Hedberg stated that the increase in the net loss was mainly a result of the interest expense associated with the increased indebtedness of the company.

Other factors include the expenses related to the discontinuance of the syndication, construction and insurance agency segments, and the nonrecurring expenditures associated with the completion of an agreement for the sale of a potentially controlling interest in the company. These factors offset the reductions that have been made in the normal administrative expenses.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Merus Capital Management's chief investment officer said that inflation, industrial capacity and trade figures released Friday indicate that the impact of weaker retail sales on second quarter GNP growth is expected to be somewhat offset by positive factors.

Harold C. ''Tim'' Warner, president of Merus Capital Management, noted that: ''Positive signals include a lower than anticipated rise in the consumer price index and the decline in the nation's trade deficit. With inflation in the 4 to 5 percent range, healthier trade numbers and strong industrial production, there may be some relief, albeit modest, from slack retail sales.''

Warner noted that, ''Relatively strong increases in industrial production during the past two months suggest an end to the inventory runoff that depressed reports on the economy earlier in the year. If inventory accumulation is occurring, the manufacturing sector can be expected to contribute to GNP growth in the second quarter.''

CLEVELAND (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - The parking operation at Port Columbus International Airport has embraced privatization.

The entire airport parking operation is now under the management of APCOA Inc., the world's largest airport parking firm.

APCOA previously had managed only the airport's shuttle parking facility after Port Columbus went through an RFQ (Request For Qualifications) and an RFP (Request For Proposals) process. APCOA's new contract for the terminal parking facilities became effective June 1, 1990.

''Privatization is a definite trend in airport parking,'' said Larry Hedrick, Airports Administrator at Port Columbus. ''After granting APCOA a trial run as manager of our shuttle lot, we have come to see that a private management company can benefit the parking facilities here.''

In the two years APCOA managed the airport's shuttle lot, revenues increased 165 percent.

As part of its five year management contract with the City of Columbus, APCOA is now responsible for the maintenance and revenue control of the 1,450 long-term and daily parking spaces surrounding the airport terminal, as well as the 2,300-space lot at the shuttle facility. APCOA will also contribute to major improvements such as the addition of a fifth exit lane at the terminal exit plaza, installation of state-of-the-art fee computers and new paving and striping at the shuttle lot. APCOA's contribution to these improvements will exceed a quarter million dollars.

David Baker, APCOA general manager at Port Columbus, noted that the transition in management of the parking operation ''went smoothly; there were no visible glitches from the customers' viewpoint. The changes APCOA will institute will be gradual and beneficial.''

Hedrick said no city employees were terminated as a result of the transition. ''Every city employee was offered another position, either at the airport or in a city department where their services were needed.''

The new staff at the terminal parking facility was hired by APCOA from the Columbus workforce. The employees have undergone an extensive training period in addition to on-the-job instruction.

CHICAGO (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - United Airlines argued Friday in a brief filed with the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) that it should be awarded Chicago-Tokyo non-stop rights based on its record as the most aggressive, capable and dedicated competitor in the Pacific Region.

United also pointed out that U.S.-Asia service benefits are most lacking in the interior region of the United States where American Airlines and Northwest Airlines are incumbent U.S. carriers and Japan Airlines is an expanding foreign presence.

''From the public-interest point of view, the competitive spur of United's entry into the interior region market would be extraordinarily effective.

''Allowing United to operate non-stop between its primary domestic hub, Chicago, and its Asian connecting complex at Tokyo would do far more to improve the competitive market structure, and would produce far more public benefits for the United States, than any other single proposal in this case,'' United argued.

The filing of briefs by applicants for new U.S.-Japan air service Friday constitutes the third major event in a five-step deliberative process. It follows the filing of exhibits and rebuttal exhibits in April and a three-week oral hearing which ended last month.

The fourth step will be the recommendation of new routes and carriers by the chief administrative-law judge handling the case, the Honorable John J. Mathias, expected on Aug. 3, 1990. The final step will be a review by the DOT and final awards of the new routes, expected in November.

In its filing Friday, United noted that Chairman and President Stephen M. Wolf had testified, ''United's stewardship of the former Pan American route system provides a textbook example of how to restore competitiveness to international transportation markets.''

REDWOOD CITY, CA (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Invitron Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:INVN) announced Friday that scientists working under the direction of Dr. Richard Berg at the University of Medicine & Dentistry of New Jersey have reported the results of a study investigating the wound healing effects of Protease Nexin-I, a human protein under development by Invitron.

In an abstract of their studies presented at the Third International Conference on the Molecular Biology and Pathology of Matrix in Philadelphia, the investigators reported that Protease Nexin-I promoted dermal wound healing as evidenced by increased matrix formation and wound strength.

''Protease Nexin-I clearly modulates early events in healing and represents a novel approach to wound therapy,'' said Berg, professor of biochemistry at the University of Medicine and Dentistry.

Protease Nexin-I belongs to a family of proteins called protease inhibitors. These compounds regulate the enzymatic breakdown of tissues, and plan an important role in wound healing, the formation of blood clots and preventions of inflammation.

Invitron believes that these results are the first to clearly demonstrate the beneficial effects of protease nexins in wound healing. Until now, new approaches to wound healing have focused on growth factors, substances which accelerate the process of healing by increasing the rate of cell growth. In contrast, Protease Nexin-I, appears to promote healing by improving the scaffolding upon which new cells grow. As such, it may represent an alternative or synergistic therapy to growth factors.

''While Invitron believes that the results of this study are encouraging, we caution that Protease Nexin-I has not been tested in humans,'' commented Dr. Joseph Feder, president and CEO of Invitron. ''The development of Protease Nexin-I will require substantial funding over a number of years, and further testing will be required before its therapeutic potential, if any, is know.

''We are, however, encouraged that our on-going efforts in this area will lead to novel protease inhibitors having important therapeutic properties.''

Invitron is currently conducting preclinical development studies on Protease Nexin-I in three therapeutic areas: wound healing, neurodegenerative disease, and anti-coagulant therapy. The company has developed a cell line which expresses Protease Nexin-I, and has made multi-gram quantities in its St. Louis manufacturing plant for studies by potential collaborators. The company has filed several patent applications on the protein and its method of preparation.

Invitron Corp. is engaged in the discovery, development and production of biopharmaceuticals. The company is developing proprietary products having potential application in the areas of wound healing, neurological and connective tissue disease, autoimmune disease and septic shock.

The company employs a broad array of skills in the production of mammalian cell-derived biopharmaceuticals for itself and others.

REDWOOD CITY, CA (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Invitron Corp. (NASDAQ:INVN) announced Friday that researchers at the Oregon Health Sciences University and the Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Portland, Ore., in collaboration with Invitron's proprietary products research staff, have reported the results of a study investigating a novel protein under development by Invitron.

In the study led by Dr. Halina Offner, associate professor at the Oregon Health Sciences University, and Dr. Arthur Vandenbark, career scientist at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center, administration of recombinant Immunomodulatory Lectin-1 (IML-1) prevented the clinical and histological signs of disease in an animal model for multiple sclerosis.

Results of the study are being published in the July 1990 issue of the Journal of Neuroimmunology (Vol. 28).

IML-1 belongs to a family of carbohydrate-binding proteins termed lectins, which are involved in cell-to-cell communication. Lectins are critical components in the process of lymphocyte homing, the mechanism by which disease-fighting white blood cells are directed out of blood vessels and into tissues.

IML-1 is thought to function in human pregnancy, where it may act to protect the fetus from ''rejection'' by the mother's immune system.

Invitron has developed a process for manufacturing gram quantities of recombinant IML-1 in E. coli for use in studies being conducted by outside collaborators. In those studies, recombinant IML-1 has demonstrated immunosuppressive activity in animal models for several autoimmune disorders and transplantation rejection.

''While Invitron believes that the results of this study are encouraging, it cautions that recombinant IML-1 has not been tested in humans,'' commented Dr. Joseph Feder, president and chief executive officer of Invitron.

''The development of recombinant IML-1 will require substantial funding over a number of years, and further testing will be required before its therapeutic potential is known. We are, however, pleased by the results seen to date.''

HOUSTON (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - One week before the official start of summer, Continental Airlines Friday announced a multi-million-dollar package of summer service improvements including the addition of 400 summer interns and more inflight amenities.

''Our research shows that what vacation travelers want most is a hassle-free airline trip,'' said John W. Nelson, executive vice president-marketing. ''Therefore we are making changes this summer that will make the airport and airline experience more enjoyable.''

Continental has hired 400 summer interns, dubbed ''Go-Getters,'' who will assist travelers at more than two dozen major airports. Attired in bright red shirts and khaki shorts, these temporary employees will help carry baggage, fetch a forgotten item, assist disabled travelers, and help airport agents with other special customer needs.

Customers will also see a change at curb-side check-in locations at major airports. Continental plans to have ''traffic managers'' to help alleviate vehicle congestion at the point where travelers are dropped off for their trip. Traffic managers will not try to shoo away cars, but will help organize and orchestrate vehicle activity in the standing zone.

Other Continental staff have been designated to assist customers in getting out of line at major airports. Surveys show that many travelers stand in line when they don't need to. Continental is adding more staff at ticket counters and gate podiums to speed up the check-in process.

On certain flights Continental will offer special summer fare, including root beer and Blue Bell ice cream. First-class customers will be served cookies baked fresh in flight.

Flight attendants have greater leeway to help resolve customer service discrepancies by issuing a voucher, the ''Customer CARE Certificate,'' good for a future purchase or OnePass mileage.

A children's inflight activity kit has been expanded and will be more widely available. Additionally, more domestic flights will feature inflight movies.

REDONDO BEACH, CA (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Marshall W. Novick, vice president and program manager for the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite Program at TRW Space & Technology Group, was awarded the NASA Public Service Medal Thursday in ceremonies at NASA Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

The award cited Novick for his ''outstanding management of the TRW Tracking and Data Relay Satellite System team resulting in the successful operational readiness of the Tracking and Data Relay System.''

Novick was one of three people to receive NASA Public Service Medals. These awards are granted to citizens who are not employees of the federal government for ''exceptional contributions to the engineering design and development or management coordination of programs related to the accomplishment of the mission of NASA.''

A TRW employee since 1963, Novick has been program manager for the TRW-built Tracking and Data Relay Satellites (TDRS) for the past two years. In this role, he directed all TRW activities leading to and including the successful launch and subsequent operation of TDRS-3 on Sept. 29, 1988 and TDRS-4 on March 13, 1989.

During Thursday's award presentations, NASA also recognized the TDRSS Project/Contractor team with a NASA Group Achievement Award.

NASA's Tracking & Data Relay Satellite System consists of a constellation of three satellites in geosynchronous orbit that look down on NASA's fleet of low earth-orbiting spacecraft and shuttles, tracking them worldwide and relaying two-way communications between them and mission control centers through a single TDRS ground station at White Sands, N.M.

Through the TDRS system, spacecraft in low earth orbit are able to communicate with Earth during 85 percent or more of each orbit. With the previous system of ground stations alone, such spacecraft were only able to communicate with earth for about 15 percent of each orbit.

TRW Space & Technology Group, based in Redondo Beach, is an operating group of Cleveland-based TRW Inc. The group has built more than 175 communications, defense and scientific spacecraft, developed over 200 advanced space instruments and integrated some 550 experiments into their host spacecraft.

OAKLEY, CA (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Contra Costa Water District (CCWD) and Oakley Water District (OWD) will break ground for a new water treatment facility on Thursday, June 21.

The public is invited to attend a groundbreaking ceremony from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the site. Look for a large tent to be erected southeast of the intersection of Neroly Road and Live Oak Avenue in Oakley, site of the new plant.

The water treatment plant will utilize state-of-the-art ozonation as a disinfectant and a coagulant aid. Ozonation is a treatment process that effectively reduces the formation of trihalomethanes (THMs), a carcinogenic byproduct of using chlorine as a disinfectant.

The process will require less than half the alum dosage used by conventional plants for coagulation. At this time, there are only 12 ozonation water treatment plants operating in the United States, with 15 more in the design stage.

A construction contract for $36,283,000 was awarded to Hoffman Construction Company of California on June 6. Total project costs will be around $50 million.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - The Department of Justice on Friday announced it won an important decision in its lawsuit against the Provident Life & Accident Insurance Co., bringing the department one step closer to the possible recovery of millions of dollars in Medicare overpayments.

The ruling, handed down yesterday in the Eastern District of Tennessee by Federal District Judge R. Allen Edgar, centers on amendments to the Medicare laws that made private insurance companies, rather than Medicare, the primary source of payment for medical care for employees and their spouses aged 65 and older (referred to as the working aged), and two other groups of beneficiaries.

Provident is a major group health insurer with headquarters in Chattanooga Tenn.

The Inspector General (IG) of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) estimates that such billing practices cost the taxpayers as much as

$1 billion a year. Last year, Medicare paid about $85 billion in benefits.

The Medicare overpayments in question were for services rendered to certain categories of Medicare beneficiaries that should have been paid for under employer group health plans insured by Provident. Although Provident was aware of the mistaken Medicare overpayments, it failed to inform Medicare and failed to pay claimants the full amounts due under its policies.

The court has ordered Provident to provide logs that it kept of amounts due Medicare and to identify relevant employer group health plans and beneficiaries. This information is necessary in order to determine the extent of the liability. The amount of damages to be paid by Provident remains to be determined.

The court also found employers, not Provident, liable for overpayments in those situations where Provident merely administered rather than insured plans.

''The Justice Department will continue its vigilant protection of the country's Medicare subscribers under the provisions enacted by Congress,'' said Stuart M. Gerson, assistant attorney general for the Civil Division. ''We will ensure that private insurance companies, and not Medicare, are the first to pay for medical care for those individuals who are covered by both plans.''

This decision is another important victory in the government's efforts to recover Medicare overpayments from group health insurers. Currently, there are on-going lawsuits involving Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan and the Traveler's Insurance Co. Last December, a federal judge in Detroit ruled against Blue Cross' arguments, which were virtually identical to Provident's.

That court also ordered the enforcement of a subpoena issued by the IG at HHS for Blue Cross' files. The litigation is continuing on the question of damages.

Last March, a federal judge in New Haven denied Traveler's motion to dismiss the suit and also ordered the company to produce its files for the HHS Inspector General.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - The Department of Justice's Office of Redress Administration (ORA) announced Friday that it has now sent out 23,000 letters of potential eligibility to individuals believed to be eligible for redress under Section 105 of the Civil Liberties Act of 1988.

The letter of potential eligibility notifies the individual that he or she is potentially eligible to receive a $20,000 redress payment, and requests that the recipient provide ORA with documentation confirming their identity and current address, in preparation for payment. A recipient's eligibility cannot be finalized, and no payment mailed to them, until the requested documentation has been received and reviewed. The office expects to have 25,000 letters of potential eligibility out by the end of June.

''We're doing everything we can to have 25,000 cases, the maximum payable in 1990, ready to go by early October,'' said Robert Bratt, Redress administrator. ''We know how long these people have waited for redress, and we want to be ready to make payments just as soon as the money is available in the new fiscal year. At this point, as we wait for documentation to be returned to us, community cooperation is critical.''

Those who have received letters of potential eligibility from ORA are encouraged to send the requested documents to the office as quickly as possible, so that their cases can be readied for payment. With the letter of potential eligibility, ORA provides individual instructions and a postage-paid return envelope. Those who have difficulty can call ORA's toll free Help Line for further instruction, at 800/395-4672 (TDD 800-727-1886), Monday through Friday, 9:30-5:30, Eastern time.

According to the Civil Liberties Act, ORA must endeavor to provide payments to eligible persons in the order of age, beginning with the oldest recipients or their surviving heirs. For this reason, the office has been processing cases and sending its letters of potential eligibility out to individuals in age order.

''All eligible persons born before Jan. 1, 1901, have now been contacted '' Bratt said. ''If you are over 90 years of age, and have never been contacted by ORA, we ask that you write to us immediately and let us know.'' Those born prior to 1901 who have never been contacted by ORA can write to the address given below. The most helpful information is full current name and address, name at the time of internment (if different), date of birth, and current phone number.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - William H. Bowen, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of First Commercial Corp. (NASDAQ, NMS:FCLR), announced Friday that FCC has acquired Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Memphis, Tenn. from the Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC), an agent of the U.S. government.

The RTC had been appointed receiver of Home Federal. Home Federal will begin business under FCC ownership on Monday, June 18, as First Commercial Bank N.A., of Memphis, an FDIC-insured national bank.

First Commercial Corp. is headquartered in Little Rock and is Arkansas' largest bank holding company. FCC, as of May 31, had total assets of $1.844 billion, total deposits of $1.625 billion, and total loans of $1.089 billion. It had eight Arkansas affiliate banks, including First Commercial Bank N.A., of Little Rock, the state's largest bank.

FCC also owns 50 percent of Security National Bank and Trust Company of Norman, Okla.

First Commercial Corp.'s financial performance has historically been characterized by well above-average capital strength and favorable levels of profitability.

In 1989, FCC produced record earnings results. Historical highs were established for net income, earnings per share, return on assets, and return on equity. Likewise, the highest levels in FCC's history were attained for year-end total assets, total loans, total deposits, and stockholders' equity.

FCC's market capitalization (common shares outstanding times common stock price per share) surpassed $150 million during 1989. Return on assets of 1.16 percent and return on equity of 15.23 percent for FCC in 1989 exceed the industry standards of 1 percent return on assets and 15 percent return on equity as definitions of quality performance.

FCC's relative level of equity capital substantially exceeds the average for bank holding companies of comparable size nationwide.

FCC acquired Home Federal through an asset purchase and liability assumption agreement with the RTC which involved a purchase premium of $1,156,000. FCC acquired all Home Federal deposits. Its purchase of assets is subject to a variety of putback options, the periods of which extend for up to 18 months.

Given the nature of the asset putback rights granted, FCC anticipates that it will ultimately retain no non-performing Home Federal assets upon final completion of the transfer.

FCC's acquisition, as a joint venture partner, of Security National Bank and Trust Company of Norman, Okla. in 1987 involved comparable asset putback provisions. That joint venture has been successful from the outset, and positively impacted FCC's earnings in its first year.

Home Federal, as of March 31, had total assets of $160 million, total deposits of $167 million and total loans, net of reserves, of $77 million. Home has been an active single family mortgage lender in the Memphis market. It has seven branches, four in Memphis and three others in rural Tennessee communities east of Memphis.

FCC's expectation is that it will substantially expand First Commercial of Memphis' single family mortgage lending operation. The residential mortgage loan product line, network of realtor and investor relationships, and mortgage servicing capabilities are all expected to be broadened.

FCC brings to Memphis considerable experience and expertise in the residential mortgage business. First Commercial Mortgage Co., a subsidiary of First Commercial Bank, N.A., of Little Rock, FCC's lead bank is Arkansas' largest mortgage banking company and is among the largest 150 mortgage companies nationwide, with a total mortgage servicing portfolio of $1.75 billion.

Memphis residential mortgage activities will be conducted as a branch of First Commercial Mortgage Co. under the name First Commercial Mortgage Co. of Memphis.

In addition to First Commercial Bank N.A., of Little Rock, FCC's Arkansas affiliates are First National Bank of Conway, First National Bank of Russellville, Morrilton Security Bank, N.A., Security Bank of Harrison, Benton State Bank, First Commercial Bank of Lonoke County, and Arkansas Bank and Trust Company of Hot Springs.

FCC is also a 50 percent joint venture partner with Arvest Bank Group of Bentonville in ownership of Security National Bank and Trust Company of Norman.

Arvest is owned by the family of Sam Walton, founder of Wal-Mart Stores Inc. and a member of First Commercial Bank of Little Rock's National Advisory Board. Memphian Kemmons Wilson, founder of Holiday Inns Inc. is also a member of the National Advisory Board.

DALLAS (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - American Healthcare Management Inc. (ASE:AHI) has retained The First Boston Corp. to assist it in preliminary evaluation of various capital restructuring alternatives.

Commenting on the retention of First Boston, Steven L. Volla, chief executive officer since January 1990, observed that when the company emerged from bankruptcy in December 1989, its capital structure was established on the basis of forecasts and assumptions (developed by a prior board of directors and management team) which did not reflect a realistic assessment of the present operating environment for American Healthcare.

Volla noted that the objective of a possible restructuring would be to reduce the financial risk of the current highly leveraged capital structure and provide the operating flexibility required to improve returns in the business.

American Healthcare Management Inc., headquartered in Dallas, owns or leases 17 hospitals in 10 states with approximately 2,203 licensed beds. AHM's common stock is listed on the American Stock Exchange under the symbol AHI.

DAYTON, OH (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Philips Industries Inc. (NYSE: PHL) and Tomkins PLC (NASDAQ: TOMKY) Friday jointly announced that they have executed a definitive agreement providing for the acquisition by Tomkins of Philips pursuant to a merger in which all outstanding shares of Philips common stock will be converted into $18.50 per share in cash, or a total of approximately $550 million.

The acquisition price represents a premium of approximately 32 percent over the closing price of Philips common shares on the New York Stock Exchange of $14.00 per share on June 4, 1990, the day prior to the public announcement that Philips and Tomkins had executed an agreement in principle providing for the acquisition.

The acquisition will be structured as a cash merger of Philips with a wholly owned subsidiary of Tomkins and will not include a tender offer. The Board of Directors of Philips has determined that the merger is fair to and in the best interests of the shareholders of Philips and has approved and adopted the merger agreement and the transactions contemplated thereby.

The merger agreement is subject to certain conditions, including approval of the merger by the shareholders of Philips and approval of the acquisition and certain related matters by the shareholders of Tomkins.

It is currently contemplated that an extraordinary general meeting of Tomkins shareholders will be held on July 9, 1990, and a special meeting of Philips shareholders will be held in late August, to vote upon such matters, and that the merger, if approved, will be consummated promptly following the Philips special meeting, subject to the terms and conditions of the merger agreement. The merger agreement provides that Philips shareholders will be entitled to receive payment for their shares 10 days (or in certain circumstances up to 31 days) following the consummation of the merger.

Tomkins is financing the acquisition through an underwritten offering of ordinary shares by way of rights to Tomkins' existing shareholders in the United Kingdom.

Tomkins has entered into an underwriting agreement with Barclays de Zoete Wedd Limited, London, pursuant to which the underwriter has agreed, subject to certain conditions, to purchase any ordinary shares not purchased by holders of rights pursuant to the rights offering.

Tomkins' obligations under the merger agreement are conditioned upon the listing of the ordinary shares on The International Stock Exchange, London and all the ordinary shares being purchased by holders of rights, by the underwriters or otherwise.

The ordinary shares will not be registered under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and the rights offering will not be made to persons in the United States absent an applicable exemption from the registration requirements of such Act.

The merger agreement permits Philips to continue its regular quarterly dividends of $.15 per share until consummation of the merger, provided that the record date for the next regular quarterly dividend may not be earlier than August 8, 1990.

The merger agreement also provides that the Board of Philips may provide information to other parties in response to unsolicited requests for such information, and may participate in discussions and negotiations with any such parties, concerning a merger, sale of a substantial portion of Philips' assets, purchase or sale of shares of its capital stock or similar transaction involving Philips, if the Board determines in its good faith judgment that such action is appropriate in furtherance of the best interests of Philips' shareholders.

Philips has directed its officers and other appropriate personnel to cooperate with and be reasonably available to consult with any such party. Philips' financial advisor is Salomon Brothers Inc. and Tomkins' financial advisor is Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

SUNNYVALE, CA (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - A joint project between Identix Inc. (NASDAQ:IDXX)(PSE:IDX), Groupe BULL, and ASCOM AG was announced Friday in Barcelona, Zurich and Sunnyvale.

This multinational program will design and produce transaction terminals incorporating smart cards and biometric fingerprint identification.

Identix is the leading manufacturer of electronic finger scanning systems for identity verification and security applications. Groupe BULL is the top European firm in data processing and smart card applications, and ASCOM is the major Swiss-based telecommunications technology company.

The agreement between the three firms calls for the development and marketing of transaction terminals utilizing BULL smart card readers supplied by its Spanish manufacturing subsidiary, TELESINCRO, and Identix biometric fingerprint recognition technology supplied through its European partner, ASCOM.

Randy Fowler, Identix president, said that the two-year agreement provides for the development and sale of 5,000 fingerprint recognition subsystems. He estimates the contract value to Identix will exceed $3 million over the two-year period.

''We view this acceptance of our technology by two prestigious European firms as endorsement of the technology leadership Identix has established in biometrics,'' Fowler commented.

The concept behind the products is to store personal identification information, including digital fingerprint data, on the smart card. The Identix fingerprint recognition device, built into the transaction terminal, will instantly confirm the identity of the individual by comparing the actual fingerprint with that stored digitally in the smart card.

The terminals will be used in retail credit applications, portable identification systems, and for access control. Announcing Ascom's participation in the venture, a spokesperson said the products ''will lead the market and set new standards in security, performance and price.''

Identix, located in Sunnyvale, designs, manufactures and markets a family of identity verification systems that combine high accuracy with user friendliness. These systems are used in a wide range of security applications in the public and private sectors.

NEW YORK (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Strings, Ltd. (NASDAQ:STGS), the nation's only retail gift chain specializing in items priced under $10, Friday reported that it expects to open four new stores in the August-October period -- a 44 percent increase in the chain's size.

Three of the sites will be in high traffic mall/shopping centers: a 1,200 square foot unit in the Freehold Raceway Mall; a new Wilmorite Inc. regional mall in Freehold, N.J., a 1,400 square foot unit in the CrossRoad Shopping Center, White Plains NY; and a 950 square foot unit in the Newport Center, a Melvin Simon & Associates project in Jersey City, N.J. The fourth store is a 1,200 square foot unit slated for the Myrtle Avenue Shopping District (Ridgewood, N.Y.).

''With the momentum of these new leases, and two other stores opened earlier in the year, we are on target with our plan to open up to eight stores in the current fiscal year,'' said Richard Karp, Strings' president.

''Our first mall location opened in February 1990 at the New Rochelle Mall. Based on the exceptional results of that store, we expect that our mall/shopping center locations will predominant our store mix as we expand throughout the Northeast,'' he added.

Mr. Karp also reported that the Company expects to report more than a 60 percent increase in sales for the first quarter ended May 5, 1990 compared to the comparable quarter a year earlier. Gains in comparable store sales sales of stores a year or more, contributed "handsomely to the sales increase," according to Mr. Karp.

At the end of the first quarter, Strings operated 10 stores, four more than a year earlier. Recently the Company closed a store opened last December at Broadway and 73rd Street in Manhattan because of structural defects in the Ansonia Hotel building.

Strings, Ltd. (NASDAQ:STGS) is the nation's only retail gift chain specializing in items price under $10. The Company, which has nine Metropolitan New York stores in business, residential and suburban shopping areas is positioned for 25 percent annualized growth in the next few years as it sets the foundation for more rapid expansion.

ANAHEIM, CALIF. (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Distributed Logic Corp. (NASDAQ: DLOG) Friday announced quarterly results for the second quarter of its fiscal 1990 year.

Consolidated revenues for the three months ended April 10, 1990, totaled $12,151,376, a 6.6 per cent decrease from the $13,013,610 reported for the second quarter of the previous year.

The company reported a nominal net profit for the current period of $3,455 vs. a profit of $404,019 in the prior year's comparable quarter. On a per share basis, this amounted to a break-even profit per share for 1990, as compared to a profit of 15 cents in 1989.

Glenn Salley, DILOG chairman commented that: ''Our bottom line second quarter results were disappointing and below our internal plan, however they do reflect operating improvement over fiscal 1989. For the quarter, our operating profits were $775,548 versus $621,659 during fiscal 1989.

''These numbers reflect continued competitive pressures on our gross margins and a less than desirable product mix,'' he added. ''Reduced gross margins were offset by a $1 million reduction in overall operating expenses over the prior period.

''Our continued high level of interest bearing debt significantly impacted the quarter as interest expense increased from $274,917 in fiscal 1989 to $538,058 in the current fiscal quarter,'' he said. ''An additional below-the-line impact was foreign currency translation losses of $179,776 for the quarter as a result of the significant rise in the Swiss Franc against the U.S. dollar.

FREMONT, CA (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - DSP TECHNOLOGY INC. (NASDAQ:DSPT DSPTU) announced Friday that net income for the first quarter of fiscal 1991 ended April 30 was $54,000, or 3 cents per share, on net sales of $1,241,000.

This compares to net income of $106,000, or 5 cents per share, on net sales of $1,662,000 for last year's first quarter.

F. Gil Troutman, president, said that the decline in sales and income reflected a backlog of about $700,000 at the beginning of the year. ''We are pleased to report that recently-received contracts have nearly tripled DSP's backlog to more than $2 million at April 30,'' he said.

The executive noted that the backlog includes a $1.2 million order from a major domestic automotive manufacturer for two turn-key data acquisition systems for crash tests. ''We expect at least one of these systems to be shipped during this fiscal year,'' he said.

Troutman explained that the company plans to build sales of DSP's automotive products - data acquisition equipment for crash testing and recently developed, proprietary systems for on-line, real-time combustion analysis - to supplement the traditional government-funded laboratory sector of the business.

He added that DSP's new combustion analysis systems, which are currently undergoing beta testing by two major domestic automotive manufacturers, are expected to be ready for commercial introduction later this year. He said that these new systems are targeted to the more than 2,000 potential installations engaged in the development of the next generation of internal combustion power plants.

DSP Technology Inc. designs, manufactures and markets data acquisition systems which enable its customers to capture data from occurrences lasting from millionths of a second to several days.

NEW YORK (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - S&P assigns its 'A-1' rating to Nissan Capital of America, Inc.'s $3.0 billion commercial paper program.

Nissan Capital was recently established to centralize capital markets activities for the Nissan companies in the U.S., a portion of which had previously been conducted by Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp.(senior debt single-'A'-plus).

Nissan Capital will provide wholesale and retail auto financing and also fund the working capital and general corporate financing needs of the Nissan group companies in the U.S.

The rating is based on a keepwell agreement provided by the Japanese parent, Nissan Motor Co., Ltd., and reflects the strength of the consolidated Nissan group.

The paper is also guaranteed by Nissan Motor Corp U.S.A., the group's North American holding company. Nissan holds an improving number-two position in the Japanese motor vehicle market. Models introduced over the past two years have been well received and have enhanced the firm's overall image. Sales in the U.S. are rebounding from early 1988's depressed levels despite intense competition.

However, the success of Nissan's entry in the U.S. luxury car market with the introduction of the Infiniti late last year remains uncertain. In Western Europe, Nissan is the leading Japanese vehicle maker.

Strong market positions globally lend stability to earnings. Currently, strong demand in Japan is offsetting a weak European market and low profitability in the U.S. For fiscal year ended March 31, consolidated net earnings were virtually flat at Y116 billion (about $740 million).

The company's high reported debt usage reflects the consolidation of finance companies and is partially offset by a large amount of liquid assets, S&P said.

INDIANAPOLIS (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - INB Financial Corp. (NASDAQ:INBF) and Peoples Savings Bank of Evansville announced today the Indiana Department of Financial Institutions has approved of Peoples' conversion to a stock, state-chartered commercial bank.

The definitive agreement, signed in February 1990, calls for Peoples to convert from an Indiana-chartered, FDIC-insured mutual savings bank to a stock, state-chartered commercial bank and then merge with an INBF subsidiary. Following the merger, Peoples will change its name to INB Banking Co., Southwest.

The Department of Financial Institutions approved a distribution of $5.9 million to Peoples' depositors based upon adjusted surplus to reflect current market values on certain assets.

The announcement of the revised proposal was made by INBF Chairman Thomas M. Miller in Indianapolis and by Peoples President Jerry N. Crawford in Evansville.

According to Crawford, ''In connection with the conversion, Peoples will pay each eligible depositor a pro-rata share of $5.9 million rather than the $7.4 million originally announced in February -- with adjustments having been made to reflect current market values. This is only the first step in the regulatory process, but it represents an important one in the completion of our merger with INB Financial Corp., anticipated to be finalized during the fourth quarter of this year.''

The new agreement also calls for Peoples to increase to $8.7 million (from $7.4 million) the aggregate value of the stock being issued as part of the conversion. As a result of this change, 435,000 shares of Peoples stock will be offered at $20 per share.

Miller explains, ''This increase will assure that Peoples will be adequately capitalized as a stock bank upon its conversion. These shares will be offered first to eligible depositors, and INB will be obligated to purchase any of the shares not subscribed by those depositors.''

Located in the city of Evansville, Peoples is the fourth largest bank in Vanderburgh County. It operates seven facilities in the county and holds a 4.7 percent share of the $2.5 billion in total county deposits. The Peoples Savings Bank was founded in 1870 and obtained full commercial bank and trust powers in 1981.

INB Financial Corp., headquartered in Indianapolis, is Indiana's largest, independent multi-bank holding company. The corporation is parent of INB National Bank, Indianapolis; INB National Bank, Northwest, Lafayette and INB Banking Co., Jeffersonville. The merger with CSB Inc., parent of Chesterton State Bank in Chesterton, Ind., was finalized May 31. Still pending are the agreements with Peoples Mid-Illinois Corp. DENVER (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Compliance Recycling Industries Inc. (NASDAQ:CRIK) Friday reported that for the first two months of fiscal 1991 ending May 31, the company had sales of some $311,138 in equipment, which compares to equipment sales of some $432,295 for the entire fiscal year ending March 31, 1990.

Jeffrey L. Stanich Sr., chariman of the board of Compliance Recycling Industries Inc., attributed the extremely successful sales results to the efforts of Thomas J. Reynolds, Compliance Recycling's new president. Reynolds, who was named president of the company in January, 1990, came to Compliance with an extensive background in selling and marketing systems similar to that of Compliance Recycling.

In making the announcement, Stanich noted that the indications are that for the first quarter of 1991, which will end June 30, the company should report some $750,000 in equipment sales. ''Furthermore, we anticipate that deliveries and other sales during the second quarter will propel our company to its most profitable year in its history,'' Stanich stated.

NEW YORK (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Although Harris & Harris Group does not as a matter of policy publicly forecast earnings, the company thinks it appropriate to comment on the coverage which it received in the current issue of Business Week magazine dated June 25.

This article sighted interest in H&H Group's stock as a result of the company's acquisition for cash on April 12, of a 50-percent interest in Ag Services of America Inc., and forecast sharply increasing earnings per share in 1990 and 1991 for the company as a whole.

The acquisition of the 50-percent interest in Ag Services was in fact a major step for H&H Group: In the fiscal year ended Feb. 28, the audited results for Ag Services included revenues of $21,236,274, pre-tax earnings of $681,277 and after-tax earnings of $425,776, vs. revenues of $9,861,000 pre-tax earnings of $540,000 and after-tax earnings of $306,000 for H&H Group in the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Moreover, Ag Services's revenues and earnings have grown very rapidly since its founding less than 5 years ago on $300.00 (three hundred dollars) in capital, which was all of the capital that had ever been invested in Ag Services prior to H&H Group's investment in Ag Services.

However, H&H Group intends to account for its interest in Ag Services under the equity method of accounting. Under the equity method, H&H Group will not include any portion of Ag Services's revenues in H&H Group's revenues and will include only 50-percent of Ag Services's after-tax earnings in H&H Group's pre-tax earnings.

H&H Group will then record income taxes against its 50 percent share of Ag Services's after-tax earnings, even though such taxes would be actually payable only upon sale by H&H group of shares of Ag Services, which is not contemplated and may never occur. Thus, the earnings generated by Ag Services will only partially be reflected in the reported earnings of H&H Group under the current arrangement. Moreover, as previously noted in H&H Group's report to shareholders for the quarter ended Macrh 31, the results of Harris & Harris of Kentucky, the company's larger insurance brokerage subsidiary, ''were aided in the first quarter by the timing of the receipt of a portion of its revenues, which will make its earnings' and revenue comparisons in the second quarter more difficult. Any contributions to revenues and earnings from a new association program on which it has been working for some time would commence after July 1.''

As previously reported in the fuist quarter ended March 31, H&H Group reported after-tax earnings of $105,000 or 1 cent per share on revenues of $2,990,000.

The Company reported a net loss of $246,484, or $0.04 per share, for the third quarter ended April 30, 1990, compared to net income of $41,215, or $0.01 per share, for the same period last year.

Commenting on the results, Frank Drohan, President and Chief Operating Officer of ALFA INTERNATIONAL CORP., stated, ''The significant decrease in revenues during the third quarter was primarily attributable to reduced volume in our videocassette business and corresponding lower gross margins. ''Our corporate strategy is to focus on our TYVEKR division which is continuing to show increased volume and profits. Our recent contracts with Rand McNally and Saatchi & Saatchi (Burger King) have significantly increased TY-BREAKERS'TM recognition and we will continue to concentrate our attention on this profitable area.''

--Appoint Unisys as a ''Novell Authorized Education Center'' (NAEC), able to provide NetWare certification training to Unisys service technicians and engineers.

Certification of Unisys as an authorized NSO and NAEC complements a recent Unisys announcement that it would offer comprehensive LAN services to customers.

As an authorized NSO, Unisys is able to support NetWare customers around-the-clock. That assistance ranges from providing hot-line support to answer a customer's question regarding a Novell product, to providing fast, on-site repairs for mission-critical applications. As an NSO, Unisys has electronic access to current technical information about Novell's products. To ensure that timely support is provided, calls will be prioritized and automatically escalated within established time frames.

The NAEC program ensures that highly qualified Unisys service representatives provide the NSO support. ''As part of our program to train Certified Network Engineers (CNEs) for Unisys CONNECT, we have included the requirement that our service representatives also complete Novell training as Certified NetWare Engineers,'' Gazerwitz said.

Unisys has had an OEM relationship with Novell since 1982, when it became one of Novell's first major customers. At that time, Unisys acquired the rights to resell the native NetWare system as the UserNet system.

Historically, Unisys has released NetWare derived products with value-added features after Novell has released corresponding core products. The UserNet system is optimized for Unisys Personal Workstation2 (PW2) family, with a key feature being support for SCSI disk drives.

The new Unisys strategy is to offer, wherever possible, standard NetWare products to its customers. Unisys will continue to work closely with Novell to provide support for key PW2 features. Currently released Unisys offerings include the Entry Level System (ELS) II UserNet version 2.15 (v2.15), Advanced UserNet v2.15 and System Fault Tolerant UserNet v.215, with styles for the three offerings accommodating both 3.5-inch and 5.25-inch disk drives. Unisys will begin shipping NetWare 386 v3.1 later this summer.

Novell announced April 30 that Unisys would participate in its ''independent manufacturing support program,'' in which Novell assists Unisys during product development and testing stages, and certifies that NetWare runs successfully on new Unisys MS-DOS based products.

Novell is the leading independent provider of open high-performance systems software products. The company's NetWare network operating system has become a standard for personal computer-based local area networks.

Unisys Corp. is a $10 billion manufacturer of commercial information systems, defense systems and related services. Unisys has approximately 80,000 employees and 60,000 customers in more than 100 countries.

CUYAHOGA HEIGHTS, OH (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - American Steel & Wire

Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:RODS) today declared a special cash dividend of $3.25 per share on common stock payable on June 29, 1990, to stockholders of record as of June 24, 1990.

The company also announced that it closed on $95 million of new credit facilities with a group of financial institutions including Security Pacific Business Credit Inc., Sanwa Business Credit Corp., State Bank of South Australia and CIGNA Investments Inc. In addition to the special cash dividend, proceeds of the new financing will be used to refinance certain existing indebtedness and to finance the company's working capital and capital expenditure requirements.

The company had earlier indicated that it was contemplating a special cash dividend of up to $4.25 per share.

Thomas N. Tyrrell, president and chief executive officer, said, ''We set the dividend at $3.25 per share because we determined that a dividend in this amount would both establish a reasonable return for our stockholders on their investment and preserve for the company sufficient working capital to support our anticipated sales growth and our ongoing operating needs. As a result of our dividend and the related refinancing, we have reaffirmed our commitments to our stockholders (who include all our employees), our suppliers, our customers, and the communities in which we operate.''

NEW YORK (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - S&P CreditWire 6/15/90 -- Uniroyal Goodrich Tire Co. and UGTC Capital Corp.'s single-'B'-minus subordinated debt ratings are withdrawn and removed from S&P CreditWatch.

The ratings were placed on Watch with positive implications on Oct. 2, 1989, following its agreement to be acquired by unrated, French-based Michelin Group, a leading worldwide tire producer.

About $415 million of debt is affected.

The ratings are withdrawn because S&P is unable to obtain adequate information about Michelin's current and future operating and financial strategies.

Creditors should benefit from the acquisition by Michelin; however, a precise rating cannot be determined. S&P has analyzed publicly available information about Michelin and has also assessed the likely relationship with Uniroyal Goodrich, which is to be run as a stand alone subsidiary.

It is not likely that credit quality would be sufficiently enhanced to raise the ratings beyond speculative grade, S&P concluded.

NEW ORLEANS (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - First Commerce Corp. (NASDAQ:FCOM) announced Friday that, as a result of internal reviews, its assets classified as nonperforming will increase over levels reported at the end of the prior quarter and the end of the second quarter of 1989.

First Commerce's results for this quarter will include a provision for loan losses higher than both last quarter and the second quarter of last year.

Assets classified as nonperforming are expected to increase approximately $14 million from the end of the previous quarter and $6 million from the end of the second quarter in 1989. The primary cause of the increase is the placement on nonaccrual status of several credits at the New Orleans bank. It is anticipated that nonperforming assets will be approximately 3.40 percent of loans at the end of this quarter.

The total provision for loan losses is expected to be approximately $12 million for the second quarter. This compares to a provision of $8 million last quarter and $6 million during the second quarter of last year. The current quarter's provision is reflective of the continued weakness in our economy and the resulting deterioration of asset quality in two of our markets, New Orleans and Alexandria. Since net charge-offs are expected to be in the $5 million range this quarter, which is substantially less than the provision, the allowance for future loan losses will increase.

First Commerce's Chief Financial Officer, Michael A. Flick, stated that ''These developments will result in earnings which are lower than we had expected. Staying ahead of such problems is critical to our strategy and our credibility with the investment community. It is important that we anticipate and plan for any potential weakness as soon as we detect it so that the financial statements reflect current market conditions.''

First Commerce's second quarter earnings, which are scheduled to be released on July 12, 1990, are expected to be in the range of 35 cents to 40 cents per common share. Earnings per share was 62 cents in the prior quarter and 58 cents in the second quarter of 1989. Net interest income remains stable this quarter. Additionally, noninterest income growth continues at rates similar to those in the prior several quarters, and growth of operating expense remains consistent with the previous quarter. These factors will reduce the effect of the higher provision for loan losses.

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. (JUNE 15) BUSINESS WIRE - Medical Nutrition Inc., (NASDAQ:MENU) Friday announced first quarter revenues and earnings.

For the three months ended April 30, revenues were $610,785 as compared to $476,705 for the comparable period in 1989 representing an increase of approximately 28 percent.

Net income for the quarter was $101,480 as compared to $103,186 for the comparable period in 1989. Net operating income (before interest) for the period was $63,557 as compared to $91,240.

Gans, president of Medical Nutrition Inc. stated that the higher revenues reflect increased sales of its medical food products and initial sales of its Nutrition Plus program resulting from its January seminar in Boston.

On the other hand, Gans explained that ''lower profits resulted from significantly higher costs for its medical foods which were not passed on to customers.''

Gans also added ''that in the first quarter of 1990 Medical expended approximately $15,000 towards further research and development. In view of the dramatic changes in the weight loss industry, arising in large part from adverse publicity, those weight management programs emphasizing medically supervised weight management programs with supporting clinical data, such as Nutrition Plus, appear to be the type of program that will be very attractive to persons seeking to manage their weight in the next decade,'' added Gans.

Medical Nutrition is engaged in the development and marketing of medically supervised weight management programs emphasizing disease prevention and health programs.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) - Japanese reseachers have succeeded in creating ball lightning in an outdoor test for the first time in the world, using a microwave oven, it was reported Friday.

Professor Yoshihiko Otsuki of Tokyo's Waseda University said a microwave oven with an output of two kilowatts, attached to a tube of copper wire mesh, had produced a luminous ball two to three centimeters (0.8 inch to 1.2 inches) in diameter.

The ball was white at first but changed color to a dazzling orange while floating along the copper wire for about two minutes, he said.

Ball lightning is a rare form of lightning consisting of luminous balls that move along solid objects or float in the air.

Prof. Otsuki is to announce the results of his experiments at the second international ball lightning symposium to be held in Hungary from June 26.

MARSEILLES (JUNE 15) - A 25-year-old French woman early Friday gave birth to a baby boy at the Mediterranean Cap d'Agde coast in the country's first underwater birth in the sea.

It was the second underwater birth for Brigitte Monteil, who had already been delivered of a girl in a water pool in Lyons in 1988.

The mother-to-be awaited the start of contractions in a tent on the beach. When the first signs of labor began she walked into the sea where the child was born at 5.47 a.m. local time (0347 Gmt) 1.50 metres under water.

''It's over, here he (Jonathan) is,'' she cried when the boy was born after she repeatedly dipped under water. A children's doctor, a gynocologist as well as a sports teacher attended preparations for the delivery.

Divers from Cap d'Agde had administered ''technical assistance'', one assistant said. He said that the water had a temperature of 16 degrees centigrade and the weather conditions had been ''ideal''.

PARIS (JUNE 15) - French Economy Minister Pierre Beregovoy on Thursday stopped the acquisition of a 52 percent stake in French group Pathe Cinema by Italian industrialist Giancarlo Paretti.

The minister had decided "to exercise his right to adjourn the operation," the economy ministry said in a statement because it was felt that "the planned operation was such as to call into question public order."

Mr. Paretti already holds a 46 percent stake in Pathe Cinema and is seeking to acquire a further 52 percent from the Rivaud group.

Mr. Beregovoy had told parliament on June 7 that he had asked the justice, interior and defence ministries to give him any available information on Mr. Paretti's bid, and had also discussed it with the French stock exchange authorities.

He also said that when Mr. Paretti's group first came up with a proposal to acquire Pathe-Cinema last year "doubts were raised on the real origin of the funds financing the acquisition," but "enquiries have not made it possible to confirm or eliminate these doubts."

Mr. Beregovoy said on June 7 it was possible that he would take a decision based on "my own personal conviction. The need to protect the investor in all circumstances and against all manipulation will dictate my decision."

TAIPEI (JUNE 15) - The worst rioting in Taiwan's history, dubbed the "Two-28 Incident" and a taboo for more than four decades, would be included in high school history textbooks, an education official said here Friday.

A 100-word summary of the incident, which had left "painful memories" to people on the island, would be contained in the textbooks from next school year to serve as a "lesson" for posterity, said Tseng Chi-chun, director of the National Institute for Compilation and Translation under the Education Ministry.

For some reason or another, the incident -- an important event in the history of Taiwan after the end of Japanese occupation -- has been missing from history textbooks, he said.

"But history will soon be history," Mr. Tseng said.

For more than four decades, the "Two-28 incident" has been a bone of contention between native Taiwanese and mainland Chinese who fled to the island with the Nationalists in 1949 after the communists won a civil war on the Chinese mainland.

The incident broke out on February 28, 1947, 16 months after Taiwan was restored to China after 50 years of Japanese occupation, when two Nationalist agents fired into a crowd protesting the arrest of a woman for selling untaxed cigarettes in Taipei, according to researchers.

During the next two weeks of rioting all over the island, Taiwanese killed hundreds of mainland Chinese immigrants and seized control of government buildings to demand reforms in the corrupt government of then-governor general Chen Yi, the researchers said.

Troops called in from the mainland quelled the riots, killing thousands of Taiwanese. Mr. Chen was later executed on the mainland before his intended defection to the communist camp, they said.

The Nationalist government had played down the "Two-28 Incident" in the past 40 years to avoid what some officials said was "re-opening the wounds of history" and fueling ethnic discrimination.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (JUNE 15) - West Germany had a balance of payments surplus of one billion Deutsche marks (588.2 million dollars) in April, according to provisional figures published by the Bundesbank Friday.

This compared with a March deficit of 1.29 billion Deutsche marks (758.8 million dollars).

The improved showing was largely due to a steep fall in the long-term capital deficit, from 15.2 billion Deutsche marks (8.95 billion dollars) to 7.1 billion (4.17 billion dollars).

Foreign investors bought a net 1.1 billion Deutsche marks worth of West German bonds in April, against net sales of 5.3 billion the previos month.

West German investors meanwhile bought less shares abroad, down to 4.8 billion Deutsche marks from 4.9 billion in March.

The short-term capital deficit fell from 2.25 billion Deutsche marks in March to 511 million in April.

The overall capital deficit fell from 17.45 billion Deutsche marks in March to 7.59 billion in April.

COPENHAGEN (JUNE 15) - Denmark's second largest bank, a home loan society and an insurance firm have decided to merge to form the country's first "financial supermarket" offering such a wide range of services.

Under the deal agreed Thursday, Unibank, homeloan company Nykredit and insurance company Tryg will complete the merger by 1992, creating a company which will control almost a third of the Danish financial market, with 16,100 employees and funds totalling 39.1 billion kroner (six billion dollars).

The three decided to merge to compete more effectively with foreign groups which will be operating in Denmark once the European single market takes effect in 1993.

Initially, an umbrella holding will be set up in January next year under which the three groups will retain their independence but will offer each other's products and jointly develop new ones.

The Danish consumer's association has expressed concern over what it says will be a virtual monopoly, limiting consumers' choice in many financial operations.

But Danish Industry Minister Ann-Birgitte Lundholt and central bank governor Erik Hoffmeyer have welcomed the move.

Dansk Bank, the country's leading financil group, with capital of 22.7 billion kroner (3.4 billion dollars), has said it wants to offer a wider range of products in the future through cooperation with Kreditforeningen Denmark, the country's leading home loan company.

But it has stressed that this would be cooperation, and not a merger. The Dansk Bank already controls an insurance company, Phoenix, along with insurance group Hafnia.

LONDON (JUNE 15) - British inflation has made its sharpest gain in more than eight years, climbing to an annual rate of 9.7 percent for the year ending in May, the Central Statistical Office (CSO) said here Friday.

It said retail prices in May had risen by 0.9 percent over the April level, exceeding analyst's forecasts of 0.6 percent and giving the largest jump in year-on-year inflation since March 1982 when it was 10.4 percent.

The Treasury said the jump in inflation was unwelcome and promised to keep a tight rein on monetary policy.

Government efforts to control money supply and consumer spending have for the past several years hinged mostly on high interest rates. The base lending rate in Britain currently stands at 15 percent.

"Inflation is too high and we need to get it down, and monetary policy will be aimed at doing that," a Treasury spokesman said.

The jump was "unwelcome but partly reflects the delayed effects of the budget excise duty measures," the spokesman added.

The CSO said the "most notable" price increases were those for food, housing costs, alcoholic drinks and tobocco. Some of those rises were expected after Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major announced an increase in excise duties in March.

British shares and the pound fell slightly on the announcement, with the Footsie 100-share index dropping 7.9 points compared with a fall on the day of 1.4 points prior to the announcement.

The pound was also off, dropping to 1.7065 dollars from 1.71 dollars before the figures were released. It also fell to 2.8882 Deutsche marks from 2.8959.

The government's preferred measure of inflation, the underlying rate which does not take account of the new local tax, the poll tax, and mortgage payments, also rose to seven percent from 6.5 percent, compared to an average rate of around five percent in Europe.

Joe Roseman, inflation economist with the securities firm UBS-Phillips and Drew, said the inflation figures were high but gave "no special shocks."

LONDON (JUNE 15) - New Zealand group Investment Equity Pacific (IEP) has launched a friendly bid for the 23.7 percent of British auto import and retail and property group TKM it does not already hold, the British group said Friday.

Sir Ron Brierley's group is offering 150 pence per Tozer Kemsley and Millbourn share, some 31 percent above Thursday's London closing price of 115 pence.

TKM shares soared to 144 pence in London on Friday on the news.

IEP started acquiring TKM shares in July 1982, and had a 25 percent stake by mid-1985.

It then acquired a majority stake of 62.2 percent through a capital raising exercise, and later boosted its holding to 76.3 percent by buying shares on the stock market.

TKM has recommended accepting the full takeover by IEP, saying that the New Zealand group's majority position had discouraged stock market investors and that TKM's current share price did not reflect its performance in recent years.

The British group's taxable profit has soared from 5.24 milion pounds (8.7 million dollars) in 1984 to 52.6 million (87.6 million dollars) last year.

TKM took control this year of Western Motor Holdings, which distributes Soviet Lada cars in Britain, in a 100 million pound (166.6 million dollars) friendly takeover.

TRIESTE, ITALY (JUNE 15) - An Italian magistrate ordered the sequestration of Iraqi petrol tanker the Arfa Haidy in the port of Trieste on Friday after an oil spill while it was unloading, port authorities said.

The sequestration is to give the Italian authorities time to determine the amount of damages to be reclaimed from the shipowner after several tons of crude oil spilled from the vessel during unloading.

OTTAWA (JUNE 15) - Canada's inflation rate fell to an annual rate of 4.5 percent in May, the first time in a year it has dropped below five per-cent, the government reported Friday.

The government attributed the decline to increases in cigarette taxes and a softening of the impact of the 1989 budget on the consumer price index.

OSLO (JUNE 15) - Norway's production of oil and gas from the North Sea may grind to a halt if 6,000 oil workers go on strike on July 1, and wage negotiations are entering a critical phase, according to industry sources.

The oil workers union (OFS) has appealed to the International Labour Organization (ILO) to send an observer to Norway, in case the government invokes its right to settle the conflict by compulsory wage arbitration.

Norwegian laws allow for such settlements if "important national interests" are threatened. This has been done five times in the past, on the basis of consequences of large losses of state tax revenues.

OFS informed buyers of Norwegian gas on the Continent Friday that risks are mounting that deliveries may stop.

An OFS spokesman said Friday that compulsory wage arbitration is contrary to the right to strike. In 1986, OFS took its complaint to the ILO, which concurred.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) - A Japanese government advisory committee approved two interim reports on financial reform Friday, although a senior finance ministry official said recommendations would not be implemented for at least two years.

The reports seek to broaden the legal definition of securities and outline the future role of the capital market, including the relationship between banks and securities firms, whose activities in Japan are strictly separated by law.

The recommendations would allow securities firms to carry out foreign exchange and trust banking business, but would prevent banks from undertaking brokerage activities due to alleged conflicts of interest.

The reports also call for Japan's rigid definition of securities to be broadened to include new products such as commercial paper, currently defined as promissory notes and thus outside the jurisdiction of investor protection laws.

The finance ministry official said it would take "at least a year" to complete the review and another year to prepare amendments to the Securities and Exchange Law, which has hardly changed since being passed in 1948.

"But this is rather optimistic," he admitted.

The reports approved Friday, undertaken by a committee attached to the ministry's securities bureau, are being carried out at the same time as another review by the ministry's banking bureau.

Accra (JUNE 15) - The International Cocoa Organization's advisory group on the world economy begins a three-day meeting here Monday as part of continuing efforts to end the crisis in the world cocoa industry.

Some 80 delegates from producing and consuming countries are expected to discuss various subjects including the economies of cocoa processing in producing countries, the economies of the production of cocoa beans and of finished chocolate products and chemical residues in cocoa.

The economies of cocoa producing countries have been critically hit by a crash in world market prices which have been heavily weighed down by excess cocoa beans estimated at some 1.3 million tonnes.

The chief executive of Ghana's Cocoa Board (Cocobod), David Aninakwah, told a news conference here Friday that the trend is alarming and efforts must be made by producers and consumers to shore up weak prices.

He said the Accra conference would pay attention to cost of production, tariffs, the question of processing, vigorous marketing polices and improvement upon research.

There were vast market potentials in producing countries, Eastern Europe,

China and India which could be explored. There was the need to come out with ''measures that are practicable to end the crisis,'' he said.

The meeting will also hear a report on the work of the International Cocoa Organization's expert working group on quality, stocks and rationalization of supply.

LONDON (JUNE 15) - There was a respectable increase in demand for large vessels loading in the Gulf over the past week on the tanker market, but a surfeit of tonnage prevented any improvement in rates.

In their latest report, London brokers E.A. Gibson said that some 26 vessels totalling nearly 7.5 million tonnes are available up to the end of June, with a further 50 vessels of nearly 13 million tonnes projected until the end of July.

Owners of vessels loading in West Africa had no alternative but to continue to accept low rates. In the Mediterranean, vessels of around 80,000 tonnes were mostly fixed at last week's levels, but rates improved towards the end of the week. Weaker conditions were seen for clean vessels.

Very little business was concluded in the Caribbean and rates were mostly easier.

PARIS (JUNE 15) - A french court sentenced a physicist of East German origin to 12 years in prison Friday after finding him guilty of spying for East Berlin during his 20-year tenure at France's Cnrs national research institute.

Rolf Dobbertin, had denied the charges against him and insisted that documents passed on by him in the 1960s and '70s were not classified and were forwarded legitimately in the interest of ''scientific exchange''.

Dobbertin, now 55, moved from Schwerin in East Germany and took on West German citizenship in 1959.

After two decades of work at Cnrs, he was put in pre-trial detention in 1979 but released on bail in 1983. The four years spent in jail would be applied to his sentence, the Paris court that sentenced him said.

ISLAMABAD (JUNE 15) - No date or venue has yet been fixed for the mandatory annual summit meeting of the seven-nation South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (Saarc), according to Saarc secretary-General Kant Kishore Bhargava.

Pakistan has suggested that at least the foreign ministers of the member states - India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Bhutan and the Maldives - should meet in Kathmandu in August to keep the organisation active, Bhargava said in an interview in Islamabad Friday.

Sri Lanka was to hold the summit last December but refused to do so until Indian peace-keeping forces left its territory, which they did in the spring of 1990.

Colombo is now willing to host the meeting but the Maldives, allotted the event for 1990, are keen on playing host as this is also the 25th year of their independence.

MONROVIA (JUNE 15) - Moslems throughout Liberia Friday offered special prayers for the success of peace talks taking place in Freetown, Sierra Leone between the government of President Samuel Doe and rebels fighting to oust him.

In Monrovia, hundreds of Moslems gathered at mosques in spite of torrential rains and prayed that the talks would bring an end to the six months of fighting between the two sides.

The Moslem League issued a statement Friday saying the peace of the nation should be of concern to everyone in Liberia.

The League called on all Liberians to "abolish discrimination and tribalism in Liberia", saying all the country's ethnic groups were inter-related and that it was the responsibility of all Liberians to be their "brothers keeper".

Prayers for peace were also made in government ministries and agencies at their regular Friday prayer services.

Christian prayer groups in Monrovia for their part asked God "to forgive Liberians for all their sins and restore peace in the country".

Those "engaged in the wanton killings of innocent citizens" were "murdering God's children", they said, and called on the killers to stop.

The West African state has been shaken and destabilised by the war that the rebels of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia launched against the government last December.

The start of peace talks this week after a Christian churches and Moslem initiative has raised hopes of a way out of the crisis, which has sent Liberians and expatriates fleeing Monrovia in fear.

Shops and marketplaces were open for normal business Friday, but transportation is a major problem in the Liberian capital for lack of fuel, with long lines of vehicles at filling stations.

There is also shortage of rice, cooking oil and other foodstuffs whose prices have been rising daily.

KINGSTON (JUNE 15) - State-owned Air Jamaica has rejected the idea of merging with the national airlines of other Caribbean nations but is seeking a foreign partner, Transport Minister Robert Pickersgill said Friday.

It had recently been proposed that the five state-owned airlines of the English-language Caribbean islands, including Air Jamaica, be merged into a single carrier.

Air Jamaica, established 21 years ago, has been losing money for some time. It operates a fleet of four Airbus A-300's and four Boeing 727's.

Mr. Pickersgill said the airline was having discussions with other carriers about the possibility of them taking up an equity participation in Air Jamaica.

The minister did not name the companies, but industry sources here said Air Canada and British Airways were two of those which had been approached.

Air Jamaica, which flies to the U.S. cities of New York, Baltimore, Los Angeles and Miami, last year recorded a loss of 17 million U.S. dollars, bringing its accumulated deficit to 27.3 million U.S. dollars.

"We are not now giving active consideration to being part of a merged regional airline", the minister said. "We could get some benefits from shared services and cooperation with other Caribbean airlines. We are, however, more interested now in divesting about 35 percent Air Jamaica's equity to a foreign carrier."

COPENHAGEN (JUNE 15) - The Dalai Lama, spiritual leader of some two million Tibetans, said here Friday that Chinese leaders were sensitive to appeals and pressure from the West, or they would not have lifted the state of emergency after last year's crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators.

The state of emergency was only lifted because of pressure from the West, he said.

The Dalai Lama who has been living in Indian exile since 1959 arrived here earlier after a visit to Sweden.

Restrictions still abound in Beijing and some officials favour a reintroduction of the state of emergency, he said.

The Dalai Lama said little progress had been made since last year in contacts at the Chinese Embassy in New Delhi to solve dispute over Tibet, which is under Chinese rule.

A state of emergency in Tibet also was lifted June 1, but the Dalai Lama said that according to Tibetan refugees soldiers there were wearing police uniforms and police were operating in plainclothes.

The Dalai Lama said two Tibetans were publicly executed by the Chinese on May 18 that and 37 others had been charged with subversion.

Monrovia (JUNE 15) - Liberia's finance minister, Emmanuel Shaw, has resigned due to ''family pressure'' while on an official trip abroad, reliable sources said here Friday.

The sources said Shaw's resignation was contained in a telex message he sent to Liberian President Samuel Doe this week.

They said Shaw told Doe he was resigning due to ''personal and family reasons''.

Shaw resigned at a time there was mounting pressure from rebellious forces for Doe's resignation.

When contacted Friday, acting information minister Moses Washington said he could neither confirm nor deny the reports.

HANOI (JUNE 15) - Australia signed a 15 million U.S. dollar cooperative agreement with Vietnam here Friday to establish a long-distance fibre optic telecommunications link between the capital and Ho Chi Minh City.

Telecom Australia (International) Ltd. officials said the deal would include technology transfers and training for Vietnamese in Australia.

They added that work on the project, linking 22 points between the two cities, would be carried out by the Vietnamese and begin late this year. The project would come on line at the end of 1991 and maintenance would be the responsibility of the Vietnamese.

Ken Loughnan, managing director of the Australian state-run enterprise, said the project would boost "the economic development of the country."

He added that the 15 million dollar contract signed here Friday provided for payment in cash.

The OCT company of Australia has already built satellite earth stations in Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City, 1,200 kilometres (720 miles) to the south, connecting the urban centres with the outside world.

The Telecom Australia officials are part of a large delegation of officials and businessmen from 15 firms who arrived here Wednesday under the leadership of Industry, Technology and Commerce Minister John Button to boost bilateral economic ties.

Australia's Independent Seafoods, meanwhile, signed a 2.5 million dollar contract Friday to sell Vietnam's National Animal and Poultry Export-Import Corp. an abattoir for pigs and cattle at the port of Haiphong, east of here.

Mr. Button and Vietnam's Minister of Commerce, Hoang Minh Thang, signed a trade and economic cooperation agreement here Thursday providing the framework for a substantial increase in trade and investment between the two countries.

The Australian delegation is to fly to Ho Chi Minh City on Saturday before leaving for Tokyo on Tuesday.

BERLIN (JUNE 15) - A Soviet military truck carrying missiles and other munitions exploded early Friday in East Germany, the East German press agency ADN reported a Soviet commander as saying.

The explosion hurled red-hot shards of metal weighing up to several kilogrammes (pounds) for up to 1.5 kilometres (about a mile) around at Burg, witnesses said. No one was hurt.

The truck was in a military convoy when it caught fire just after going over a Magdeburg-Dessau railway line level crossing. Soldiers sent the vehicle down a side road with the aid of a tank, rescued the driver and ran for shelter.

When the explosion came it was like a fireworks display, witnesses said.

An East German television team trying to film the scene was briefly detained by Soviet soldiers.

Road traffic was interrupted for several hours while East German and Soviet ballistics experts detonated remaining unexploded munitions.

DUBLIN (JUNE 15) - Environment ministers from 20 West and East European nations will hold their first meeting Saturday to try and solve Eastern Europe's chronic environmental problems.

Diplomatic sources at the European Economic Community's executive commission said the 12 EEC nations would ask East European governments to introduce Western-style environmental policies.

A draft conclusion of the meeting, already prepared by the EEC and obtained by Agence France-Presse, proposes that East European nations apply the "polluter pays" principal.

It also suggests these countries treat their waste as recommended in the International Basel Convention.

The draft also recommends they use "economic and fiscal incentives to protect the environment," as for example many EEC member states have done by making lead-free petrol (gasoline) cheaper than regular petrol.

Some EEC diplomats agreed that the recommendations in the draft conclusion gave the impression the 12-nation trade bloc was trying to impose its environmental policies on its Eastern neighbours.

But "what we're trying to tell East European countries is that cooperation between us is not only a question of financial aid but that the environment is a clear priority," a diplomat commented.

A cleaner environment within the EEC countries depends in large part on efforts to sort out Eastern Europe's severe pollution problems.

Poisonous sulphur dioxide fumes spewing out from East European factories contribute to the formation of "acid rain" which is killing forests in West Germany. A polluted River Elbe, which rises in Czechoslovakia, pours its water into the North Sea.

The EEC is likely to announce on Saturday that any EEC companies setting up in Eastern Europe would be bound to good environmental conduct.

FLORENCE (JUNE 15) - The first Italian high-speed train, the ETR 500, made its inaugural voyage from Rome to Florence on Friday.

For its first trip, the train transported several hundred invited guests and journalists to Florence, where Austria was scheduled to meet Czechoslovakia in a Group A World Cup match.

Constructed by a consortium of Italian businesses, the ETR 500 is expected to compete in coming years with other high-speed trains on the European and international markets.

The standard model of the train will have two motor cars, one in front and the other in the rear of a string of 12 passenger cars offering 700 seats in first and second class.

The ETR 500's shape is the work of Italian automobile designer Sergio Pininfarina. The streamlined design of the motorcars will allow the train to attain speeds above 300 kilometers per hour (186 miles per hour) on special tracks which the Italian rail company will build for it in the next several years.

Italian railway officials emphasized during the train's inauguration that the ETR 500 will benefit from technological advances allowing it to attain high speeds on normal tracks as well as on the specially designed sections.

DURBAN, SOUTH AFRICA (JUNE 15) - Controversial former South African cabinet minister Amichand Rajbansi was fined here Friday for fraud, state-run television reported.

Mr. Rajbansi, the leader of the Indians-only National People's Party (NPP) was fined 5,000 rands (1,870 dollars) on each of two counts centring on rent subsidies he got for butchers' shops in this east coast port city in the early 1980s.

He said he would appeal.

The magistrate said Mr. Rajbansi had already been punished by the James Commission on corruption in the Indian House of Delegates in the three-chamber parliament.

Commission chairman Mr. Justice Neville James in February 1989 recommended that Mr. Rajbansi should never again be appointed to an official or semi-official post, and that evidence should be submitted to the attorney-general for possible prosecution.

The James Commission heard allegations that Mr. Rajbansi, a former professional soccer referee, had taken bribes to allocate liquor and business licences and had interfered with civil service appointments, promotions and transfers.

Former South African president Pieter Botha dismissed him as chairman of the council of ministers in the House of Delegates in December 1988, booting him out of the cabinet and the advisory President's Council, pending the outcome of the James Commission.

Mr. Rajbansi, who was suspended from local politics back in 1977 for failing to declare a financial interest in a debate, was re-elected with an increased majority in Durban's Arena Park constituency in last September's segregated general elections.

BERLIN (JUNE 15) - Three people arrested in Leipzig on suspicion of belonging to the Red Army Faction (RAF) are not members of the West German terrorist group, police announced Friday.

The official East German news agency ADN quoted police in Leipzig as saying late Friday that the three had nothing to do with terrorism.

Earlier Friday, the East German Interior Ministry announced that wanted terrorists Horst-Ludwig Meyer, 34, his wife, Barbara, 34, and Sabine Elke Callsen, 29, had been arrested in Leipzig.

It said they were members of the RAF, which has carried out a string of terrorist attacks in the West.

MOSCOW (JUNE 15) - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, having failed to carry parliament, will now resort to rule by decree to introduce market economy reforms over the summer, senior government sources acknowledged Friday.

Deputies Thursday ended their session by postponing consideration of the government's economic reform programme because they were reluctant to agree to tough economic decisions that are bound to be unpopular.

They even rejected a proposal for a steep rise in the price of bread, originally due to be introduced from July.

But they also voted this week to accept "the principle" of transition to a market economy and agreed Mr. Gorbachev could pass presidential decrees for selective implementation of recently adopted laws which will speed up reform. These are expected to include denationalization measures, along with property and land legislation.

"Yesterday, we got agreement from the Supreme soviet (parliament) to establish the mechanisms" for transition to a market economy, Yuri Maslyukov, a deputy premier, told a press conference Friday.

This, he suggested, gave the government the right to take decisions deemed necessary to start reform, pending reconsideration of the government's plans by parliament in September.

"If the government does not find support (at that stage), it will then have only one way out," he said, meaning resignation.

But Mr. Maslyukov, a polituro member in charge of Gosplan, the state planning commission, also said that the package of laws recently adopted by parliament "provides for the irreversibility of the transition to a market economy".

ROME (JUNE 15) - Host Italy on Friday started to feel the first real must-win pressure when their Group E opponent Czechoslovakia regained the group leadership on a 1-0 victory over Austria.

The Italians, winners by 1-0 over both the United States and Austria, find themselves in second place in the group, their goal average inferior to the Czechs, who clobbered the U.S. squad 5-1.

What is not at stake in their match in Rome next Tuesday is whether Italy or Czechoslovakia will go through to the second round, but rather who will be the Group E winner and therefore possibly have the better chances in the second round.

All Czechoslovakia needs is a draw against the Italians to win Group E on goal average and play its second round match in Rome against the third-placed team of Group C, D, or E.

Italy, if it wants that spot - and to keep playing here in Rome's giant 84,000-seat Olympic Stadium - must win against Czechoslovakia. Otherwise, Italy must travel to Bari to play a presumably tougher opponent, the second-place team in Group C (Brazil, Sweden, Costa Rica, Scotland).

Whatever, Italian trainer Azeglio Vicini will have to find a way to get his team's scoring game going if it is to live up to its status as the nation most likely to win the 1990 World Cup.

A sole late-match goal by reserve striker Salvatore Schillaci against Austria and a single, albeit brilliantly executed, score by Giuseppi Giannini against the young and inexperienced U.S. team is all the Italians have to show so far, and they won't very likely find the going any easier against Czechoslovakia's stalwart defense.

The Czechs conceded a lone breakaway goal by the U.S. when that one-sided match had already been decided, while shutting down Austria's highly-touted attack focused around Toni Polster on Friday.

The Czechoslovak side may well play a waiting game against Italy, keeping an eye out for a quick counterattack by their most able striker, Tomas Skuhravy, who scored twice against the U.S.

LENINGRAD, SOVIET UNION (JUNE 15) - The French Credit Mutuel has signed a credit-card arrangement with the Soviet union and has installed machines in Moscow to enable 200,000 senior Soviet officials to settle their bills, company vice-president Michel Lucas said on Friday.

Under the arrangement, bills incurred by foreigners in the Soviet Union, which totalled 250 million dollars in 1989, will be settled under the operation of Eurocard, Mastercard, and Visa cards.

Mr. Lucas, president of Eurocard France, said that the Credit Mutuel had installed terminals in Moscow enabling 200,000 Soviet officials to settle purchases in certain shops known as Beriozka.

The system might soon be extended to the Leningrad area, and the magnetic cards required are personalised.

The Credit Mutuel is in contact with the Intourist tourism company and the Aeroflot airline, and is talking to the Vnesheconombank (VEB) with a view to working for financial markets.

"Our approach in various countries in eastern Europe is very pragmatic," he said. "We work on contracts, and not on state protocols." This is "the only way to work on a long-term basis with an economy which is being liberalised."

NAIROBI (JUNE 15) - A leading Kenyan human rights lawyer urged the government Friday to abolish a law allowing detention without trial.

Kiraitu Murungi, addressing an International Commission of Jurists seminar here, said he had acted for many people detained without trial under the Public Security Act.

"That law should be scrapped, especially in peacetime," he said.

The act provides for the detention without trial of anyone endangering national security.

Zacchaeus Okoth, archbishop of Kisumu in western Kenya, blasted cabinet ministers who have demanded the detention of two dissident politicians, Kenneth Matiba and Charles Rubia.

The two men have called for the restoration of a multi-party democracy in Kenya, a one-party state since 1982.

The archbishop told journalists on the sidelines of the seminar that "this demand for detention which implies holding persons in custody would be a step backward for Kenya".

Lawyers and clergyman have spearheaded recent calls for political pluralism in the East African state.

Archbishop Okoth however praised President Daniel arap Moi for releasing all political detainees in June last year, a move which he said "marked an achievement for human rights in Kenya."

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 15) - Senior African National Congress (ANC) officials met the leaders of five of South Africa's six self-governing homelands here Friday at their request, ANC internal information chief Ahmed Kathrada said.

The only leader who did not turn up was the ANC's arch rival Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, chief minister of KwaZulu, the largest of the homelands.

Supporters of Mr. Buthelezi's Zulu movement Inkatha have been waging a bloody feud against ANC partisans in Natal province over the last three years.

Meanwhile, South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha met President Lucas Mangope of the nominally independent homeland of Bophuthatswana in Mmabatho

Friday to brief him on President Frederik de Klerk's nine-nation tour of Europe, which ended May 26, the homeland's news agency Bopana said.

Mr. Botha told a press conference that if the ANC got its wish for continued anti-apartheid sanctions, Bophuthatswana would suffer.

President Mangope, who faced anti-government riots in March, stands alone among the leaders of the four homelands granted independence status by Pretoria in being opposed to the ANC. Those of Venda, Ciskei and Transkei have come out in support of Nelson Mandela's anti-apartheid movement.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 15) - Belgium on Friday said it would maintain the measures it took last month against Zaire, its former African colony, in protest at a bloody government crackdown against Zairean students.

Prime Minister Wilfried Martens said after a cabinet meeting that a review of the measures would be held over "until next week or the week after."

On May 25, Belgium froze all state loans to Zaire and scrapped a meeting of a joint Belgian-Zairean commission that was to enact trade accords signed only two months earlier.

The move was in protest at action by government forces against students in Lubumbashi, in southeast Zaire, that left an unknown number of casualties.

Witnesses said dozens were killed, although the Zairean government said there was only one death.

Mr. Martens said the measures would be maintained as Belgium insists that an independent, international inquiry be made into the incidents on May 10 to 12.

Belgium allocated state credit of 350 million Belgian francs (10 million dollars) to Zaire for 1989 and had yet to set a figure for 1990.

The trade agreements, which include concessions on Zaire's 320-million-dollar debt to Belgium, had until the new row been hailed as ending a prolonged period of friction between the two countries.

Mr. Martens said Belgium had yet to receive its traditional invitation to attend Zaire's independence day celebrations at the end of June.

TYRE, LEBANON (JUNE 15) - Masked men gunned down a military official of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's Fatah group in broad daylight Friday inside a Palestinian refugee camp in southern Lebanon, Palestinian sources said.

The three men armed with revolvers escaped after shooting Ahmad Salim Darass, 30, at point-blank range in Rashidiyeh camp near this port city.

Fatah supporters used stones to block the entrances to the camp after the incident and fired guns in the air in anger.

The senior Fatah military official at Rashidiyeh, Sultan Abul Aynain, escaped an assassination attempt in January.

Rashidiyeh, which lies about 10 kilometers (six miles) from the Israeli border, is the only Palestinian camp in the Tyre region where the Palestine Liberation Organisation has an armed presence.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 15) - Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan of Thailand Friday called openly on the United States and Japan to try and cut the flow of Chinese arms to the Khmer Rouge.

Chatichai, ending a week-long working visit, said in remarks to the National Press Club that the United States and Japan ''should ask China to stop military supplies to the Khmer Rouge.''

The 68-year-old prime minister made the same request Thursday in the White House, but President George Bush replied that U.S. ties with China were too strained for such a plea to have any effect.

''With the improved global and regional situation, let us redouble and coordinate our efforts to bring peace to Cambodia, especially now that the negotiations have reached such an important juncture,'' he said.

Chatichai, who left Bangkok amid political turbulence, assured his audience of the ''stability of our govenment and the continuity of Thai political development.''

He pledged to expand the war against drug trafficking, but a member of his delegation stressed that the problem could not be solved until Washington holds direct talks with Burma, a source of the heroin that transits Thailand on its way to the United States.

The Bangkok-born leader, who met earlier in the day with Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, asked for patience in solving ''contentious trade issues'' and urged greater U.S. investment.

Asked whether the United States should lift its economic boycott against Vietnam, he replied, ''I believe the war is over.''

VATICAN (JUNE 15) - Nelson Mandela made a plea to Pope John Paul II for sustained anti-apartheid economic sanctions and met with a noncommittal response Friday, though he got the pontiff's blessing for ANC initiatives.

The African National Congress (ANC) deputy president is currently on a tour of European capitals and North America to drum up support for sanctions against South Africa until apartheid is ended and fully democratic elections are held.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the pope, while condemning racism and supporting the defense of the rights of all mankind, told Mr. Mandela that sanctions were political measures which the head of the Roman Catholic Church could not comment upon.

At a press conference after his half-hour audience with the pope, Mr. Mandela said he understood that the pope could not play a direct role in this matter, but stressed that he had asked for a clear statement on the issue.

He added that he had asked the pontiff's support for the ANC's "message", saying that the pope's clearly established views on issues such as apartheid and anti-semitism had won worldwide admiration.

"May God bless your initiatives," said John Paul II, who was present during the unprecedented news conference in his private library after the audience.

The Vatican spokesman pointed out that the pontiff had declared that "sanctions are a political means" during his African tour two years ago.

But the audience with Mr. Mandela "is a new confirmation of the engagement of the Holy See in favour of a peaceful political evolution in South Africa," Mr. Navarro said.

ASUNCION (JUNE 15) - At least a dozen people were injured in confrontations between police and hundreds of demonstrators protesting government violence, officials said Friday.

The violence erupted late Thursday when police moved against an estimated 1,000 students and opposition politicians who had marched to the Congress in defiance of a government ban on demonstrations near the legislative building.

The demonstrators were protesting last week's beating of law students by security forces. The law students were protesting against statements by Interior Minister Orlando Machuca, who urged leaders of the official Colorado Party "to kick" the opposition.

In Washington, visiting Paraguayan President Andres Rodriguez told President George Bush in a brief meeting Friday that he hopes the United States will assist his country in moving toward democracy.

Mr. Rogriguez also was to visit Taiwan and South Korea before returning home.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 15) - A United Nations fact-finding mission was told Friday that Pretoria should declare its intent by setting out a programme for dismantling apartheid.

The South African Council of Churches (SACC) told the U.N. team, led by Under Secretary-General Abdulrahim Farah, that "we felt it was possible to work out interim terms and structures for the dismantling of apartheid," SACC communications director Saki Macozoma told a press conference.

"We would like to see a declaration of intent on the part of the government to set in motion a programme of dismantling apartheid," he added.

The process of scrapping apartheid would only be "irreversible", as President Frederik de Klerk has said it is, "once a forum is set up which effectively removes sovereignty from parliament and relocates it elsewhere " Mr. Macozoma said.

He also caled for anti-apartheid sanctions to be maintained.

The SACC General Secretary, the Reverend Frank Chikane, was due to continue discussions Saturday with the U.N. team, which has also had talks in Cape Town and Durban since its visit, commissioned by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, began last Saturday.

MILAN (JUNE 15) - The mighty West German firing machine found themselves shooting at an Arab mirage for most of the first half as they blundered to a 2-0 half-time lead over the United Arab Emirates in their World Cup match here on Friday.

It was only in the final 10 minutes that Rudi Voller and Jurgen Klinsmann finally found the target as the heavens opened, the rain driving down in sheets.

For most of the half the UAE goal seemed to be there one minute, somewhere else the next, as the Germans peppered shots left of the post, right of the post and over the bar.

Even Voller was forced to laugh as he hit over the bar from only five metres out after 16 minutes.

The Germans have never had so many goalscoring chances in a single half, never mind 90 minutes, in their life.

The crumbling UAE defence was no match for the Germans but Franz Beckenbauer's troops could not find the killer punch until Voller finally scooped in a cross from Klinsmann after 36 minutes.

Two minutes later Klinsmann headed in Thomas Berthold's cross. But it should have been his fourth goal. He had two blatant misses in front of goal and a third attempt came back off the left hand post.

To add insult to injury for the Germans, Andreas Brehme, their attacking lweft-back, was booked for the second time in the tournament when he hacked down Ali Thani. That earns him an automatic one-match suspension.

West Germany: Illgner, Berthold, Augenthaler, Buchwald, Reuter, Hassler, Matthaeus, Bein, Brehme, Klinsmann, Voller

United Arab Emirates: Musin Musabbah, Eissa Meer, Khaleel Ghanim, Yousuf Hussein, Ibrahim Meer, Nasser Khamis, Abdulrahman Mohamed, Hussein Ghuloum, Khalid Ismail, Ali Thani, Al Taliyani

ALGIERS (JUNE 15) - The number two man in the Algerian Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) lashed out at France and President Francois Mitterrand Friday, saying they "will pay one day" for massacres committed in Algeria.

Imam Ali Belhadj, whose party swept local elections held in Algeria Tuesday, said France will pay "for all the crimes which it has committed in Algeria, particularly on May 8, 1945."

According to Algerian historians, 45,000 Algerians celebrating the end of World war II and demonstrating for independence were massacred by the French army in Setif, Kherrata and Guelma in eastern Algeria.

French and other western historians have put the number killed at 15,000 to 20,000.

"France, which acts as if it were still our teacher, has no lessons to give us," Mr. Belhadj said.

The religious leader was reacting to a statement by the French president that France "respected the choice of the Algerian people."

"We have no need of this kind of statement," Mr. Belhadj said.

Mr. Belhadj also warned that the FIS "has to be vigilant" about France and the West "which wants to use women as a card against us."

The FIS, a fundamentalist political party, has been under criticism at home and abroad for its policy regarding the civil rights of women, who represent slightly more than half of the electorate.

The imam said his party wants "to protect the honour and dignity of our sisters ... against the aggressiveness of men."

Mr. Belhadj is considered more radical in his fundamental approach to religion and politics than FIS leader Abassi Madani.

Mr. Madani, apparently out of step with Mr. Belhadj, said Friday he wanted to continue "excellent relations with France," was prepared to accept any invitation to go to France and wanted to open FIS offices on French territory.

PARIS (JUNE 15) - Mozambique and the Central African Republic won concessions on their debts to governments, meeting here as the "Club of Paris", informed sources said.

They said that Mozambique had won improved terms on 700 million dollars of its foreign debt (to governments), with 12 countries agreeing to give the country special treatment in order to lighten its debt load.

They expressed satisfaction with the Mozambique government's development of an economic and financial program approved by the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

They said they wanted to "make a positive contribution to the improvement of the country's external payments prospects so as to facilitate the recovery of its economy".

In deciding on the improved terms to be granted to Mozambique, creditor countries will have the choice among three options, or some combination of them:

- Writing off a third of the payments on the 700 million dollars' worth of debt in question, with the remaining two-thirds to be consolidated at market interest rates over a 14-year period (including an eight-year grace period).

- Consolidation at market rates, with a repayment period of 25 years (including a 14-year grace period).

- Consolidation at preferential rates, which would be the market rate less 3.5 percentage points, or the market rate reduced by 50 per cent if that reduction is less than 3.5 points, with a repayment period of 14 years (including an eight-year grace period).

As to the Central African Republic, the Club of Paris made concessions on debt of 1.3 billion CFA francs (about 4.5 million dollars), the informed sources said.

The governments involved will have the same choice of options in this case as for Mozambique.

The Club welcomed the country's application of the required adjustment program, with the support of the IMF.

NEW DELHI (JUNE 15) - India announced Friday it would reopen next week the trade routes with landlocked Nepal that it shut last year over a dispute.

An Indian government spokesman said that two border points at Sanauli and Nepalganj would be reopened Monday and the rest would be opened later the same day or shortly afterwards.

New Delhi's action follows an agreement reached during Nepalese Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai's visit Sunday to normalise trade arrangements following the 15-month closure of 15 trade and transit points between the two neighbors.

India closed all but two of its entry points with Nepal in March 1989 due to a dispute that cropped up after a bilateral trade and transit treaty expired. The move caused a serious scarcity of consumer goods in Nepal.

New Delhi, under then-prime minister Rajiv Gandhi, proposed that trade and transit be covered under a composite treaty while Kathmandu wanted them to be kept separate.

India was annoyed by Nepal's purchase of arms from China. New Delhi has an outstanding border dispute with Beijing that led to a brief but bitter war in 1962.

LIMA (JUNE 15) - The leftist Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) has announced it will offer a cease-fire to the government of president-elect Alberto Fujimori.

Jailed MRTA chief Victor Polay Campos said at a court appearance here Thursday that his rebel movement would extend a temporary cease-fire to Mr. Fujimori's administration.

"We will be watching the steps taken by the (Fujimori) government, and if they do not respond to the expectations of the people, our activity will again be felt throughout society," he warned.

Mr. Polay noted that in 1985 the MRTA offered a similar truce to the government of then-president-elect Alan Garcia of the social democratic American Popular Revolutionary Alliance (APRA).

"But that lasted only a short while, because the APRA government immediately unleashed a dirty war" against alleged subversives, said Mr. Polay, who is a former APRA member.

Over the past decade, Peru has been wracked by violence from the MRTA, another leftist rebel group called the Shining Path, cocaine traffickers, and allegedly by security forces who have been accused of killing those suspected of supporting any of the other three groups.

Friday, the armed forces said troops killed nine suspected Shining Path rebels in two separate gun battles during the previous two days in the Andean region of the country. One soldier was killed in the violence.

The confrontations raised this week's death toll in rebel-related violence to 47, police said.

Mr. Fujimori -- who defeated conservative politician and acclaimed novelist Mario Vargas Llosa -- has said he will not negotiate with terrorists and has stressed that he would combat subversion by attacking its causes of poverty and injustice.

But the weekly publication Cambio -- the unofficial organ of the MRTA -- predicted that Mr. Fujimori's victory in Sunday's final-round presidential election would be short-lived.

Cambio stressed that "there are no qualitative differences between Fujimori and Vargas Llosa," citing as evidence Mr. Fujimori's conventional proposals to renegotiate Peru's foreign debt payments.

Mr. Silayev was elected with backing from 163 out of 220 deputies in parliament on Friday. A first vote proved inconclusive and he won the second with backing from Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Losing candidate was Mikhail Bocharov, the director of the first Soviet cooperative and a member of the Inter-regional group of progressive Soviet deputies.

In the Soviet parliament since 1985, Mr. Silayev heads the bureau for machine building. By convention, he is expected now to resign as Soviet deputy prime minister.

MILAN (JUNE 15) - West Germany overwhelmed the United Arab Emirates 5-1 to become the fourth team to reach the second round of the World Cup here Friday.

It could easily have been double that score if the Germans had taken all their chances.

Non-stop first half pressure produced only two goals -- from Rudi Voller and Jurgen Klinsmann who had already missed five clear-cut chances between them.

Captain Lothar Matthaeus, Uwe Bein, with long-range shots, and another from Voller, helped in by brothers Eissa Meer and Ibrahim, scored in the second half.

The Emirates saved their honour within 30 seconds of the restart.

Khalid made history for the Emirates with their first ever World Cup finals goal when he rifled in a shot past German goalkeeper Bodo Illgner after Thomas Hassler failed to head away a high ball.

Goalkeeper Musabbah was the busiest man on the pitch as he faced a barrage of shots from the hungry Germans.

However, he could do nothing in the 74th minute when Voller rose above the defence to head down from a corner. Eissa Meer stabbed the ball out with his arm but his brother Ibrahim Meer kicked the ball back.

The German striker claimed credit for the goal.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) - Japan's wholesale prices in May fell 0.3 percent from April, reversing a 0.6 percent rise the previous month and marking the first decline since November last year, the Bank of Japan said Friday.

The central bank also said that wholesale prices grew 1.7 percent from a year earlier, down from 2.7 percent the previous month and the smallest year-on-year increase since April last year.

The decline in overall wholesale prices reflected a modest increase in domestic prices offset by sharp falls in import and export prices.

The central bank said that domestic prices were particularly affected by price cutting in the transport and electrical machinery sectors following a period of excessive competition.

Export prices were adversely affected by weak demand for chemical products in the United States and Southeast Asia while lower import prices reflected a sustained decline in international oil prices, the bank said.

Domestic wholesale prices rose 0.1 percent from the previous month and 0.6 percent from a year earlier. Import prices plunged 2.2 percent from April but were up seven percent from a year earlier while export prices dropped 1.6 per cent from the previous month but were up 5.4 percent from May last year.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) - Japan's two biggest carmakers, Toyota Motor Corp. and Nissan Motor Co., said Friday their vehicle exports declined in May as domestic sales hit new records for the month.

Toyota said its exports fell 3.6 percent from a year earlier to 147,300 vehicles in May, the second decline in a row. But domestic sales grew 8.4 percent to 194,200, surpassing the previous record set in May last year.

Nissan said its exports dropped six percent to 79,000 vehicles in the same period. Sales in Japan climbed 5.6 percent to 103,400 with sales of cars alone amounting to 77,100, a new record for the month of May.

The two companies both reported increased production in May with Toyota's output climbing 9.1 percent from a year earlier to 357,500 vehicles while Nissan's production grew 6.5 percent to 252,200.

But overseas production differed markedly, with Toyota's output abroad soaring 58.7 percent to 60,400 while Nissan's fell 6.2 percent to 55,500.

Nissan said the decline, the second in a row, came as its U.S. and British subsidiaries prepared to launch new models.

SEOUL (JUNE 15) - The South Korean government will send out invitations this month for international bids to build a high-speed railway costing billions of dollars, officials said here Friday.

"We'll send the invitations by the end of this month and will receive replies between September and December," an official of the Transportation Ministry said.

The government will then scrutinize the bids before starting negotiations with one of the bidders on contract terms, he said.

An official of the Korea National Railroad said: "Technology transfer will be the most important factor in deciding the winner."

The project, expected to cost more than eight billion dollars, is already the target of fierce international lobbying, especially by France, Japan and West Germany which want to sell South Korea their own high-speed railway systems.

Officials said that no specific country was in a favourable position to win the contract.

The railway will cover 410 kilometers (255 miles) from this capital city to the southeastern port of Pusan via the southeastern cities of Taegu and Kyongju.

TAIPEI (JUNE 15) - Taiwan's flag carrier, China Airlines (CAL), and the China Trust Group conglomerate are to jointly form the island's third international airline in September, the Commercial Times said Friday.

The new company, capitalized at two billion Taiwan dollars (72.91 million U.S.), hopes to inaugurate a Taiwan-Australia route in November after landing rights there are obtained, the Chinese-language paper said.

Australia's Qantas had planned a year ago to open the Taipei-Australia route by setting up a subsidiary, Australia Asia Airlines, to avert possible political pressure from China, a CAL official said.

The project is still pending approval from the Australian government, he added.

The new Taiwan airline would also start landing rights negotiations with countries which have denied access to CAL for political reasons, the Times said.

The business paper said that CAL would hold a two-thirds stake in the new company and the China Trust Group the remainder.

Executives of CAL and the Trust Group were not available for comment on the report.

The new project had won support from Communications Minister Clement Chang, the Times said, noting the Civil Aeronautics Administration would probably let the new airline use the 10 Boeing 747-400's that it had bought on a lease-and-buy basis.

Details of the project would be officially announced soon, the paper said.

Eva Airways Corp., the island's only private international airline and a wholly owned subsidiary of the Evergreen Group which operates the world's largest container fleet, has ordered 26 aircraft since it was set up in April 1989.

Eva has acquired landing rights in Vietnam, Malaysia and Austria but a formal go-ahead from Taiwan authorities is still pending.

MANAGUA (JUNE 15) EFE - The bodies of ten peasants killed some eight years ago have been discovered in a mass grave close to the site of a former Army base in northern Nicaragua, according to a report on state television.

Quoting leaders of the Nicaraguan Human Rights Association, government-run television said Thursday the bodies had been unearthed from a grave on a hill in the northern province of Jinotega, close to the border with Honduras.

A local woman interviewed in the report claimed to have recognized one of the bodies as a relative who had been seized by troops in 1983.

During 11 years of leftist Sandinista rule, which ended when democratically-elected President Violeta Chamorro took office in April, the Army fought a nine-year-old war against U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

Around 30,000 Nicaraguans are believed to have been killed in the war.

The grave is located close to the site of a military base once used by the former Sandinista government's Army.

A report by a local forensic expert has shown that the bodies were buried there some eight years ago. Clothes and ropes allegedly used to tie up the corpses were also found in the grave.

The Nicaraguan Human Rights Association is headed by Marta Patricia Baltodano, who also presided over a rights watchdog commission set up by Contra rebel leaders.

The television report said that authorities had opened an investigation into the discovery of the grave, which was reportedly uncovered after heavy rains lashed the area over the last few days, causing landslides.

TEHERAN (JUNE 15) EFE - Iranian authorities have arrested eight opposition leaders, including the son of former prime minister Mehdi

Bazargan and two ex ministers, local radio stations reported Friday.

According to an official statement read by the stations, the eight members of the Society to Defend Freedom group which Bazargan heads were detained late Thursday

They are accused of acting as a "fifth column" during the Iran-Iraq war and of maintaining secret contacts with foreign press.

Bazargan's son, Abdol-Ali, former trade minister Raya Sader and ex-planning and budget minister Ezzatollah Sahabi were among those arrested.

Bazargan was prime minister under Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini but resigned in 1979 after the seizure of the U.S. embassy by student militants.

He has been an outspoken critic of the lack of democratic reforms in Iran. Last month his group released an open letter signed by 90 leading Iranian figures which slammed the economic, social and political situation in the country.

MOSCOW (JUNE 15) EFE - The Soviet Interior Ministry Friday updated the death toll in a recent wave of ethnic violence in the Soviet Central Asian republic of Kirghizia to 170 and said 748 people were injured.

The ministry said the clashes between Kirghiz and ethnic Uzbeks had subsided over the past 24 hours, but the death toll had risen after security forces exhumed the bodies of more victims of the violence.

The clashes first broke out June 4 in the republic's southwestern region of Osh over a land dispute and quickly spread to the capital, Frunze.

The ministry also reported that during the riots there had been 361 arson attacks.

Radio Moscow's Interfax news service said despite the lull in violence, authorities had increased by one hour the nightly curfew in Osh, where a strike was being observed by some 50 per cent of industrial workers Friday.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) EFE - Nearly 60 percent of people in the Russian Federation, the Soviet Union's largest republic, support the leadership of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, according to an opinion poll carried

The survey was carried out by the Soviet National Center for the Investigation of Public Opinion in conjunction with the Yomiuri Japanese newspaper.

More than 80 percent said that shortages of food and other basic necessities was the most urgent national problem,

BEIRUT (JUNE 15) EFE - Syrian and Iranian mediators have left Lebanon after 10 days of fruitless talks aimed at ending two years of fighting between rival Shiite Moslem militias, Lebanese press reports said Friday.

Iranian Ambassador to Syria, Hussein Akhtar, and the chief of Syrian intelligence in Lebanon, Ghazi Kannan, left Lebanon Thursday after failing to end the militia's fight for control of the country's 1.3 million Shiites.

Akhtar arrived in Beirut June 6 to meet with the spiritual leader of the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group Hezbollah, Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah.

Kannan, meanwhile, mediated talks between military chiefs of Hezbollah (Party of God) and its rival Shiite group, the Syrian-backed Amal Hope.

Lebanese officials said the Syrian-Iranian peace initiative was aimed at bringing the leaders of the two Shiite factions to Damascus for direct talks.

Hezbollah and Amal signed a peace agreement in January 1989, but it broke down.

On June 6, Amal released a statement saying the group supported all moves to end the fighting, and called on Hezbollah to join a common front against Israel.

The Syrian-Iranian mediation broke down over Hezbollah's military presence in Amal-controlled southern Lebanon.

About 950 people have died and more than 3,000 have been wounded since the fighting began in April 1988.

Meanwhile, Syrian troops continued to patrol Shiite areas in West Beirut to prevent an outbreak of inter-militia fighting.

CANAVERAL, SPAIN (JUNE 15) - Hundreds of people attended funeral services Friday for 10 gypsies from the same family who died in a fiery automobile accident in western Spain.

Three other victims, two of whom were also family members, were to be buried in Madrid.

More than a thousand mourners, many of them gypsies dressed in black, crowded a Roman Catholic Church in the town of Canaveral, 240 km west of the capital, for a funeral mass by a local bishop.

The 13 died Thursday when the mini-bus they were traveling in smashed into a gravel truck near the southwestern city of Merida.

The truck driver was the only one who survived the accident. The dead were burned beyond recognition.

Accompanied by the mourners, coffins containing the bodies of seven brothers and sisters, ranging in age from six to 19 years of age, along with those of their grandmother and two uncles, were carried to a cemetary for burial.

MANAGUA (JUNE 15) - Nicaraguan Contra rebels have begun to hand over ground-to-air missiles to United Nations peace keepers, opening a new stage of the guerrillas' demobilization after nine years of bloody civil war.

Spanish Col. Manuel Maldonado, chief of the ONUCA peace-keeping force, said Contra leaders had given up nine Redeye shoulder-fired ground-to-air missiles, and a number of machine guns and mortars.

Maldonado said the guerrillas' stock of heavy artillery is yet to be recovered but said the handover was going ahead smoothly.

UN officials said Friday that 14,223 Contras have now given up their weapons, leaving just 1,200 of the formerly U.S.-backed rebels to demobilize.

A June 10 demobilization deadline, agreed between Contra leaders and the new government of President Violeta Chamorro passed without being met, forcing the UN Security Council to extend ONUCA's functions until the new deadline of June 29.

Financed and trained by Washington, the Contra rebels took up arms against the former leftist Sandinista government in 1981.

More than 30,000 people were killed during the war.

Rebel leaders agreed to demobilize after a 14-party coalition led by Chamorro beat the Sandinistas in February elections.

OTTAWA (JUNE 15) XINHUA -- CANADA'S BUSINESS AND PERSONAL BANKRUPTCIES BOTH ROSE SHARPLY IN THE FIRST FIVE MONTHS OF THIS YEAR, AS A RESULT OF THE COUNTRY'S HIGH INTEREST RATES AND A SLOW ECONOMY.

AS COMPARED WITH THE SAME PERIOD LAST YEAR, PERSONAL BANKRUPTCIES JUMPED BY 32 PERCENT, WITH THOSE IN THE RICHEST AND MOST POPULOUS PROVINCE OF ONTARIO UP BY MORE THAN 56 PERCENT, ACCORDING TO THE LATEST FIGURES RELEASED BY THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS.

BUSINESS BANKRUPTCIES WERE UP 23 PERCENT IN THE COUNTRY AS A WHOLE AND BY 38 PERCENT IN ONTARIO.

IN THE FIRST FIVE MONTHS OF THIS YEAR, THERE WERE 4,424 BUSINESS BANKRUPTCIES ACROSS CANADA, UP FROM 3,599 IN THE SAME PERIOD LAST YEAR. THIS FIGURE DOES NOT REFLECT ALL BUSINESS FAILURES BECAUSE IT DOES NOT INCLUDE RECEIVERSHIPS, IN WHICH ECONOMIC SURVIVAL IS STILL POSSIBLE, THE DEPARTMENT SAID.

THERE WERE 15,050 PERSONAL BANKRUPTCIES, UP FROM 11,390 IN THE FIRST FIVE MONTHS OF LAST YEAR.

CANADIAN BUSINESS PEOPLE AND ECONOMIC ANALYSTS BLAME THE GOVERNMENT'S HIGH INTEREST RATES POLICY AS A MAJOR FACTOR FOR THE SHARP INCREASES IN BANKRUPTCIES.

THE BANK OF CANADA'S TREND-SETTING INTEREST RATES HAVE REMAINED AROUND A SEVEN-YEAR HIGH TO HELP CHECK THE INFLATION, WHICH STANDS AT ABOUT 5 PERCENT ANNUALLY. THE CENTRAL BANK'S RATE IS 13.8 PERCENT THIS WEEK.

HOWEVER, BANK OF CANADA GOVERNOR JOHN CROW SAID TUESDAY THAT THE COUNTRY'S INTEREST RATES WILL REMAIN HIGH UNTIL INFLATION IS UNDER CONTROL.

MANILA (JUNE 15) XINHUA -- PHILIPPINE SENATE MAJORITY FLOORLEADER TEOFISTO GUINGONA TODAY DEMANDED THAT FILIPINO NATIONALS BE ALLOWED GREATER EQUITY PARTICIPATION IN THE OIL INDUSTRY.

GUINGONA SAID IN A STATEMENT THAT OIL INDUSTRY, PARTICULARLY IN THE FIELD OF CRUDE OIL IMPORTATION, REFINING AND MARKETING, IS A STRATEGIC SECTOR WHICH ACCOUNTS FOR 60 PERCENT OF THE COUNTRY'S TOTAL ENERGY MIX. DESPITE THIS VITAL ROLE, THE INDUSTRY IS OLIGOPSONISTIC IN NATURE AND IS VULNERABLE TO SHADY PRACTICES LIKE TRANSFER PRICING, SUPPRESSION OF PROFIT FIGURES AND TAX EVASION.

HE NOTED THAT CALTEX, A BIG OIL COMPANY, IS WHOLLY FOREIGN-OWNED CORPORATION DOING BUSINESS IN THE COUNTRY.

SHELL, ANOTHER OIL INDUSTRY, IS 50 TO 60 PERCENT OWNED BY BRITISH AND DUTCH NATIONALS, LEAVING THE BALANCE OF A FILIPINO GROUP, HE SAID.

ALTOGETHER, CALTEX AND SHELL CONTROL ABOUT 50 PERCENT OF THE OIL NEEDS OF THE COUNTRY, AND ONLY HALF BY THE STATE-OWNED PATRON, GUINGONA SAID.

HE PROPOSED LEGISLATIVE INITIATIVES THAT WILL ENSURE GREATER FILIPINIZATION OF THE OIL INDUSTRY SUCH AS OPENING SHELL AND CALTEX TO FILIPINO OWNERSHIP TO AT LEAST 60 PERCENT EQUITY.

HE RAISED THE POSSIBILITY OF PUBLIC OFFERING OF SHARES OF STOCKS OF THE OIL COMPANIES AND IN LINE WITH THIS, THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD DETERMINE THE FAIR MARKET VALUE OF SUCH SHARES.

GUINGONA SAID THAT HE WILL LOOK INTO CERTAIN POLICY AREAS LIKE FOREIGN EXCHANGE REMITTANCES BY THE OIL FIRMS, THEIR LOCAL DEBTS, TAX COMPLIANCE AND TRANSFER PRICING.

"THE OIL INDUSTRY IS IMPRESSED WITH A PUBLIC UTILITY CHARACTER AND MUST THEREFORE BE IN THE HANDS OF FILIPINOS, IF NOT THE GOVERNMENT," THE SENATOR SAID.

THE CONSUMER'S WELFARE IN TERMS OF FAIR PRICES FOR PETROLEUM PRODUCTS, AND THE NATIONAL INTEREST IN TERMS OF TAX COMPLIANCE AND FOREIGN EXCHANGE REMITTANCES MUST THEREFORE BE PROTECTED, HE SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) KYODO - A GOVERNMENT ADVISORY PANEL TOOK A STEP TOWARD LOWERING THE LEGAL BARRIER SEPARATING THE BANKING AND SECURITIES BUSINESSES FRIDAY BY ADOPTING A PRELIMINARY REPORT ON HOW TO CARRY OUT FINANCIAL REFORMS.

THE REPORT, APPROVED BY THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COUNCIL, AN ADVISORY BODY TO THE FINANCE MINISTER, CALLS FOR ALLOWING BANKS AND BROKERAGE HOUSES TO ENTER EACH OTHERS' FIELDS VIA SUBSIDIARIES, AND FOR REGULATING COMMERCIAL PAPER AND OTHER SECURITIZED ASSETS UNDER THE EXISTING LAW GOVERNING SECURITIES TRANSACTIONS.

BUT THE REPORT SUGGESTS BANKS SHOULD NOT FOR THE TIME BEING BE ALLOWED TO UNDERTAKE BROKERAGE SERVICES FOR STOCK TRADING BY MEANS OF THEIR SUBSIDIARIES, APPARENTLY IN RESPONSE TO OPPOSITION FROM SMALL- AND MEDIUM-SIZED BROKERAGE HOUSES.

IT ALSO CALLS FOR CREATING LEGAL MEASURES DESIGNED TO SEPARATE BANKS AND THEIR BROKERAGE UNITS SO THAT INDIVIDUALS IN BROKERAGE SUBSIDIARIES CANNOT OBTAIN INSIDE INFORMATION FROM THOSE IN THEIR PARENT FIRMS, TO PREVENT UNFAIR TRADING.

THE REPORT CAME AS A RESULT OF YEARLONG STUDIES BY TWO SUBPANELS ATTACHED TO THE ADVISORY GROUP, IN WHICH A REVIEW OF ARTICLE 65 OF THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE LAW HAS PROVIDED A MAJOR FOCUS. THE ARTICLE, MODELED ON THE U.S. GLASS-STEAGALL ACT OF 1933, HAS SEPARATED THE BANKING AND BROKERAGE INDUSTRIES SINCE THE END OF WORLD WAR II.

THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COUNCIL WILL SUBMIT THE REPORT TO FINANCE MINISTER RYUTARO HASHIMOTO NEXT MONDAY, PROVIDING MOMENTUM TO SWEEPING FINANCIAL REFORMS EYED BY THE FINANCE MINISTRY IN RESPONSE TO THE ONGOING GLOBALIZATION OF FINANCIAL MARKETS.

ACCORDING TO MINISTRY OFFICIALS, THE REPORT WILL SERVE, ALONG WITH A REPORT PRESENTED EARLIER BY THE FINANCIAL SYSTEM RESEARCH COMMITTEE, ANOTHER ADVISORY PANEL TO THE FINANCE MINISTER, AS THE BASIS FOR A PACKAGE OF ADMINISTRATIVE MEASURES TO IMPLEMENT SUCH REFORMS.

THE MINISTRY REPORTEDLY PLANS TO CARRY OUT THE REFORMS IN APRIL 1993.

THE TWO NEW TYPES OF MMC -- ONE OFFERED IN MINIMUM UNITS OF 1 MILLION YEN AND THE OTHER IN MINIMUM UNITS OF 3 MILLION YEN -- WILL CARRY RATES SET BY MULTIPLYING THE AVERAGE LARGE-LOT TIME DEPOSIT RATE BY A FACTOR OF 0.80 TO 0.94, ACCORDING TO THEIR MATURITIES, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

THE MULTIPLIER WILL VARY ACCORDING TO THE MINIMUM UNIT OF THE MMCS. FOR INSTANCE, THE RATE ON THREE-MONTH MMCS OFFERED IN UNITS OF LESS THAN 3 MILLION YEN WILL BE DETERMINED BY MULTIPLYING THE AVERAGE LARGE-DENOMINATION TIME DEPOSIT RATE BY 0.80, WHILE THOSE OFFERED IN UNITS OF 3 MILLION YEN OR MORE WILL BE SET BY MULTIPLYING THAT RATE BY 0.85.

UNDER THE NEW FORMULA, MMC RATES WILL BE REVIEWED EVERY WEEK INSTEAD OF EVERY MONTH AS AT PRESENT, THEY SAID.

MMCS ARE CURRENTLY AVAILABLE IN MINIMUM UNITS OF 1 MILLION YEN, WITH MATURITIES RANGING FROM THREE MONTHS TO THREE YEARS, BEARING RATES LINKED TO CERTIFICATE OF DESPOSIT (CD) RATES.

BUT RATES ON MMCS MATURING IN TWO YEARS OR LESS ARE REQUIRED TO BE KEPT AT LEVELS BELOW THE RATE ON THREE-YEAR MMCS, WHICH IS SET 0.7 PERCENTAGE POINT BELOW THE COUPON ON 10-YEAR GOVERNMENT BONDS.

THIS REQUIREMENT WILL BE ABOLISHED WITH THE INTRODUCTION OF THE NEW RATE-SETTING FORMULA, BRINGING MMC RATES CLOSER TO REGULATION-FREE MONEY MARKET RATES, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

THE LATEST DECISION CAME AS PART OF THE MINISTRY'S EFFORTS TO RELAX REGULATIONS ON BANK DEPOSIT RATES AMID GROWING PRESSURE FROM THE UNITED STATES TO LIBERALIZE IN THIS AREA.

CURRENTLY, ABOUT 70 PERCENT OF THE DEPOSITS AT THE NATION'S 12 MAJOR COMMERCIAL BANKS, AND ROUGHLY 50 PERCENT OF THOSE AT SMALLER BANKS, HAVE BEEN DEREGULATED THE OFFICIALS SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) KYODO - A LEADING PRIVATE THINK TANK SAID FRIDAY TIGHTER CREDIT CONDITIONS ARE DISCOURAGING CAPITAL SPENDING IN THE PRIVATE SECTOR IN JAPAN.

MITSUBISHI RESEARCH INSTITUTE INC., A RESEARCH ARM OF MITSUBISHI BANK, SAID IN A REPORT THAT CURRENT HIGH INTEREST RATES WILL REMAIN UNCHANGED FOR THE TIME BEING GIVEN THE STEEP RATE OF GROWTH IN THE MONEY SUPPLY AND A CONTINUED LABOR SHORTAGE.

A SERIES OF HIKES BY THE BANK OF JAPAN IN THE OFFICIAL DISCOUNT RATE TO 5.25 PERCENT WILL REDUCE BY AROUND 2.1 PERCENTAGE POINTS THE GROWTH RATE IN PRIVATE CAPITAL SPENDING IN 1990. IT HAS POSTED DOUBLE-DIGIT INCREASES FOR THREE CONSECUTIVE YEARS.

THE CENTRAL BANK HAS RAISED THE KEY RATE FOUR TIMES SINCE MAY 1989 TO FIGHT A REKINDLING OF INFLATION DUE MAINLY TO A DECLINE IN THE VALUE OF THE YEN AGAINST THE U.S. DOLLAR. THE LATEST FULL PERCENTAGE POINT HIKE TO 5.25 PERCENT TOOK PLACE ON MARCH 20.

THE TIGHTER CREDIT IS HITTING MAINLY SMALLER ENTERPRISES WHICH DEPEND MORE ON LOANS FROM BANKS, THE REPORT SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) KYODO - THE UNITED STATES HAS URGED JAPAN TO INCREASE THE ISSUE OF PROJECT-FINANCING GOVERNMENT BONDS TO BOOST PUBLIC SPENDING DRASTICALLY, JAPANESE OFFICIALS SAID FRIDAY.

THE U.S. REQUEST CAME IN THE LATEST ROUND OF BILATERAL TALKS IN HAWAII LAST MONTH UNDER THE STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII), YEARLONG BILATERAL CONSULTATIONS AIMED AT ELIMINATING STRUCTURAL BARRIERS TO TRADE AND INVESTMENT AND RECTIFYING THE 49 BILLION DOLLAR U.S. TRADE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN IN 1989, THE OFFICIALS TOLD KYODO NEWS SERVICE.

ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIALS, THE U.S. RAISED THE QUESTION BY SAYING THAT TOKYO SHOULD EXPAND PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING "WITHOUT TAX REVENUES."

THE OFFICIALS SAID THE U.S. REQUEST CONSTITUTES INTERFERENCE IN JAPAN'S DOMESTIC AFFAIRS BECAUSE IT WOULD LIMIT THE JAPANESE GOVERNMENT'S FREEDOM IN SETTING FISCAL POLICY, BESIDES RUNNING COUNTER TO EFFORTS TO SLASH OUTSTANDING GOVERNMENT BONDS TO REBUILD THE DEBT-STRAPPED NATIONAL FINANCES.

UNDER THE WEIGHT OF SNOWBALLING DEBT-FINANCING GOVERNMENT BONDS ISSUED TO COVER REVENUE SHORTFALLS, THE FINANCE MINISTRY HAS FINANCED PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING TOTALLY WITH PROJECT-FINANCING BONDS IN RECENT YEARS.

"WE MUST STICK TO THE IDEA OF COVERING PART OF PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING WITH TAX REVENUES. THEY HAVE NO RIGHT TO SPEAK OF THE SOURCE OF SUCH SPENDING " A SENIOR MINISTRY OFFICIAL SAID ON CONDITION OF ANONYMITY.

IN THE SII DISCUSSIONS, U.S. OFFICIALS HAVE ASKED JAPAN TO BOOST ITS PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING TO 9 PERCENT OF ITS GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT (GNP) OVER A FIVE-YEAR PERIOD AND TO 10 PERCENT OVER A 10-YEAR PERIOD.

WASHINGTON SAYS INCREASING PUBLIC SPENDING WOULD CREATE MORE OPPORTUNITIES FOR U.S. COMPANIES TO SELL GOODS TO JAPAN AND HELP REDUCE ITS MASSIVE TRADE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN.

JAPAN HAS AGREED IN PRINCIPLE TO INCREASE ITS PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING, BUT STRONGLY REJECTED A U.S. REQUEST THAT IT SPECIFY THE PERCENTAGE OF SUCH OUTLAYS TO GNP IN A FINAL REPORT ON THE SII DUE NEXT MONTH.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY (JUNE 15) KYODO - JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES AGREED FRIDAY TO WORK TOGETHER ON ENCOURAGING GREATER USE OF U.S. PARTS IN CARS BUILT BY JAPANESE COMPANIES, BOTH IN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES, OFFICIALS SAID.

THE AGREEMENT CAME AT A MEETING OF HIGH-LEVEL TRADE OFFICIALS HERE THAT LASTED FROM THURSDAY AFTERNOON THROUGH EARLY DAWN ON FRIDAY, PROTRACTED BY DEBATE OVER U.S. DEMANDS THAT STUDIES BE MADE ON PRICES AND OTHER MARKET CONDITIONS, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

UNDER THE ACCORD, TOKYO AND WASHINGTON WILL LAUNCH A WIDE-RANGING ACTION PROGRAM TO HELP PROMOTE COOPERATION BETWEEN JAPANESE AUTOMAKERS AND U.S. PARTS SUPPLIERS IN THE DESIGN AND DEVELOPMENT OF AUTO PARTS, THEY SAID.

THE MARKET-ORIENTED COOPERATION PROGRAM (MOCP) ALSO CALLS FOR MORE USE OF U.S. PARTS IN CARS BUILT BY JAPANESE AUTOMAKERS IN THE UNITED STATES AND STIPULATES THAT A SYSTEM BE ESTABLISHED TO GIVE U.S. PARTS MAKERS ACCESS TO INFORMATION ABOUT BUSINESS PLANS OF THE JAPANESE MAKERS, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

UNDER THE PROGRAM, ACTUAL DATA ON JAPANESE PURCHASES OF U.S. AUTO PARTS WILL ALSO BE REVIEWED EVERY SIX MONTHS AS A FOLLOW-UP ON PROGRESS UNDER THE AGREEMENT, THEY NOTED.

J. MICHAEL FARREN, U.S. COMMERCE UNDERSECRETARY FOR INTERNATIONAL TRADE, EXPRESSED SATISFACTION WITH THE AGREEMENT, SAYING THAT IT SHOULD SERVE AS AN INFLUENTIAL TOOL TO WIDEN U.S. ACCESS TO JAPAN'S AUTO PARTS MARKET.

SPEAKING AT A PRESS CONFERENCE FOLLOWING THE BILATERAL TRADE TALKS, FARREN PARTICULARY HAILED THE ACCORD FOR CALLING FOR STUDIES ON PARTS PRICE DIFFERENTIALS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND JAPAN AS WELL AS ON BUSINESS PRACTICES IN THE JAPANESE AUTO INDUSTRY.

THE JAPANESE REPORTEDLY OPPOSED CONDUCTING SUCH STUDIES AS SIMILAR ONES HAVE ALREADY BEEN TAKEN UP UNDER THE SO-CALLED STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII), SWEEPING BILATERAL TALKS AIMED AT ELIMINATING STRUCTURAL BARRIERS TO RECTIFY THE TRADE IMBALANCE BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES.

TOKYO (JUNE 15) KYODO - THE JUSTICE MINISTRY HAS DECIDED TO SET UP A COORDINATION BODY BETWEEN PUBLIC PROSECUTORS AND THE FAIR TRADE COMMISSION (FTC) TO GIVE GREATER EFFECT TO ENFORCEMENT OF THE ANTIMONOPOLY LAW, MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID FRIDAY.

THE DECISION IS IN LINE WITH A U.S. REQUEST MADE IN THESTRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENT INITIATIVE (SII) TALKS, THEY SAID.

THE PUBLIC PROSECUTORS' OFFICE WILL BE ASKED TO PASS ON TO THE FTC ANY INFORMATION IT MAY HAVE ABOUT VIOLATIONS OF THE LAW, SINCE, UNDER CURRENT LEGISLATION, THE RIGHT TO PROSECUTE ANTIMONOPOLY CASES IS GRANTED TO THE FTC, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

THE U.S. HAS URGED JAPAN TO SUBSTANTIALLY STRENGTHEN ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW, BY INCREASING THE FTC STAFF AND BUDGET AND SEEKING MORE PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS.

KYOTO (JUNE 18) KYODO - A 9-YEAR-OLD BOY REMAINED IN STABLE CONDITION SATURDAY MORNING AFTER UNDERGOING AN OPERATION LASTING 13 AND A HALF HOURS IN WHICH HE RECEIVED PART OF HIS FATHER'S LIVER.

BUT DOCTORS AT THE KYOTO UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL WERE CAUTIOUS ABOUT THE SUCCESS OF JAPAN'S SECOND PARENT-TO-CHILD LIVER TRANSPLANT OPERATION, SAYING THEY ''JUST FINISHED ONLY ONE STAGE OF WORK.''

THEY EXPRESSED CONCERN ABOUT THE BOY'S POSSIBLE REJECTION OF THE TRANSPLANT, WHICH COULD ARISE WITHIN THE NEXT THREE MONTHS. HE HAS TO REGAIN THE LEVEL OF FITNESS TO MAINTAIN IMMUNITY TO INFECTION BEFORE HE CAN LEAVE HOSPITAL, DOCTORS SAID.

THE BOY, WHO NEEDED THE OPERATION TO OVERCOME A CHRONIC LIVER MALFUNCTION DUE TO A GENETIC BLOCKED GALLBLADDER DUCT, IS BEING KEPT ON AN ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATOR TO REDUCE THE BURDEN ON HIS LUNGS, THEY SAID.

THE FATHER, A 37-YEAR-OLD COMPANY EMPLOYEE, WHO DONATED ALMOST ONE-QUARTER OF HIS LIVER TO HIS AILING ELDEST SON, WAS WELL ENOUGH TO TALK AFTER THE OPERATION, WHICH LASTED FROM FRIDAY MORNING UNTIL LATE IN THE NIGHT. THE FAMILY'S IDENTITY IS NOT BEING DISCLOSED.

THE 39-MEMBER TRANSPLANT TEAM INTENDS TO MOVE THE BOY, A FOURTH-GRADER AT ELEMENTARY SCHOOL, FROM AN INTENSIVE CARE UNIT TO A NORMAL HOSPITAL WARD AS EARLY AS MONDAY AFTER CONFIRMING HIS IMMUNITY TO INFECTION.

THE TRANSPLANT FRIDAY FOLLOWED A SIMILAR OPERATION LAST NOVEMBER IN WHICH ANOTHER FATHER DONATED PART OF HIS LIVER TO HIS BABY SON AT SHIMANE MEDICAL UNIVERSITY. THE KYOTO TRANSPLANT WAS THE 12TH KNOWN OPERATION IN THE WORLD USING A TECHNIQUE PIONEERED BRAZIL IN 1988.

FROM THE BEARS:

SURESH BHIRUD, chief investment strategist at OPPENHEIMER & CO., says that the market is "in for rough sledding over the next couple of months as companies are going to report terrible earnings."

He believes that earnings disappointments for the second quarter could be more widespread, based on evidence that economic weakness "is almost in all sectors. S&P 500 earnings for the quarter are likely to be 15% to 20% lower than a year earlier. (WSJ, 6/15)

STOCK MARKET:

Yesterday's market bounced back after a sharp morning sell-off triggered by a drop in DIGITAL EQUIPMENT CORP.'s stock on poor earnings news and index arbitrage sell programs.

"The market's ability to come back from the sell-off shows that it has good resilience," says LARRY WACHTEL of PRUDENTIAL-BACHE SECURITIES INC. He was also encouraged that the Digital Equipment news did not cause the high-technology group to come down with it. ("Investor's Daily", 6/15)

"Once we get beyond today ... [even] if we get a good CPI number, we're back to focusing on earnings and earnings stink," says CHARLES COMER, market strategist for C.L. GLOBAL PARTNERS who describes himself as "not too bullish intermediate term."

Comer is concerned that consensus earnings estimates for the second half of 1990 are much too high and looks for an earnings induced correction back to the 2800 level. "That's assuming we don't go too much higher ... perhaps the higher we go the harder we fall because of built in expectations if you get up to 3100, 3200." If the market moved that high, Comer says the pullback could be to 2500. (CNBC "World Business", 6/15)

"A lot of investors don't want to be caught in the maelstrom, whether it's up or down," says MICHAEL METZ of OPPENHEIMER & CO. "Stocks appear satiated for the moment. Investors have got to digest recent gains." (NYT, 6/15)

"A lot of institutions are on the sidelines, for fear of getting into the market," says CHRISTOPHER PEDERSEN, head of trading at TWENTY-FIRST SECURITIES. (WSJ, 6/15)

"There's sort of a boredom that's set into the market," says PIPER, JAFFRAY & HOPWOOD analyst THEODORE HALLIGAN. "People have gotten hesitant. They're waiting for some great event to happen." ("USA Today", 6/15)

"The Wall Street Journal" reports that the Nikkei's surprise rebound is bringing the bulls back to the Tokyo market. "The Japanese market will recover its peaks eventually," says SHOJI YAMADA, Tokyo-based general manager and chief investment officer of YASUDA TRUST & BANKING CO. "But it's not easy for the market to change to a bull sentiment after the crash. It will take a year and a half or more." (WSJ, 6/15)

STOCK TIPS:

Suffering from California real-estate jitters WELLS FARGO BANK finished down 3 3/8 at $78 1/4 yesterday. Despite it's dips, Wells Fargo remains the darling of many analysts.

JAMES McDERMOTT of KEEFE BRUYETTE & WOODS says that Wells Fargo remains "one of the best banks in the country." JOAN GOODMAN of Chicago's PERSHING & CO. says, "I absolutely adore the stock." It "has first-rate management ... and it has gotten all of its Latin American loans off its books." ("USA Today", 6/15)

MEDICAL CARE INTERNATIONAL INC., a cheaper health-care alternative than hospitals, is the "Stock of the Week" in "Investor's Daily." The Dallas-based outpatient surgery chain has seen five consecutive quarters of earnings growth of 50% or better, and analysts are looking for more healthy numbers in coming quarters.

Analyst CRAIG DICKSON of RAUSCHER PIERCE REFSNES INC. says, "Investors are being extremely cautious about investing only in companies with good numbers. Medical Care is going to have very good numbers." ("Investor's Daily", 6/15)
